Messrs. F. W. Woolworth Co. Ltd.

Gentlemen:—

In company with Mr. W. Thatcher, Architect, and otner gemtlenen connected with your Company, I have to-day made an examination of your store building, 377 George St., Peterborough, and beg to report as follows:—

I find that the building appears to be perfectly sound from basement to third floor.

The foundation is of well-built stone and appears, to be not less than 20 inches thick, amd beam-filled at first floor joists. The joists are 2" x 12", laid 14 inches apart and bridged. The extreme clear span is 20 feet.

I found no indications of subsidence in any of the walls or floors.

I did not examine the roof except from inside but saw no sag or break in the ceiling under it.

The building is closely build up to on both sides by substantial buildings and no cracks are visible on the front wall which is supported on cast iron pillars.

I have no hesitation in certifying that the whole building appears to be in good condition.

Yours truly,
Sgd.) T: A. S. HAY,
Building Inspector.

THE MEN FROM THE WEST.

THE MEN from the west, who addressed the banquet of farmers at the Oriental on Saturday, displayed that buoyant assurance and optimism which is characteristic of the Provinces from which they came. Out west the air is finer, pulses beat faster and prospects are always rosy—or to be more correct, golden. "Golden" is not merely the color of the grain which appeals to the poet, it is rather the color of the metal which the grain will bring. Those who work the land out west are no longer farmers, but "grain-growers," and grain means gold. The speakers were very frank upon this point, they made it very plain that what they were after was the almighty dollar, and further, that they had made up their mind that no one else was going to get a share in their profits. Their object is to form the whole of the west into one vast co-operative society, which will absorb and subdue everything that looks like individualism. So far this movement has been very successful and has been the means of securing for the farmers—or the grain-growers, many reforms which were necessary for their full development. So that to-day they have little to complain about, except that they want to make still larger profits. The mission of these grain-growers' representatives to Ottawa was to plead for free-wheat, and for the reduction of the profits of every other business but their own.

There were many interesting points brought out by the speakers and the farmers of this district will weigh many of them in their minds. The reference to the closer union of east and west was particularly interesting and introduces a question which ought to be considered by all those who have the united progress of the Dominion at heart. The west cannot go forward without the east, they are both independent—or at least, should be. There is no need for the removal of the tariff against American trade. This would defeat the very end the speakers seemed so eager to attain. It would practically mean the complete severance of the east from the west and the coupling up of the Prairie Provinces with the United States. Would the grain-grower come east when he can go south for less money? Not as he is at present constituted, he is after the best bargain. He would not buy his implements from Ontario if he could get them as cheaply from the bumptious Yankee, who comes over the line on equal terms with the more straight-forward traveller from Ontario. The tendency of this movement is to become self-centred. It was started for self-protection and it has doubtless done good work, but now that the grain-growers have acquired a fair share of justice, there is a danger of them becoming insular and denying others a share in this justice and prosperity which they have so nobly fought for and won. Let the east join hands with the west, not only in sentiment, but in considering each others' best interests. Canada has made the west, and Canada, which includes Ontario and Quebec, must reap the harvest which she has sown.

CHRISTMAS IN THE OLD LAND.

MANY NEW CANADIANS, who made up their minds to spend Christmas in the old country, are by this time back in their old haunts and enjoying a reunion with old friends. They will doubtless find many changes, not only in their homes, but in themselves. A few years and even a few months, may work great alterations. In the political world there has arisen much strife within the last few years in Great Britain. Home Rule is threatening the peace of Ireland and the labor trouble in Dublin has been a long-drawn out conflict which, but for the strong arm of the law, might have developed into a revolution. Then there are other more or less serious labor troubles in England. The Postmen, it is said, have threatened to paralyze the Christmas service if the Postmaster-General does not concede their demands. But there is not much liklihood of such extreme measures being taken, as Mr. Samuels has threatened to permanently dismiss every man who deserts the service. The land question raised by Mr. Lloyd George, is somewhat in abeyance. The Suffragettes are recuperating, or possibly planning a surprise Santa Claus visit down Mr. Asquith's chimney.

To those who do not know England, all this unrest may appear to be a bad sign for the Old Country. But to those who know England from within, it is a healthy sign. It is a sign of the advance of democracy. The people of Great Britain have fought every step of their way to the freedom they enjoy and when it has been won it has been appreciated far more than by those people who have got their liberties for nothing. Canada being a new country, has not had time to breed the many social problems which beset the Old Country. The United States are coming into their own in this respect. The "land of Liberty" is beginning to feel a little more sympathy for older countries as she realizes that these social and political troubles are the common inheritance of the race.

But at this season of the year there comes a lull in the strife and a truce is naturally agreed upon. Peace and good will creep into the hearts of the combatants and they forget their differences in remembering that they are, after all, brothers. Dickens, the great novelist of British democracy, shows in his "Christmas Carol" how the various classes are linked together in a bond of family affection at the Christmas season. That despite the many sorrows of the poor, they have their joys too, and these are by no means inferior to the elaborate festivities of the upper classes. We have no upper and lower classes in Canada—at least we pretend we have not—but humanity is so diverse that a division is bound to come. But at this season of the year we must all bend a little or we will not see the babe, wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in the manger which is the Saviour Christ the Lord.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SIR WILFRID said that his one regret was that he had not learned the German language. It might have supplied him with more expletives after such defeats as Chateauguay. Ach! der Teufel!

NEWFOUNDLAND to a great many people is only known as the place which once supplied us with dogs of that name. It is generally regarded as a kind of prodigal country, which was lost and found.

A REPORT says that Mrs. Pankhurst, in her flight to Paris, has had a rough sea passage and is very weak. This proves that fasting is no good to prevent sea-sickness. Even the elements have no mercy upon this dear lady martyr.

IN WISHING his congregation a Happy Christmas-tide, last evening, one of our ministers added:—"I trust that Santa Claus will find you all out." If the reverend gentleman was not known to be one of the kindest of men, his words might have been misconstrued.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON has received from 453 clergymen a request to be authorized to have public prayers in their churches for peaceful settlement of the issue between Ulster and the rest of Ireland. If both sides believed hard enough in prayer it would not take long to settle their differences.

"SPUDS" has always been one of the Irishman's pet names for "praties" and the Englishman's nick-name for potatoes. But it seems the name belongs to the timber used for uprights which anchor the dredges in position when they are at work. The local collector of customs at St. John, N.B., wired Ottawa, explaining that two carloads of spuds were required for immediate use on the dredges and asking that permission be given to waive the inspection. To-day the reply came: "Deliver potatoes to dredges. No fear of infection."

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

A Misplaced Blow.

Montreal Herald.

A convict at Kingston says that a guard hit him in the tub. We don't wonder he told the commissioner about it.

A Doubtful Change.

Hamilton Herald.

The elimination of the entrance examinations will make it hard for public school principals in one way, and for high school teachers in another way. We doubt if the change will make for efficiency.

The Smile of Providence.

Hamilton Herald.

Sir Wilfrid claims that Providence smiles on the Liberal party because times were prosperous while that party was dominant. But has not Sir Wilfrid learned that whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth?

Proof From Canada.

The London Graphic.

If certain political exigencies do not capture the position, it is clear that the vamped-up pessimism of a few years ago is going out of fashion. The latest proof comes from Canada, where Dr. Horning is reported in the Peterborough Review (Ont.), edited by our contributor, Mr. Lewis Milligan, to have said: "The Englishman is the finest business man in the world. I believe in the Englishman. I have no patience with those who speak of England as decadent and dying. She is very much alive. England to-day is a model of progress and democracy for even the democratic States and Canada as well."

The Bi-lingual Question.

Toronto News.

Rev. Mr. O'Gorman and The Catholic Record have earned the displeasure of the Ultramontanes of Quebec by their attitude with respect to bi-lingual schools. La Verite says that they have joined forces with "the fanatical persecutors of the French language in Ontario." The Association Canadienne Francaise d'Education d'Ontario is quite as bitter in its verbose answer to Mr. O'Gorman and The Record. The old idea that the Church is a "superior, and divine society," and, therefore, cannot be submitted to the laws of the State appears in this remarkable rejoinder.

Was It the Devil?

From John Bull.

A few more revolutions of the wheels of the engine which was taking us on Tuesday, last week, to Geneva, and we should not now have been editing this journal. We had settled down in the sleeping car, in peace with all mankind, when, as we approached Melun, forty minutes from Paris, we were suddenly jerked out of our berth, as the train violently came to a standstill—in obedience to the signals of a dozen lamps waved across the lines, by frantic messengers who bore the tale of a terrible catastrophe less than a mile ahead! It was the old, old story—signals passed, and two trains in collision. And there, almost in front of us, lay a mass of burning wreckage and writhing humanity. And in the midst of it all priests prated of the love of God, whilst ordinary men and women flung themselves into the flames to rescue the sufferers—for love of mankind. Said a fellow passenger to us, "We have had a Providential escape." We! Twenty honest postal clerks burnt to ashes! He, a wholesale jeweller— and we—well, never mind about ourselves. Verily, God "moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform"! God? It was the work of the Devil!

THE SUMMONS

By John Kendrick Bangs,
In Collier's Weekly.

Now come the Christmas chimes to summon me,
From sluggish ease and cynic thoughts of doubt,
To deeds of kindly Opportunity
That on all sides of us now lie about;
To spread the Gospel of Good Will to all,
To sing the songs of Peace upon the mart,
And fill with spirit of high festival
To overflowing every human heart.
To carry hope to hopeless ones, and ease
The sufferings of grievous helplessness;
To carry joy to those whose miseries
Have plunged them in a maelstrom of distress;
To lavish Light on Darkness, drying tears;
To enter into homes of them that grieve,
And with the touch of sympathy the fears
Of brothers in affliction dread relieve.
That is the song those Christmas chimes ring forth!
That is the summons sent to those who hear,
Borne on the crispy air from out the north
Upon this morn so thrilling in its cheer.
Let him who hath of his possessions spend
Not stores of gold, but Love in fullest play—
He wins the greatest treasure in the end
Who LIVES as well as GIVES his Christmas Day!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

REPLY TO THE STAR

To the Editor of The Review:
Sir,—

The Toronto Star disputes my statement that Labor has abandoned Liberalism in Britain. The Star however is very mild about it, and probably at the time the article was written The Star had not seen The Globe's statement that if Labor wanted to beat out Liberalism it was going the right way about it. But what is the use of denying it? Does not the Labor party in parliament in Britain conclusively demonstrate the fact? But The Star realises that the reason for it is the serious part of it. Let us come up to the question once more. Originally industry was carried on in private houses. There were no machines. The introduction of machines meant the hiving of people in factory centres and if the factory owner was to make full use of his new and magnificent opportunities he could only do so by depriving the farmer of his high prices. He began to bawl loudly for Free Trade. The word "free" caught the public fancy. "Cheap food" was surely a goal worth striving for. But how has it all worked out? The free or unprotected workingman soon became the victim of the man with capital who readily found a way also to put the wives and children (even as young as 5 years old) in factories in competition with the husbands and fathers themselves. And awful as all this was and is, nevertheless Trade continued to expand. Of course it would. But what has that in it to justify the sacrifice of humanity to the god of money? As years rolled by the condition of the worker grew desperate and by all sorts of means he contrived to improve that condition. He resorted to strikes and various other forms of disorder. He has come at last to the age of Order. He asks for regulation. Now Regulation is the very opposite of freedom, whether of trade or labor competition. That is the reason of the present day breakaway from Liberalism. Liberalism has thriven on freedom, the freedom of the capitalist to do as he likes with the man without money: The day of Liberalism is done. Control, Regulation, in the interests of ALL the people is the order of the present day. It is only recently that the public ownership of public utilities was tolerated at all. Men still living and in active life regarded such a theory as robbery of vested interests. But we are learning The people are learning. The stride of humanity away from the free labor market (really the slave labor market) of Liberalism has been as sudden and overwhelming as the ebb of the sea. Let The Star take note. Liberalism put the people in the grip of the capitalist. It took the land from the farmer and the people in Britain. It will have to absorb some spirit of common sense if it is to continue to do business. At least that is the way it appears.

Yours truly
J. H. Burnham.

What Is the Cause of the High Cost of Living?

To the Editor, Review;
Sir,—

It may be news to you that in The Graphic, Nov. 29, 1913, there is a reference to your report of remarks by Dr. Horning.

May I observe in considering your editorial this evening, that the market in the great industrial districts of Britain is so large that the large producer can afford to sell cheaper than where the produce is provided? New Zealand exports certain products because of great progress in producing and perhaps because of its British currency, (English money). I consider the high cost of living, if it exists, as due to the want of poor laws and our policy of driving away the casual laboring class. Unless one has an auto it is a bad look-out.

Yours truly,
A READER.

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By HAROLD MacGRATH

[Copyright, 1912, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.]

"We shan't, my child. Our midnight friend wasn't digging yonder for faded keepsakes. These papers are the things." The admiral cut the string and opened one of the documents. "H'm! Written in French. So is this," looking at another, "and this. Here, Laura, cast your eye over these and tell us why some one was hunting for them."

Fitzgerald eyed Breitmann thoughtfully. The whole countenance of the man had changed. Indeed, it resembled another face he had seen somewhere, and it grew in his mind, slowly, but surely, as dawn grows, that Breitmann was not wholly ignorant in this affair. He had not known who had been working at night, but that dizziness of the moment gone, the haste in opening the case, the eagerness of the search last night—all these, to Fitzgerald's mind, pointed to one thing—Breitmann knew.

"I shall watch him."

Laura read the documents to herself first. Here and there was a word which confused her, but she gathered the full sense of the remarkable story. Her eyes shone like winter stars.

"Father!" she cried, dropping the papers and spreading out her arms. "Father, it's the greatest thing in the world. A treasure!"

"What's that, Laura?" straining his ears.

"A treasure, hidden by the soldiers of Napoleon, put together franc by franc in the hope of some day rescuing the emperor from St. Helena. It is romance! A real treasure of two millions of francs!" clapping her hands.

"Where?" It was Breitmann who spoke. His voice was not clear.

"Corsica!"

"Corsica!" The admiral laughed like a child. Right under his very nose all these years and he cruising all over the chart! "Laura, dear, there's no reason in the world why we shouldn't take the yacht and go and dig up this pretty sum."

"No reason in the world!" But the secretary did not pronounce these words aloud.

"A telegram for you, sir," said the butler, handing the yellow envelope to Fitzgerald.

"Will you pardon me?" he said, drawing off to a window.

"Go ahead," said the admiral, fingering the medal of the Legion of Honor.

Fitzgerald read:

"Have made inquiries. Your man never applied to any of the metropolitan dailies. Few ever heard of him."

He jammed the message into a pocket and returned to the group about the case. Where should he begin? Breitmann had lied.

The story itself was brief enough, but there was plenty of husk to the grain. The old expatriate was querulous, long winded, not niggard with his ink when he cursed the English and damned the Prussians, and he obtained much gratification in jabbing his quill bodkin into what he termed the sniveling nobility of the old regime. Dog of dogs! Was he not himself noble? Had not his parents and his brothers gone to the guillotine with the rest of them? But he, thank God, had no wooden mind. He could look progress and change in the face and follow their bent. And now all the crimes and heroisms of the revolution, all the glorious pageantry of the empire, had come to nothing. A Bourbon, thick skulled, sordid, worn out, again sat upon the throne, while the great man languished on a rock in the Atlantic. Fools that they had been not to have hidden the little king of Rome as against this very dog! It was pitiful. He never saw a shower in June that he did not hail curses upon it. To have lost Waterloo for a bucketful of water! Thousand thunders! Could he ever forget that terrible race back to Paris? Could he ever forget the shame of it? Grouchy for a fool and Blucher for a blundering ass. Well, they would soon tumble the Bourbons into oblivion again.

A rambling desultory tale. Just a little corporal from Corsica; think of it! And so on, all keyed with tremendous interest to the listeners and to Laura herself. It was the golden age of opportunity, of reward, of sudden generals, and princes and dukes. All gone, nothing left but a few battle flags. England no longer shaking in her boots, and the rest of them dividing the spoils. No; there were some left, and in their hands lay the splendid enterprise.

Quietly they had pieced together this sum and that, till there was now stored away 2,000,000 francs. Two or three frigates and a corvette or two; then the work would go forward. Only a little while to wait, and then they would bring their beloved chief back to France and to his own again. Had he not written "Come for me, men brave. They say they have orders to shoot me. Come, better carry my corpse away than that I should rot here for years to come." They would come. But this year went by and another. One by one the old guard died off, smaller and smaller had drawn the circle. The vile rock called Helena still remained impregnable.

On a certain day they came to tell him that the emperor was no more. Soon he was all alone but one. These brave soldiers who had planned with him were no more. An alien, an outcast, he too longed for night. And what should he do with it, this vast treasure, every franc of which meant sacrifice and unselfishness, bravery and loyalty? Let the gold rot. He would bury all knowledge of it in yonder chimney, confident that no one would ever find the treasure since he alone possessed the key to it, having buried it himself. So passed the greatest Caesar of them all, the most brilliant empire, the bravest army. Ah, had the king of Rome lived! Had there been some direct Napoleonic blood to take up the work! Vain dreams! The great man's brothers had been knaves and fools.

"And so tonight," the narrator ended, "I bury the casket in the chimney. Within it my hopes and few trinkets of the past, of which I am an integral part. Goodby, little glove; goodby, brave old medal! I am sending a drawing of the chimney to the good Abbe le Fanu. He will outlive me. He lives on forty centimes the day. The treasures mean nothing to him. His cry, his eternal cry is always of the people. He will probably tear it up. The brig will never come again. So best. Death will come soon. And I shall die unknown, unloved, forgotten. Good night!"

Mr. Donovan alone remained in normal state of mind. 'Twas all faradiddle, this talk of finding treasures. The old Frenchman had been only half baked. He dumped his tools into his bag and with the wisdom of his kind departed. There would be another job tomorrow, putting the bricks back.

The others, however, were for the time but children, and like children they all talked at once, and there was laughter and thumping of fists and clapping of hands. The admiral had a new plan every five minutes. He would do this or he would do that, and Fitzgerald would shake his head or Breitmann would point out the unfeasibility of the plan. Above all, he urged, there must be no publicity (with a flash toward Fitzgerald). The world must know nothing till the treasure was in their hands. Otherwise there would surely be piracy on the high seas. Two million francs was a prize, even in these days. There were plenty of men and plenty of tramp ships. Even when they found the gold secrecy would be best. There might be some difficulty with France. Close lips, then, till they returned to America. After that Mr. Fitzgerald would become famous as the teller of the exploit.

"I confess that for all my excitement," said Fitzgerald, "I am somewhat skeptical. Still, your suggestion, Mr. Breitmann, is good."

"Do you mean to say you doubt the existence of the treasure?" cried the admiral, something impatient.

"Oh, no doubt it once existed. But seventy-five or eighty years! There were others besides this refugee Frenchman. Who knows into what hands similar documents may have fallen?"

"And the unknown man who worked in the chimney?" put in the girl quietly.

"That simply proves what I say. He knows that this treasure once existed, but not where. Now, it is perfectly logical that some other man years ago might have discovered the same key as we have. He may have got away with it. The man might have plausibly declared that he had made the money somewhere. The sum is not so large as to create any wide comment."

"Ah, my boy, your father had more enthusiasm than that." The admiral looked reproachful.

"My dear admiral"—and Fitzgerald laughed in that light hearted way of his—"I would go into the heart of China on a treasure hunt for the mere fun of it. Enthusiasm! Nothing would gratify me more than to strike a shovel into the spot where this treasure—this pot of gold—is supposed to lie. It will be great sport; nothing like it. I was merely supposing. I have never heard of or come into contact with a man who has found a hidden treasure. I am putting up these doubts because we are never sure of anything. Why, Mr. Breitmann knows. Isn't it more fun to find a dollar in an old suit of clothes than to know you have ten in the suit you are wearing? It's not how much, it's the finding that gives the pleasure."

"That is true," echoed Breitmann generously. He fingered the papers with a touch that was almost a caress. "A pity that you will go to the arctic instead."

"I am not quite sure that I shall go," replied Fitzgerald. That this man had deliberately lied to him rendered him indecisive. For the present he could not do or say anything, but he had a great desire to be on hand to watch.

"You are not your father's son if you refuse to go with us." And the admiral sent home this charge with fist against palm.

"'Pieces of eight! Pieces of eight!'" parroted the girl drolly. "You will go, Mr. Fitzgerald."

"Do you really want me to?" cleverly putting the decision with her.

"Yes." There was no coquetry in voice or eyes.

"When do you expect to go?" Fitzgerald put this question to the admiral.

"As soon as we can coal up and provision."

"But crossing in the yacht," hesitated Fitzgerald. He wished to sound this man Breitmann. If he suggested obstacles and difficulties it would be a confirmation of the telegram and his own singular doubts.

"It is likely to be a rough passage," said Breitmann experimentally.

"He doesn't want me to go." Fitzgerald stroked his chin slyly.

"We have crossed the Atlantic twice in the yacht," Laura affirmed with a bit of pride—"once in March too, and a heavy sea half the way."

"Enter me as cabin boy or supercargo," said Fitzgerald. "If you don't you'll find a stowaway before two days out."

To be continued.

Woman's World

Miss Benton First Dining Car Conductor.

MISS CAROLYN MARIA BENTON.

Shuttling back and forth in a railroad train, keeping passengers in good humor and advising the traveler ignorant as to what to eat while a train is running sixty miles an hour, Miss Carolyn Maria Benton of Cincinnati, the first woman dining car conductor in America, happily earns her daily bread. She likes the work.

Miss Benton, who directs the buffet car which is operated by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railway between Cincinnati and Dayton, was put in the place as an experiment. Now she is a fixture, and the railroad is looking for more efficient young women who can run diners.

"It means application, attention, tact and diplomacy to run a dining car," said Miss Benton. "I do not believe there will be many women dining car conductors. They cannot stand the work. There is too much rush, and the constant traveling is hard on the nerves. Men stand the work better, but I don't think they can do the work better than a woman.

"Every morning I start at 11 o'clock for Dayton. In the evening I make the return trip. I serve luncheon on the morning train and supper at night. No, it's just supper. You see, this is a buffet car, not a regular diner, and we don't have the same facilities for cooking large quantities.

"I have all my evenings at home, and I do not believe I am nearly as tired, even with the shaking of the train, as I would be if I worked in an office or factory."

Just the Same.

"I met Dunkey to-day for the first time for years. He hasn't changed much."

"Oh, he hasn't changed at all, but doesn't seem to realize it."

"How do you mean?"

"Oh, he's forever talking about what a fool he used to be."—London Stray Stories.

Dramatic Note.

There's nothing makes a man feel queerer than to have his wife describe a play to him all wrong when he can't correct her because he told her he didn't go to it the night he worked late at the office.

A CURIOUS FEE.

The Barrister Might Have Sold the Bible Anyway.

When the Dominion Coal Co. was formed back in the early nineties a number of coal operators in Cape Breton were brought out. Among them was one man who was noted for his strong religious convictions. During the course of the negotiations he secured the good offices of the present Premier of Nova Scotia, Hon. G. H. Murray, who, besides representing Cape Breton in the Legislative Council, was also a member of the Government, to conduct the case for him. Though the purchase of this man's property was not necessary to the success of the deal, but Mr. Murray was able to have it included, and for it he obtained what was undoubtedly an excellent price.

After the deal was put through Mr. Murray was sitting in his room at the Halifax Hotel with a couple of friends, when the mine-owner was announced. The latter intimated that he had come to say good-bye to the lawyer, as he purposed leaving the country. He was profuse in his thanks for the service that Murray had rendered him, and, as he was taking his leave, produced a somewhat bulky parcel and handed it to him.

The future Premier's friends were naturally curious to know what was in the parcel, which looked very much like a thick wad of bank bills. To gratify their curiosity he opened it as soon as the man was gone, and to his astonishment unwrapped a Bible. One of his friends promptly picked it up, and taking it by the back, shook it vigorously to see if by any chance paper notes might be hidden among the leaves. But not a single bill dropped out. The mine-owner had confined his recognition of Mr. Murray's kindly offices on his behalf to the copy of the Scriptures, with Matthew vi., 19 and 20 marked. The verses read: "Lay not up for yourselves treasure upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal."

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

SMITH COUNCIL PASS BY-LAW

Downie Street is Extended Into Smith Township.

The members of the Municipal Council of the township of Smith, met in the County Council Chambers, Peterboro, in regular session. All members were present, with Reeve Garbutt in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

By-law No. 722 was passed, assuming that portion of Downie St., in the township of Smith, as a public highway, and the Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. LePlante to remove all obstructions.

By-law No. 720 was also passed establishing polling places and appointing Deputy Returning Officers ond Poll Clerks for 1914.

Moved by Mr. Telford, and Mr. Northey, that T. Cullen Jr., be allowed goods from the store to amount to eight dollars for the month of December.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McKee and Mr. Telford that the application of Mr. J. E. Kearney to cut brush and poles on the 15th Concession be left in the hands of Councillor Northey, with power to act.—Carried.

Messrs. Nelson and Clegg presented plans of sub-division of reserve as per registered plan No. 41, and asked council to approve of the same.

Reeve Garbutt promised to consider the matter and later it was decided to leave it over to be dealt with next meeting.

THESE ROBBERS LEFT THEIR MONEY

Much Gun Play in Vancouver Bank Without Success.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 22.—A gang of robbers Saturday morning entered the Robson street branch of the Bank of Ottawa of this city, but failed to get away with any money; in fact, they left a small souvenir in the shape of a $10 bill.

It was just after the bank opened at 10 o'clock, that two young men approached the teller's desk, and, pushing through a $10 note, asked for change. The teller reached for his cash and at the same moment each of the two men produced a revolver and commenced shooting. The teller ducked under the counter. The robbers fired five shots and tried to reach the bills, but could not do so. People in the neighborhood began to rush towards the bank and the robbers, still firing, started away. They escaped in the fog, which was heavy at the time. The bank still has the $10 bill brought in by the robbers.

LIKE EASTER IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Dec. 22.—With fair skies and a temperature in the fifties the Sunday before Christmas in this part of New England was more like Easter than a day close to the winter solstice. Whatever the remaining days of the month have in store, the total temperature for the year will stand as a record with something like 1.225 degrees of excess heat. Practically no ice has formed south of Vermont and New Hampshire state line, while the snow is scarce in the Northern Maine woods.

The ice dealers secured a meagre harvest last year and are already preparing to rely on artificial sources for their supply or to obtain it from New Hampshire and Maine.

IS GAGGED AND BOUND

Business Man Found Unconscious in Cellar

SAFE IS OPENED

But Little is Missing From the Premises

GUELPH, Dec. 22.—Tied hand and foot and effectively gagged, F. L. Barrett, president of the Barrett Dairy Co., Carden street, was found on Saturday afternon about 4.45 in an unconscious condition, lying on the floor of the boiler room of the dairy. He had been last seen at 11.30 on Friday night, and although the safe in the front office was found open, and a dinged-in hat was picked up nearby, no suspicions of foul play were aroused in the minds of the company's drivers when they came for their loads in the early morning. Mr. Barrett is frequently out of the city on business, so that his absence caused no particular anxiety.

So far as can be ascertained he was placing some papers in the safe, when he was felled by an unknown assailant and rendered unconscious. He has no idea of the identity of the man or men who attacked him.

He is a heavy man, and the distance from the point of the assault to the inner section of the cellar where he was first carried is considerable, therefore, it is practically certain that there must have been more than one assailant. It appears that he recovered consciousness some time after being attacked, but was unable to break the harness straps which securely found his arms behind his back, and his legs. He struggeld until he again became unconscious. Again recovering he succeeded in crawling out of the inner recess of the cellar to the boiler room, where he was found by Leonard Warrington, an employe of the dairy, who had gone into the cellar to fire up. The police were notified, a doctor was summoned, and Barrett, who had again lost consciousness, was removed to the hospital. Yesterday morning he regained consciousness, and is reported to be doing well. A few dollars appears to be all that is missing from the premises.

FARMER IS SLAIN BY ROBBERS

Daughter is Also Maltreated by Unknown Men.

FORT LAIN, N.Y., Dec. 22. — A crime that has aroused the countryside was discovered early yesterday morning, when Helen Barrett, 20 years old, succeeded in freeing herself from gag and ropes at her home, six miles west of Fort Lain, where, after she was attacked Saturday night, her father was murdered by a man or men in search of money. The victim was John Barrett, 60 years of age. He was clubbed and shot through the head. His money, a considerable sum, he had hidden behind a wall panel and it was untouched.

Helen Barrett was stunned by a blow of a club while reading, between nine and ten o'clock. She was gagged and bound and thrown into a small ante-room. Her father was slain when he came to her aid. The daughter did not know who committed the crime, and the authorities have had to work without a clue.

SIR JAMES IS UNWELL

Premier Whitney Confined to His Bed in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, is confined to his bed at the Hotel Manhattan, Madison avenue and Forty-second street, where he has been stopping since he arrived in this city from Washington several days ago. The Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, and Sir James' personal medical advisor, who is accompanying the Premier, was asked about the condition of his patient late last night, and he reported that Sir James was greatly improved. He said that Sir James was suffering from a nervous disorder, but would remain in New York until after the holidays.

Inquiry at the Parliament Buildings on Saturday elicited the following statement:

"Sir James Whitney was unable through pressure of business this year to take any vacation until a few weeks ago, when it became absolutely necessary for him to have a rest. He has spent the last couple of weeks in Washington, in company with the Hon. Dr. Pyne, and had intended to return to Toronto this week. On the return journey it was decided it would be better for him to remain over in New York for a time. Lady Whitney has joined him, and Sir James will, therefore, not be expected home before Christmas, although the reports as to his condition are reassuring."

"MONA LISA" ON SPECIAL TRAIN

Will Be Returned to Italian Government.

ROME, Dec. 22.—Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" arrived here Saturday from Florence escorted by Dr. Torado Ricci, director-general of fine art in Rome; Prof. Giovanni Poggi, director of museums in Florence and numerous officials. The train on which the picture was brought here was guarded along the entire route in the same manner as royal personages.

The painting was taken from the station to the ministry of fine arts, where it was inspected by the King of Italy and then consigned to Camille Barrere, French ambassador to Italy, who to-day, will return it to the Italian Government which is to place it on exhibition for three days. Afterwards the picture is to be on exhibition in Milan before being hand over definitely to the French authorities for transport to Paris where it is to be placed in the Louvre museum from which it was stolen by Vincenzo Perugia on Aug. 22, 1911.

Others In Theft.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—At the moment the "Mona Lisa" was officially restored to France, Magistrate Drioux, who has had the case under his charge since the painting disappeared from the Louvre, ordered the arrest of Vincente Lancelotti, Michele Lancelottie and Mme. Clamagirand, friends and neighbors in Paris of Vinvenzo Perugia, on information telegraphed from Florence by the French police official Vignol.

The Lancelotti brothers were denounced several days ago by another Italian as having been implicated with Perugia, and they are now charged with receiving and concealing the masterpiece.

Both Arms Broken.

GUELPH, Dec. 22.—One arm broken at the wrist and the other at the shoulder were the injuries received by Mrs. Davison, wife of Principal James Davison of the Collegiate Institute, Saturday afternoon by a fall on the stairs of their residence. With both arms broken she managed to take down the receiver and telephone Dr. Davison at the Collegiate. The injured lady is doing very well and resting easily to-day.

WRIT ISSUED BY CITY AGAINST CONTRACTORS

A writ for $5,306.50 was issued today by City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, for the City of Peterboro against Edward Conroy, David Conroy and Jas. Bogue.

The plaintiff's claim is against Edward Conroy for $5,306.50 due by the defendant Edward Conroy, to the plaintiff under a contract between Edward Conroy and the plaintiff, dated September 16th, 1910, and against the defendant David Conroy and Jas. Bogue as sureties under bond in favor of plaintiff, dated 16th of September, 1910, for the due carrying out of the contract.

Mr. Conroy has a counterclaim against the city.

This case has to do with sewer work.

SANTA CLAUS VISITED SCHOOLS

Merry Time For St. Joseph's School Pupils.

The closing for the Christmas holidays in 1913, of St. Joseph's Separate school in Otonabee, will be a red letter day in the history of that section of the county. This morning the pupils and their parents were present and the gathering was made happy by the appearance of Santa Claus on the scene with his bags loaded with toys. Accompanying Santa was his Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. Father McCauley. The toys were distributed among the pupils, after which a delightful program was given by the children, intermingled with speeches from the clergy.

He says, speaking from a purely personal point of view, there seem to be a couple of bad months ahead for the bill collectors.

"It looks to her as if some people are going to boycott turkeys this year."

WELL KNOWN MARINER DEAD

Capt. Sylvester Spent His Life on Great Lakes.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Capt. Solomon Sylvester, aged 77 years, died at his residence, 390 Manning avenue, yesterday.

Capt. Sylvester was a thorough marine man, having been connected with the great lakes all his life. He was born in the Township of Scarboro, on June 16, 1837, his father being at that time the well-known farmer, Samuel Sylvester.

On different crafts he worked his way up until 1857 he became master and took command of the schooner Atlantic. He owned and sailed different vessels until 1868, at which time he came off the water and inaugurated a general wharfage and storage business, in partnership with his brother David and James Hickman. The firm name was later changed to Sylvester Brothers, the two brothers continuing in business until a few years ago.

TWO MEN ARE DROWNED

They Went Through the Ice on Rideau Canal

KINGSTON, Dec. 22.—Pushing a trap boat across thin ice on the Rideau Canal near Cushendall, eight miles from Kingston, cost the lives yesterday afternoon of two men, Geo. Anderson, aged 45, and Russell Weir, aged 21, son of John Weir, both living at Cushendall. Charles Gray, aged 25, also of Cushendall, had a very narrow escape. Anderson's body has been recovered and search is being continued for that of Weir.

The three men were pushing the boat across the canal from Cushendall with some supplies when the accident occurred. On starting on the ice appeared quite solid, but when they got half way across its suddenly gave way and the three men went into the water. Gray, a good swimmer, made a gallant but ineffectual attempt to save the other two men and was exhausted when he reached shore.

Anderson was married and is survived by a widow, but no family. Weir was unmarried.

The accident occurred directly in front of Anderson's home.

ROYALTY BUYS GIFTS AT HOME

Home Manufactured Presents for This Christmas.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The King and queen are both booming British goods this year, and are making a special feature of giving all-British presents. It 's customary each year around Christmas time for royal warrant-holders to send a selection of Christmas presents to Buckingham Palace for Their Majesties' approval. They are stored in a large room which is temporarily converted into a luxurious shop. This year the warrant holders are specially requested to send no goods of foreign manufacture, in whole or even in part. The present gift list of the royal family is necessarily on a huge scale. This scheme facilitates the housing of a large number of presents. But the old idea that royalty never goes shopping in person but selects only from wares sent to the palace is completely exploded. Queen Mary is often to be met with shopping in Bond street, Regent street, and Piccadilly, while in the past two days Queen Alexandra has been seen mingling with bargain hunters.

HUSBAND TOOK HIS WIFE'S PAY

Judge Orders His Deportation to England.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 22.—In ordering the deportation of Gordon Maidment to England Saturday, Judge Carman advised him to tell any others of his kind in the old country not to come to Canada. Maidment was arrested on a charge of non-support and desertion. He and his wife had been employed at a Grimsby canning factory, but the most of the time was put in by his wife. The man turned up on pay day and secured both pay envelopes and disappeared. Charitable neighbors had provided for the woman and placed her in the St. Catharines hospital. The couple will be deported together.

THIS CHRISTMAS DAY.

By F. A. Conners.

Pastor Park St., Baptist Church

When Christ was born in Bethlehem,
The greatest blessing came to men,
This world has even seen;
He came in God's appointed time,
He was the messenger Divine.

The Christ of God who came to save,
His life for sinners freely gave,
That He might save from sin;
For us His Blood He freely shed,
And wore the thorns upon His head.

O, let us on this Christmas Day,
From our hearts most freely say,
He is our Priest and King;
And as we love, so may we live,
Our lives in service freely give.

O, may each Christmas then remind
Us of God's gift to all mankind,
When Jesus Christ was born;
Help us to live that we may be,
With Him through all eternity.

HE WAITED LONG FOR HIS PENSION

American Civil War Veteran Comes Into His Own

Petrolia, Dec. 22.—Fifty years ago Mr. Fred Globenski of this town was a soldier fighting with the northern army in the American Civil War. Four times southern bullets ploughed their way into his sturdy frame, the fourth wound being the most serious. Instead of being taken to a hospital tent he was carried to a small hut on the outskirts of the battlefield where for weeks he hovered between life and death. Upon regaining his health he left the army and a few years later made his way to Canada, later settling in Petrolia where for several years he was employed by VanTuyl & Fairbank. The thought of asking for a pension never occurred to Mr. Globenski until three or four years ago, when through a solicitor formal application was made. Since then considerable correspondence has passed between the solicitor and the department dealing with pensions. The greatest obstacle to the granting of the pension was the fact that after the last battle in which Globeski participated no trace of him could be found in the records. However, last Friday Mr. Globenski received a letter stating that proof had been found that his claim had been established beyond all doubt, and that, besides a pension of $16 a month for life he would receive twenty-two years back pension at $6 per month.

PEACE ARMY NEEDED.

Britain Requires Skilled Workmen Most Declares Lord Haldane.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Lord Haldane continues to press upon the Government and the country the need for real reform in England's educationl system. It is understood that the Government has some intention of attempting the heroic task, but, for the moment the problem of education is kept in the background by questions of less importance to the national prosperity.

In speaking on the subject at a gathering of students at the Mansion House, Lord Haldane said he was well aware of the vast strides which had been made in British national education during the last quarter of a century, but he was also well aware that still more startling strides had been made in other countries.

What the country needed was an army of peace, to defend it from the invasion of the highly skilled and highly trained foreigners.

More Federal Troops Rebel.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 22.—The list of Federal troops who have revolted was augmented Saturday by a detachment formerly under the command of Gen. Gaudencia de la Llave, in the State of Puebla. The mutineers are said to number 500 men. They took with them two cannon and a few machine guns.

The activity of adherents of the rebel leader Zapata in the State of Mexico and Tlaxcala was manifested yesterday by the destruction of three sugar cane plantations.

RECORD OF C.P.R. DURING PAST FEW YEARS

As an instance of the manner in which the business of the C.P.R. has grown during the past few years, it may be stated that whereas the revenue from passengers amounted a few years ago to something like $8,000,000 per annum, it now amounts to $35,000,000 per annum. To earn this money meant that the company had to carry 1,766,982,013 passengers one mile. A decade ago the revenue from freight was something like $50,000,000. Today it is $89,655,223, which means that 11,242,590,998 tons were carried one mile during the year, while the total tons of all classes of freight during the year were 12,986,619,155. This gives an illuminating idea of the strides the company has made since the original mail carrying contract was entered into with the C.P.R. and other companies. Especially does it show the standard quality and capacity reached in so few years—so that even in districts which have yet to yield a noticeable volume of business the character of the operating is of the highest, in respect of everything entering into a first-class system. This has its effect in the general result, but the point is that the C.P.R. has aimed at providing the amplest accommodation, not only in the East, where the population is denser, but even in sparsely-peopled districts in the West, which nevertheless, will yield the fruit of which the company has sown the seed in confident faith.

EDITOR SIDNEY DEAD.

Widely-Known Welland Newspaperman Was 69 Years of Age.

WELLAND, Dec. 22.—John S. Sidney, for nearly half a century editor and proprietor of The Welland Tribune, died at his home, Maple avenue, Saturday night shortly before 11 o'clock. He had been ailing for the past six months.

Mr. Sidney was perhaps the best known man in Welland County. He was born in Stamford in 1844 and from Stratford moved with his parents to Thorold, where he was educated in the public and high schools. In 1864 he came to Welland, and in 1865, in partnership with Albert H. Patterson, purchased The Welland Tribune. He later took full possession, which was continued up to the time of his death.

Wabash Fireman Killed.

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 22.—F. Dunn, Wabash fireman, of St. Thomas, was instantly killed at Welland yesterday when he fell off his engine on to a second track and was struck by an incoming express train. He was so terribly injured that he lived only a few moments after being picked up by the train crew.

Dunn was the son of the late Lucas Dunn, a well-known farmer, living just outside of the city limits, where the deceased was born twenty-five years ago. He leaves a young widow and an infant son. His mother, three brothers and one sister also survive.

LOOK OUT FOR RAW PORK.

Deadly Trichinosis Have Caused Havoc In Parts of United States.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—To prevent the spread of trichinosis, a dread disease little known to the American people, the Department of Agriculture last night issued a warning against the consumption of raw or uncooked pork products, the declared source of the malady.

The department asserts that during November and December, 1911, there was 58 cases of trichinosis that terminated fatally in one California community. In each instance the disease was traced to sausage, eaten in an uncooked condition. Other outbreaks of the disease with many fatalities are cited.

The disease is caused by a parasite or worm, microscopic in size, found in hog flesh, and there is no known effective method of treatment.

DISASTROUS CONFLAGRATION AT PORTSMOUTH DOCKYARD

Two Lives Are Lost and Property Valued at From $1,250,000 to $2,500,000 is Destroyed.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 22.—A fire involving damage variously estimated at from $1,250,000 to $2,500,000, devastated the famous dockyard Saturday night and resulted in the loss of two lives and the destruction of the century-old semaphore tower, which in the pre-telegraph days was the great signaling station between the fleet and the Admiralty.

An examination of the ruins to-day disclosed the fact that two of the three signalmen who had remained in the tower to summon help when the fire broke out, were burned to death. The third managed to make his escape through the smoke and flames to an adjoining roof and there fell unconscious. He was subsequently rescued.

Nothing is known as to how the fire originated. When it was first observed from the deck of the new battle cruiser, Queen Mary, it had already obtained a good hold on the inflammable material in the rigging loft and sail house. All the fire-fighting apparatus in the dockyard was rapidly brought into action, and the efforts of the men were devoted to preventing the fire from reaching the main store at the end of the burning building, which was filled with 30,000 tons of heavy oil. After many hours' strenuous work the fire was gotten under control. It had then reached within eight feet of these tanks. The flames were finally extinguished about three o'clock Sunday morning.

Many valuable models of old warships, records relating to Nelson and earlier periods, and old naval relics were destroyed.

Neptune Smashes Dover Harbor.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—It is feared that the $20,000,000 spent by the Admiralty on the improvement of Dover Harbor has been wasted. There is to-day a rushing tide rip across the harbor entrance which makes it next to impossible to enter at certain stages of the tide.

It has also been found that the harbor silts up very rapidly, in spite of the fact that $250,000 are spent annually on dredging. Altogether, Dover Harbor has cost the nation $50,000,000, and many millions more will have to be spent if it is to be of any use to the larger ships of the navy.

Moriarity Is Acquitted.

TOMS RIVER, N.J., Dec. 22.—Joseph Moriarity, also known as W. J. Leehan, was acquitted by a jury yesterday on the charge of murdering Mrs. Caroline Turner, wife of a gardener on the estate of George Gould at Lakewood.

The jury was out an hour and ten minutes. Its verdict caused an uproar in the courtroom which could not be quelled for five minutes.

Escaped From Wreck.

LORETTE, Man., Dec. 22. — The C.N.R. train from Duluth and Fort William was derailed near here yesterday and five coaches and a baggage and dining-car overturned into the ditch. The wreckage caught fire but the two hundred passengers escaped through windows, scratched and bruised, and helped extinguish the flames. A relief train from Winnipeg returned there last night with the passengers. A broken rail caused the accident. Three day coaches and all the hand baggage belonging to the passengers were destroyed by the fire before bucket brigades had subdued the blaze.

Darrow Completely Cleared.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 22.—Court records of Los Angeles County were cleared yesterday of the McNamara dynamiting case, when the indictments charging bribery against Clarence S. Darrow, who was counsel for the dynamiters, were dismissed. District Attorney Fredericks told Judge Jackson of the Superior Court that Darrow had been tried twice, once when the jury acquitted him, and again when the jury disagreed, and that evidence in the light of previous experience was not sufficient to convict.

ROME, Dec. 22. — That Emperor Menelik, of Abyssinia, died on Dec. 12, is confirmed in the latest despatches received here from Addis Abeba, the Abyssinian capital. Although official announcement of the Emperor's death is lacking, this is due probably to the necessity of precautions being taken to insure the succession to the throne.

UP THE AMAZON.

English Explorer Tells of a Voyage Up the Ria Ynirida.

Some very strange tribal customs and picturesque experiences are related by Dr. Hamilton Rice, the explorer, who recently returned from a trip extending over seventeen months along the upper reaches of the great Amazon river. Speaking of his ascent of the Ria Ynirida, he says:

We reached a beautiful waterfall, over 100 feet high, which is a break between high precipitous hills running in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction. It took two days to convey our big canoe around this fall, and five days more were spent in the hardest kind of work, smashing our way through to the sources of the Ynirida.

Three days later we began to descend to the river. The country on both sides teems with jaguars, tapirs, and anacondas, and the river is filled with rayas. The tapirs were so tame that they swam around our canoe—curious and absolutely fearless. Some stood on the shore whistling at us. I shot a magnificent specimen of jaguar, and found inside of it a whole tapir.

For fifty days we descended the Ynirida without seeing a sign of a human being. We camped on shore at night, and jaguars and tapirs would come up and nose us at will. They showed no fear of men. In this journey we passed three great randales or rapids.

The first encampment we saw was a fishing village on the beach. These Indians had had no contact with whites; they do not belong to the great Tupi-Guarani family, which extends the whole length and breadth of the Amazon valley, but probably as members of the great Carib family, which embraces all the Indians of Venezuela, Guainia, and the central, northern and northeastern portions of Brazil.

A curious feature of this region was that the Indians for the most part not only lived back from the main streams, but in the villages were found a great predominance of women, who, from all we could make out, were permanent inhabitants of their respective settlements, while the males were transients.

This brings to one's mind the question whether this may not be the district whence come the reports so well known on the Amazon for two centuries of the existence of a race of women living alone, except at stated periods. Concerning these legends both Alfred Russel Wallace and Richard Pree, the eminent English traveler and scientist of more than three generations ago, have written.

By a Guainia Indian I was taken to a settlement of Indians living back several hours' distance from the Papanaua, where I found a very intelligent native who spoke the Tupi-Guarani language, which would make it seem that there had been a dividing line between the nation of that name and the Caribs.

The Papanana Indians travel from their river to the upper Icana, and have a well-made path nine miles in length, which crosses elevated land flanked on the east and west by enormous impassable swamps and lagoons. By doing a lot of medical work I got this old Indian's good will, and he entered my service.

At this point the Columbians I had, who had become mutinous through exposure and hard work, were sent back. The old Indian had promised to get me natives for my party, but they did not turn up, so I had to compel him to take us down the river. The first village we reached contained one man and fifteen women. In the next we found a settlement of two men, some twenty women of all ages, and any number of children. They had little or no food, but gave us smoked monkey to eat.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—Snow west and southwest, giving needed protection to the winter crop, acted as a check today on bullish sentiment regarding wheat. The market closed weak, 1-8c to ⅛c under last night. Corn showed a loss of 1-8c, oats finished 1-8c off but there was also substantial support in the form of resting orders that commission houses play into play on the declines. In addition to the snowfall, news regarding the Canadian wheat tariff made caution seem necessary to a like advance, and provisions from 10c decline to a gain of a shade.

Rescued From a Cistern.

GUELPH, Dec. 22.—Joe Hewer, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hewer, Armstrong's Mills, is still a pretty sick boy as the result of a fall into a cistern Saturday. Mrs. Hewer had gone to the cistern to draw a pail of water, and the little fellow came running after her and tumbled in. Marshall Day, hearing the cry of the mother, rushed to the cistern and soon had the lad out, but he was unconscious.

THE MAYORALTY
VOTE FOR
Wm. BULLER
THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR FOR 1914.

J. J. HARTLEY
FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of municipal ownership and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,
J. J. HARTLEY

MAYOR FOR 1914

ONLY SIX TEAMS FOR THE MERCANTILE LEAGUE

The Mercantile Hockey League will be composed of six teams, namely: Bankers, Printers, Tool Room, Test, C. and P. and Plumbers. At the meeting held in the Review Office on Saturday evening it was decided that eight teams were too many, so the number was cut down to six. The six new teams were placed in a hat and the first three drawn were to have a place. The two left were the De Laval and Wm. Hamilton.

A meeting is called for next Tuesday evening in The Review office, at which the final arrangements for the year will be made. In the meantime arrangements are being made for the rink. Season tickets are being issued at 50 cents each.

About O. H. A. Players

At the meeting next Tuesday, the elegibility of Junior O. H. A. players will be discussed. Mr. W. G. Harris gave notice of motion to an amendment of the rule governing O. H. A. players.

New Year's Sports

At a meeting of the Sergeants' Mess on Saturday evening it was decided to hold a public reception on New Year's Day and also provide for a special program of indoor sports to be run off.

The Greatest Happiness

Comes To Ourselves When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

The value of a gift consists, not in costliness or variety, but in the feelings of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honor, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both giver and receiver realised this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into it. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry and doubt. When you give something to wear, you exhibit good sense, good taste and good judgment.

CONNIE MACK VALUES COLLINS AT $100,000

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—Connie Mack believes that if Joe Tinker is worth $25,000 as a ball player, Eddie Collins of the Athletics is worth just four times as much, or $100,000. But also Connie is very careful to avoid placing a monetary value upon the services of any ball player. That isn't his way. To prove his contention as to the respective value of Tinker and Collins, Connie has dug into his private records. These show that Tinker during his twelve years in the major league has a fielding average of .932 and a batting average of .264.

Collins, who broke into the big league six years ago, has a fielding average of .953 and a batting average of .333. In other words, on the average Collins has fielded better than Tinker and has batted 69 points better.

"In his six years as a regular," said Connie, "Collins has hit below .300 but once. In his first year in fast company he batted .213. In the twelve years Tinker has played major league ball he has batted over the .300 mark just once, when his average was .318."

THE RING

PARIS, Dec. 22.—Sam Langford, the negro heavyweight pugilist, was awarded the decision on points over Joe Jeanette of Hoboken, N. J., also a negro, at the end of the twentieth round for a fast contest held Saturday night at Luna Park. The fight was considered in France to be for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Langford forced the fighting throughout the battle. Jeanette took a count of nine three times in the thirteenth round, and at the end of the twentieth was barely able to stand. In the twelfth, fifteenth and nineteenth rounds Jeanette landed hard blows on his opponent, but they were ineffective. Jeanette's pluckiness frequently brought cheers from the crowd of spectators.

CURLERS MAY HAVE ICE FOR CHRISTMAS DAY

Angus McIntosh has a good foundation for ice at the Curling rink and if the weather should continue favorable it might be posible for the knights of the stane to do a turn on Christmas Day.

A meeting will be held at the rink tonight at 8 o'clock to ballot for new members. All members who can possibly be present, are asked to do so.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BASEBALL CLUB IS CALLED FOR TO-NIGHT

Shareholders of the Peterborough Baseball Club and others interested in the promotion of the game in this city, are reminded of the annual meeting of the Club, which will be held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, this evening at 8:15.

It would be encouraging to the directors to see a large attendance as matters of interest and importance will be discussed.

SCHEDULE FOR BANK LEAGUE

E. J. LIVINGSTONE STANDS SUSPENDED; O.H.A. TAKES ACTION

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—The meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association Executive, adjourned from Friday evening until this afternoon, has been further postponed till Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. In addition to regular business, further investigation will be held regarding charges made against certain clubs and players, and Mr. E. J. Livingston, the suspended manager of the T. R. and A. A. team, will be required to take a definite stand in regard to his references to the Parkdale Canoe Club.

LIVES BY HER WITS.

Only Its Sense of Humor Saved This Hen From Decapitation.

For some time, writes "Suburbanite" in the Glasgow News, one of my hens has been indulging itself in a practice that but for the little joke involved would have ended in its decapitation.

It is one of a pen of eight egg machines, or seven, rather, for its egg producing mechanism is considerably out of order, its best average being about one in the fortnight. Yet until recently that hen was scheduled on my book as the premier layer. That happened in this way:

Every morning when I made my appearance in the garden Nora (the hen) would be found clucking beside one of the eggs with all the force of its raucous throat.

If any of its sisters laid claim to the property there would be a wild flutter, and the audacious bird would continue her boasting when she had cleared her bill of feathers.

Some time ago I discovered her in the act of taking up her stand over the production of another hen, and a careful watch thereafter disclosed her true capabilities. A sense of humor is undoubtedly one of them, and this is being regarded as a saving grace, for I have decided to allow her to continue living by her wits.

SLIDES FOR LIFE.

Tibet's Perilous Bridges and the Way They Are Crossed.

In Tibet they have not yet progressed far beyond the primitive. Especially when it comes to engineering the Tibetans are at about the stage reached by Europeans six centuries ago. At that time in Switzerland they used a long cable and swinging carrier for the transport of heavy weights even of cannon from one mountain to another a little lower down.

Now, in Tibet they do not try to build bridges across the Mekong river but where there are high cliffs a cable is stretched to the other side of the river, and for a trifling fee the person who wishes to cross clings to a thick bark carrier and slides down, holding up his feet at the point where the water nears the perilous bridge.

If he wants to cross back he must go farther up or down the river to a point where another cable is stretched from a high cliff to the other side, and again he performs the "slide for life."

This may not be a very comfortable way of crossing a river, but it is easier than swimming across, especially if there are rapids in the stream, and it is the favorite and cheap way of building bridges among the Tibetans.—New York World.

MAKING OF MAPS.

The First Attempt Was by Anaximander About 560 B. C.

Anaximander, a pupil of Thales about 560 B. C., sketched the first map It was in the form of a disk. Democritus of Abdera, about 100 years after, with a wider range of knowledge drew a new map, giving the world an oblong form, showing extension east and west rather than north and south.

The first application of astronomy to geography was made by Pytheas of Marseilles about 326 B. C., he having made the first observation of latitude Hipparchus of Nicaea, 162 B. C., first determined latitude and longitude. Marinus of Tyre, about 150 B. C., was the first to make use of Hipparchus teachings in representing the countries of the world.

Claudius Ptolemy of Pelusium, Egypt. about 162 A. D., was in reality the first scientific mapmaker. Notwithstanding errors in boundaries and locations, the method was correct. The Romans contributed nothing to mapmaking. No improvement was made in it from the time of Ptolemy until the thirteenth century, when a map appeared in Italy which was constructed with the aid of a compass.—Exchange.

PERSIA'S POET LAUREATE.

His Job, When He Had One, Was Anything but a Sinecure.

Persia is the only country besides England where a poet laureate has been officially maintained until recently.

Shah Muzzaffer el Din in 1896 abolished the post of honor, which the court of Teheran for centuries had boasted. But the duties of the laureate of old Iran were far more onerous than those of his British confrere. Court etiquette demanded that whenever the "king of kings" traveled his entourage had to include a dwarf, a giant, a jester, a historiographer and a poet laureate.

The last two were kept busy, for, while the historiographer had to record for posterity all the doings and sayings of the shah (padi-shah), the laureate was called upon to celebrate a large proportion of these in verse. This custom was not so bad after all, and it was rigidly observed and followed up, for the shah, knowing that many of his deeds and utterances would be crystallized into an ode, on his imperial wandering felt bound to speak and to behave majestically, a thing that Muzaffer el Din, who abolished the laureateship, never did. — Philadelphia Ledger.

An Uncomplimentary Composer.

A young tenor, whose misfortune it was to be hideously ugly, waited on Cherubini one day and asked to be allowed to give a specimen of his vocal powers. For a wonder his application was met by a sulky nod of acquiescence. He sang, and sang superbly. There came another nod, accompanied by something like a snort of satisfaction. Then came a pause, which, after a minute or so, was broken by the youthful artist asking in faltering accents whether he might eventually hope for an engagement at the grand opera. "No!" thundered the director. "But, M. Cherubini"— "No!" The disconsolate artist was slowly departing when Cherubini rose, took him by both arms and looked him fully in the face "I am sorry," he said, "very sorry, but, mon cher, do you think that the opera could get up a company of orang outangs to sing with you?"—Sala's "Life and Adventures."

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE IN SONG AT THE CHURCHES

Services Conducted by Organists and Choirs at Many City Churches

Most of the city churches had prepared special musical feasts for their congregations yesterday. For once the organist and his choir almost wholely occupied the pulpit, and the message of Christmas was delivered in song instead of speech. This is only fitting and appropriate as the first message of "peace and good will" was brought by the Angelic choir in Palestine long ago.

George Street Church

Mr. Renwick, the talented organist and choir leader of George St. Methodist church, proved himself a master in the handling of voices. The choir rendered a long program of beautiful music. Mrs. Renwick, Miss Lottie Hanson, Mrs. Telford, Mr. J. Browne, Mr. Cunningham and Master Jock Renwick took special parts in the service.

Master Jock sang very well at the morning service, he has a sweet voice, and only needs a little more vivacity to make a fine singer.

The male voice quartette "Angels' Lullaby" was a very pretty thing. These four singers are well-known and appreciated outside o George Street for their melodious singing. Mr. Renwick has reason to be gratified with his work in the training of so large a choir which consisted of forty-five voices.

At St. Paul's Church

Mr. John Allan conducted the service of Christmas Song at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last evening and received many compliments and words of thanks from members of the congregation.

A long program was gone through including solos, duets, and anthems, and organ postludes. Mrs. Allan, Miss Allan, Mrs. Ellis, Misses Keown and Dickson taking special parts. The anthem, "Christmas" by Shelley, was very finely rendered and Miss Allan sang "Rejoice Greatly" with fine effect.

St. Andrew's Church

Mr. Herbert C. Treneer declared the message of Christmas at St. Andrew's Church, with a program of classical song. A Christmas cantata entitled "The Hope of the World" by Schnecker, taking up practically the whole of the services.

Those taking special parts were Miss Olive Howell, Mrs. Boyd, and Mr. John Anderson. Mr. Treneer was at his best at the organ.

Knox church choir did itself credit yesterday in the rendering of Christmas music under the leadership of Mr. Kenyon. At the evening service Mr. Myles, who possesses a very rich baritone voice, sang very effectively. "The Dream of Bethlehem." After the service the choir adjourned to the manse and sang the Christmas music for Mrs. Keith.

MARTIN HARVEY'S CANADIAN TOUR

Distinguished English Actor and Company Coming to Canada.

Two days after Christmas Martin Harvey and his full London company, including Miss N. de Silva, Miss Maud Rivers, Mr. Charles Glenney, Mr. Charles Cameron, Mr. Eugent Wellesley and many other players well known to British audiences, will sail from Liverpool en route for Halifax. The distinguished actor-manager, whose reputation as the master exponent of romantic drama, has travelled throughout the English speaking world, will spend four months in Canada, traversing the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific seaboard and back. This is the first time that an English company of the importance and size of Martin Harvey's famous organization will have crossed the Atlantic to undertake a great tour exclusively under the National flag. The fact that such an enterprise is now possible is sufficient commentary on the energy and efficiency which is now to be found in the Dominion in the department of theatrical development. When Martin Harvey in an eloquent speech delivered on the last night he played in London before starting on the tour expressed how strongly this great imperial tour appealed to the imagination and pride of a British subject, the huge audience cheered the actor to the echo.

The three plays which will constitute the repertory for this visit—for Martin Harvey has already entertained the idea of following up this tour with subsequent visits in which he will bring other big productions across the Atlantic—are The Only Way, the great Dickens dramatisation which has proved the foundation of the famous actor's splendid career, The Breed of the Tresham's, and A Cigarette-Maker's Romance. In conjunction with the last named will be presented a fourth play, a powerful drama in one act entitled The Conspiracy. Each of these works has had a notable history in the English theatre of today, and Canadian playgoers will have the opportunity of seeing not only a series of absorbing plays of the first dramatic importance, but they will see them all interpreted according to the very highest traditions and standards of British acting. For Martin Harvey's long association with Sir Henry Irving has set a hall-mark not only on his own achievements as an actor, but above all on his work as the master-brain and inspiration of a singularly well consorted company.

January 8th, has been chosen as the date of the opening night of the tour, which will be inaugurated at Halifax, and the furthest point in the west will be reached at Vancouver on March 30. The tremendous area of the itinerary and the large number of towns at which calls will be made will enable tens of thousands of Canadian playgoers to enjoy an artistic treat which is one of the most treasured institutions of the British stage.

POLICE COURT

Police Officer Was Forced to Use His Baton.

An old family feud staged on Saturday, resulted in the two would-be pugilists being arrested, and as a result the aggressor, Gordon Crowe of Dummer, was fined $2 and costs and the charge against Wm. Harding also of Dummer, was dismissed. G. N. Gordon acted for Harding, who pleaded not guilty at Police Court, this morning, and claimed that the affair was the out-come of an old grudge.

On Saturday, while in the Munro House Crowe attacked him but they were parted. Crowe attacked him at the American House and they were both arrested for fighting.

Constable Patterson who arrested the men, gave evidence to the effect that in order to make the arrest he was forced to use his baton to pry them apart. Crowe was on top and was holding Harding down.

Funeral Notice

The funeral of the late Mr. John Willoughby will take place on Tuesday afternoon, at 2:30, from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Thomas Robertson, 263 Bethune St.

France will have a series of interesting tests of motor machinery for farms at the second international congress of cultivation by machines the last week of this month.

THE LATEST ADDITION TO WATERWORKS SYSTEM

18 Inch Force Main of Nearly Three Quarters of a Mile

PRESSURE INCREASED

The waterworks commission have completed the laying of the new 18 inch force main from the pumping station to the Auburn Mills, on the west side of the river, nearly three quarters of a mile, and went into commission yesterday. The cost is about $20,000. This will provide increased pressure, at all points, and will guard against accident to either pipe.

OPEN LETTER TO ALD. JOHNSTON

Ratepayer Wants to Know the Cost of Street Lighting.

Alderman Johnston,
Chairman of Power Committee.
Sir,—

I in common with many of our ratepayers, would like to know what it is going to cost to light our down town section. From the best information I can get each light will cost $60.00 per light per annum which includes cost of installation, power to light the lights, interest on sinking fund spread over a period of years, and maintenance and repairs.

You have installed 100 lights in our down-town section, which at $60.00 a year, will cost the ratepayers for this little bit of street lighting, the sum of $6,000,00 a year. Under our old system I find that there were only nine lamps in this whole district which cost the ratepayers only $50.00 per lamp, per year, which amounts to an annual charge of only $450.00 a year as against $6,000.00 a year under the system you have installed.

If the rest of our city is only moderately lit, I would like to know what our total bill for street lighting is going to be. The ratepayers are completely in the dark. If only one mile of our streets cost $6,000.00 per year to light, what is the remaining 65 miles of our streets going to cost?

Yours etc.,
R. F. MacGregor.

GOOD MEETING FOR THE LABOR CANDIDATE

An enthusiastic and well attended meeting at the Labor Hall last night marked the opening of Mr. J. J. Hartley's campaign for the Mayoralty. Mr. C. F. Browne presided, and Mr. Chas. Hammacott was appointed to act as Secretary.

In introducing the candidate, the chairman emphasized the fact that Mr. Hartley was the working man's candidate, and had been endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council. The candidate's report on his reception in the various establishments which had been visited, was most favorable.

Several of those present addressed the meeting on his behalf, and committees were appointed to work in the different wards.

Mr. Hartley's committee rooms are now open on George St., below the Labor Hall.

Peterborough people will be pleased to learn that this service has been extended to them by the company.

ASSAULTED WIFE AND GETS JAIL

A Fine of $10 Also Imposed for Wrongful Indulgence.

Wm. Huggins, a piano tuner, charged with assaulting his wife, was sentenced this morning by Magistrate Dumble to one month in jail with hard labor.

"It will mean a lesson to you men to go home drunk and abuse your wives and family and cause the children to take action to protect the mother," said the Magistrate.

Evidence by the wife was to the effect htat she had gone to see her mother who was seriously ill, and that when she came home on Sunday evening, he had abused her.

"Why was he unable to go," enquired Chief Thompson.

"Oh, he was drunk," was the answer of the wife, who apparently was trying to shield her husband as much as possible.

The information had been laid by the stepson.

Huggins, who is also on the black list, took a bottle of liquor the wife had bought for her mother who is ill, and as a result he became intoxicated.

"Why, we generally call that taking coppers from a dead man's eyes," remarked the Magistrate.

The fourteen year old daughter tearfully corroborated the mother's evidence.

Huggins claimed he did not know anything about it as he was rather "full" on Sunday night.

On his plea of guilty to this charge he was fined $10 to be paid in ten days.

A stranger giving his name as Elmer Riddle, charged with being drunk and disorderly, pleaded guilty and was fined $5.75. He paid his fine.

HEAVY FINES FOR CREATING DISTURBANCE ON G.T.R. TRAIN

Lindsay Post.—County Magistrate Moore handed down his decision this morning in the case of four men charged with creating a disturbance on the train.

The fines and costs amounted to $117.67 besides which they will of course have to pay for their lawyers who defended them. Besides the regular fare it cost them about two dollars a mile.

Wm. Hutchins charged with creating a disturbance on the train, was fined $20 and the price of the broken window $1 and costs, $15.08 total, $36.08.

J. Brohme on the same charge, was fined $15.00, cost of a small window 85c, a seat 50c, and costs, $15.08, total $20.08.

Geo. Perrin also on the same charge, was fined $5.00 and costs, $15.08, total $20.08.

Geo. Watson charged with obstructing the conductor in discharge of his duties, was fined $15.00 and costs of $15.08, a total of $30.08.

The total costs in the case which included serving papers and cost of bringing down witnesses amounted to $60.32, divided among four men. The total fines amounted to $55.00.

G. H. Hopkins K. C., represented the Grand Trunk. Two Grand Trunk detectives were also on the case.

Creating a disturbance on a railway train or interfering with the conductor is a particularly costly performance for those who attempt it.

Manila, Dec. 23.—C. B. Robinson, botanist in the Bureau of Science Department of the Interior, Philippine Islands, has been killed by natives of Amboyna Island, Malay Archipelago, whither he had undertaken an expedition.

He was a son of C. B. Robinson, manager of the Western Union Telegraph, Pictou, Nova Scotia, and was forth-one years old.

ABOUT FARMERS AND CITY FOLK

Also the New Pavements and the Great White Way.

The new lights are magnificent. They are not only the talk of the town, but also of the country. In fact Peterborough, as a city to live in, in which to deal, and one worth boosting, is being thus praised by the residents of the surrounding districts. They are pleased with the streets in particular, and hope to see more of them prevail in 1914, and they are pleased with the new lights, the reflection of which they claim, can be seen in the heavens for miles and miles. From the railroad men comes the statement that the other lights were very good reflectors, but the new ones are much stronger and cast a strong white illumination into the canopy above.

Our friend the farmer, has indeed a lot to be thankful for, because of the fact that he lives near Peterborough; he might well be proud of the only city in the county which is not surpassed by any city of its size in the Dominion. Peterborough has splendid streets, magnificent lighting system, and besides having excellent stores inviting the farmers to do their shoping and trading and courteous men to do their business with; this city is also the home of the very best class of citizens. We are glad to meet our friends from the farm and believe that they are equally as glad to meet the people in the city. Back of all the merchants of Peterborough are honest, and believe in meeting the farmer fairly in regard to all questions. The merchant is a friend of the farmer and this courtesy should be reciprocal.

It would delight the hearts of many of the larger city folks if the beautiful stories told in some mail oder catalogues were true; that is, if they could obtain the wonderful prices we people in the smaller cities and towns are supposed to get, and at the same time get style and quality. The mail order people would not need to send out catalogues or advertise out of their city for they could sell the goods right at home. That is not meant to insinuate that it would be impossible to get good merchandise from mail order houses. That would not be true. But it must be conceded that the better grades will cost just the same and sometimes more, than the same quality would cost right here in Peterborough.

Have the citizens of our fair city, as well as the country people, ever consider how many times the local merchant has been used as an accommodation. How often he has extended credit to you or helped you to obtain perfect satisfaction? In town he helps to make your property valuable, to support all the bazaars, fairs, poultry shows, baseball games and hockey matches. Are these not things worth considering? In the country he helps the farmer by giving him the latest market reports, contributing towards good roads in the country and giving you good roads to travel on in the city, also supporting missions and charitable causes in the country. Is it not true that unless there are very desirable advantages in dealing away from home, it is your duty, Mr. Citizen, and Mr. Farmer, to spend your money in Peterborough?

Much could be said along this line, and along other lines all going to show that the citizen and countryman should be united in making Peterborough a better city. It is to the mutual benefit of both parties, and the spirit of reciprocity should predominate. Peterborough citizens are glad that the new system of street paving and the new system of street lighting are welcomed by the farmers and welcome them to take advantage of the improved conveniences and pay frequent visits to the city.

NEW CANDIDATES AT PORT HOPE

Port Hope, Dec. 23.—The election for 1914 may develop into quite a brisk affair. Rumor says there will be a real contest for the mayoralty, and the candidates for the Reeveship are very numerous.

Reeve Burnham will again enter the field and his opponents will be Deputy-Reeve Hayden and G. N. Patterson. It is also stated that Mr. Thomas Long will be asked to accept the nomination.

It is understood that G. A. Smith is casting eyes on the Deputy-Reeve's chair, and that C. A. Merrifield may be his opponent.

As for the Council it is a mystery. Mr. Russell and Mr. Sheriff have decided to withdraw, but a week from to-day is likely to bring out a large bunch of aspirants.

SEEKS RICH COLOMBIAN OIL FIELDS.

LORD MURRAY OF ELIBANK.

Lord Murray, according to a cable despatch from Kingston, Jamaica, still hopes to obtain an oil concession from Colombia for the firm he represents, S. Pearson & Sons, but Señor Camacho, whose exposure of the real nature of the Pearson project gave it its death blow, does not share Lord Murray's views.

"It is not likely," he remarked, "that a future Congress in Colombia or in Ecuador will prove less hostile to such a contract as the one proposed by Lord Murray."

WHAT IS THE POSITION OF THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEME ?

Some Facts Tersely Stated as to How the Matter Stands

The public mind appears to be disturbed over the expropriation scheme. Let us examine it so far as we are able, always bearing in mind that Mr. Beck is in a position to do a good deal if it becomes the policy of the government to do so.

1. A legislative bill was passed not without difficulty, giving the city power to dam up and submit a by-law to the people comprising the expropriation of a distribution plant. Mr. Beck agreed to see that power was supplied at reasonable rates we are informed.

2. The by-law passed but the company resisted and maintains that the by-law calls for the expropriation of all their property which would include the Auburn Power development or else leaves their franchise untouched.

3. It is at this point that the undertaking halts. The city does not want to buy out the whole power plant. Two courses are open. One is that the government can expropriate and sell to the city. The other is that the Government should expropriate on its own account or in some way provide power for the city without the city's being compelled to buy out any power development.

4. If the govrenment develops a power scheme of its own and takes over developments, it might well begin here. In that event the difficulty would be overcome. But if the government will not do so, then the city may be face to face with ultimately having to take over the Auburn Power development, a thing that may or may not appeal to the ratepayers.

5. One thing however appears reasonably clear and that is that if the city cannot shake itself free from the purchase of the development, it may have to leave the franchise with the Power Company and thus be the subject of competition which might put it in the power of a company having other sources of revenue to put the local scheme out of business altogether.

It is not wise however to take a gloomy view of the matter. The Mayor and Council may well be given credit for discretion and common sense.

6. We do not take much stock in the idea that the city has got to go on with the expropriation nor that notice has been served. That is hardly likely to be the case.

LEFT MONEY FOR EDUCATION

Trinity College and School at Port Hope Benefit in Will.

The will of the late Barlow Cumberland, who died in Port Hope, in August last, has been filed for probate in the Toronto Surrogate Court. The deceased gentleman left property valued at $114,979.83, comprising $43,097 in stocks, $13,470 life insurance, $10,367 mortgages, $2,874 book debts and notes, $5,880 real estate, $32,826.93 cash in bank, being a two-fifth interest in the estate of the late F. W. Cumberland; $2,000 in furniture, pictures and heirlooms.

The chief bequests are: $1,000 to Trinity College School, Port Hope, to be invested as the endowment of a bursary, to be known as "The Architects' Bursary," for the benefit of sons of architects attending the school; to Trinity College, Toronto, his architectural library, now in possession of the College. To St. George's Society, Toronto, his shares in the St. George's Hall, Company, valued at $120; $50 each to a number of grandchildren; $150 each to three sisters; $200 each to two grand nephews; $500 to his physician, Dr. H. C. Parsons, Toronto.

Certain heirlooms, jewelry and trophies are bequeathed to his daughter, Mildred. All remaining furniture, plate jewels, etc., are left to his widow. His widow is provided with an income under a trust fund, but it may be augmented to the extent of $1,000 per annum, out of the estate, so long as she might so desire.

The residue of the estate is left in trusts for the benefit of his daughter and her children. Should his daughter become a widow, her income is to be increased by $1,000 a year, until her youngest son attains the age of thirty, when the whole estate is to be divided. He expresses the wish that his grandsons be educated at Trinity College, for which provision is made. Should either of the beneficiaries become Roman Catholics they will forfeit their share in the estate.

Religious Bequests

The British and Foreign Bible Society, and the Presbyterian Church, Foreign Missions, benefit to the extent of $809.49 each, under the will of the late Rev. J. L. Murray, D. D., of Toronto, who died in October last, leaving an estate valued at $16,189.65. The will was filed in the Surrogate Court for probate yesterday. Three daughters and two sons divide the estate, subject to the payment of a legacy of $1,000 to his former servant.

CANADA TO HAVE LARGEST TELESCOPE IN THE WORLD

Will Weigh Fifty Tons, With Tube Thirty Feet Long, Through Which Automobile Could be Drawn With Ease

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Canadian Government has awarded a contract to the Warner and Swasey Company, of Cleveland, Ohio., for the construction of what is to be the largest telescope in the world. Eighteen months will be required to manufacture it and place it in position at Ottawa. A rough idea of its size may be gained from noting that a full sized automobile could be readily driven through the tube.

The Warner and Swasey Company built the Leik telescope, finished in 1887, the object glass of which is thirty-six inches in diameter, and the Yerkes telescope finished in 1893 has a forty inch glass. These, when constructed, were the largest in the world.

Ambrose Swasey, a distinguished scientist, and a member of the contracting firm, when asked for the details and the collosal new instrument, said: "Great impetus will be given to astronomy by the action of the Canadian Government in acquiring this splendid seventy-two inch instrument.

"This great engine of science, weighing fully fifty tons, resting upon massive piers of concrete, will have a tube thirty feet long and seven feet in diameter which will weigh ten tons.

At the lower end of the tube will be created the principal spectrum composed of a disc of glass seventy-three inches in diameter, ten inches in thickness and weighing approximately two tons."

FINE CLUB ROOMS FOR TRAVELLERS

Local Association to Have Handsome Headquarters on Water Street.

With the completion of their new club rooms at hand the Peterboro Commercial Travellers' Association will have probably the most up-to-date headquarters of any Commercial Travellers' Association in Ontario.

The club rooms which are situated at 27(Water Strst, include several rooms which are nearly completed, while the Association have an option on a few other adjoining rooms which will be taken over in the course of a few months.

The new club rooms consist of a handsome reading room, lounging room, and billiard room with a cloak room, telephone booth, and other conveniences for club life.

The decorations of the rooms are of the best that the Association could possibly get and no expense was spared by the members to have the rooms up to the minute. They are finished in a dark brown effect and do the painter, A. Kingdon, credit.

Steam and other fixtures have been installed and the new billiard table is being placed today. The handsome rug in the reading room will cost in the neighborhood of $100.

A large room, 40x40 feet, above the club rooms, will be turned into an assembly hall shortly and will be used as a Board room and also for entertainments by the Club.

The new quarters will be opened for the members on Saturday, but the formal opening will be held on the tenth of next month with a smoker and at home.

Although practically all the new members have paid their fee, the Secretary, F. Whitehouse, would appreciate very much if the fees were paid before the new year, so the Association can start with a clean sheet.

HOME FOR NEW HARDWARE FIRM

Alterations are in progress at the premises immediately north of the Bank of Nova Scotia, on George street, with a view to connecting them into the future home of the Morgan Hardware Company. The company, which has at its head, Mr. H. P. Morgan, will carry on the hardware business on an extensive scale.

P.C.I. DANCE WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Large Attendance at Annual Gathering of Young People.

With charmingly clad damsels and a beautifully decorated hall, the annual P. C. I. Rugby Club dance held last evening scored the hit of the season when it was attended by over one hundred couples The Opera House Orchestra provided excellent music and the evening proved to be one full of enjoyment for all.

The large number of the old boys in the gathering were very prominent, and they assisted in every way to make the evening a success.

New York, Dec. 23.—Sir James Whitney is reported well enough to come down stairs to meals to-day at the Manhattan Hotel, but it is not decided when he will leave for Toronto.

HARRY LINDLEY PASSES OUT BEHIND THE SCENES

Old Time Favorite With the Local Theatre-goers is no More

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—News has just reached the city of the death Harry Lindley, an old-time favorite comedian of Toronto playgoers back in the early seventies. He was of the old school of all-round actors, and could take any part assigned him. Patrons of the Royal Lyceum and later of the Grand Opera House will not soon forget the quips and jests of the old-time character actor who has just passed.

He had of late years travelled with stock and burlesque shows, and at the time of his death was accompanied by his two daughters. Mrs. Lindley was not with him, she being in Chester, Pa., playing stock.

Two years ago Lindley paid his last visit to Toronto, and looked up a number of his old friends. He used to lament the change in taste from the old-time clean comedy to the risque stuff put on in the burlesque shows of today.

Many theatregoers in this city will remember Harry Lindley, who appeared at the old opera house. He headed a company similar to the Marks Bros. companies, and he was quite a favorite here.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1913

THE SLAUGHTERING OF BABY COWS.

MR. JOHN SINCLAIR, retiring chairman of the tanner's section of the Toronto Board of Trade, says that in his opinion we are nearing the time when our Government will have to prohibit the killing of female cattle under five or six years of age. It seems there is a great scarcity of hides and this is causing an advance in the price of leather. Many substitutes for leather are being resorted to in the way of fabrics and paper. This may account for some bad boots.

The remedy proposed above, that farmers ought to be prohibited from killing female calves would certainly help to relieve the situation. There is certainly a great deal of wanton slaughter, every spring, of young calves, hundreds of them being despatched immediately they are born and thrown into the yard for the dogs and hens to pick at.

In passing we might remark here, that there is nothing more revolting and unnatural, to those who have not grown hardened to it, than the sight of hens picking at a carcase. This is a common sight in some districts at certain times of the year, and the farmers seem confident that it is a fine thing for the fowls and that it makes them lay. We would, apart from the question of destroying calves, register our protest against this practice of throwing their carcases to the fowls. It is not "good for them." As they are used for domestic purposes these hens are unfit for human food. They are flesh-eaters and therefore "carrion," they are on a par with the vulture; and who would think of eating a vulture or even a vulture's egg? The fact that these fowls eat a carcase ravenously does not prove that it is a natural food. It is a depraved taste and a vicious habit. Because a man likes whiskey and will walk miles to get it, and will sit for hours drinking it, does not prove that whiskey is his natural diet. The man ought never to have tasted whiskey, or he ought to be locked up until he has got back his normal appetite for plain food and drink.

This is a digression from the subject of hides and young calves, but all these subjects are bound up together and if our inspectors will get after the man who throws his calves to the dogs and chickens he will have the man who is directly responsible for the high price of leather, and perhaps of eggs also.

THAT MIDDLEMAN.

ONE OF THE MANY questions arising out of the discussion of the relations between the East and West, at the farmers' banquet on Saturday last, is the question of the middleman. The prime object of every co-operative movement is to get rid of this fellow. The middleman is the personal devil of all co-operationists.

This question was also raised by one of our farmers near Peterborough in a letter which appeared in The Review a few days ago. Our correspondent seemed to think that if the middleman could be done away with, or at least put under severe inspection and restraint, the cost of living would be considerably reduced. In looking into this subject the middleman would, of course, have to be taken into consideration, for there is no doubt that there are a great many of these men, who pass on the produce of the farms to the consumer, who make far more out of the goods than the men who produce them. An instance of this was cited the other day where chickens were actually sold by one dealer at a profit of almost one hundred per cent. This may have been an odd case, but it may not be. Setting aside farm produce for the moment, many imported articles, in the way of canned tropical fruit, are enormously in excess in price as compared with other countries. In some cases these goods are two-thirds above the price in Great Britain and Germany. A can of pine-apple that in Peterborough costs twenty-cents can be bought for six, or at most eight cents in Germany and Great Britain. How the extra twelve cents comes to be levied upon the purchaser, even allowing for tariff and higher wages, it would be interesting to enquire into.

But then it is easy to misunderstand the middleman. He is generally ranked with the "non-producers," as a sort of parasite, who lives by sucking the blood of both the producer and consumer. But it is difficult to see how we can dispense with this awful person, he is one of our "necessary evils" and he is often the scape-goat for the sins of others. We sometimes forget that the transportation of goods, freightage, warehousing, preserving, etc., etc., are items which have to be reckoned in, and that the one who buys the article which has cost so much trouble to put into his hands, has to foot the bill for this trouble.

There was a time, and not very long ago, when a farmer of the north country had to draw a cord of wood thirty miles into the nearest city and only got three dollars for his load, and sometimes less than that. He drove back with his three dollars in his pocket, or their equivalent in goods, and got home at the end of the day weary, both himself and his horses; but he had the satisfaction of knowing that he had given the middleman the slip and dealt directly with the consumer. Here is a concrete example of abolishing the middleman, and in many cases often nearly abolishing the producer as well! Who got the best of the bargain? The consumer got his wood cheap, but did the farmer get paid for his labor in cutting the wood and carting it to the market?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT IS COMFORTING information that comes to the people of Canada, to the effect that our own Joe Martin, M.P., does not intend to give up British politics and return to this country.

IN THE EDITORIAL on the men of the west in yesterday's Review the printer made us say that the east and west were each independent—this, of course, should have been "inter-dependent."

WHILE THE NEW HYDRO-ELECTRIC lamps throw splendid light upon the paths of citizens, some people seem to be in the dark as to how they are going to be paid for. A little light in that direction might help others to see their way to the poll.

THE NEW BRITISH ANTARTIC expedition under G. J. Foster Stackhouse, which plans to start for the South Pole next year, has received nearly five-thousand offers from men eager to join the expedition. Sixteen peers are among the applicants, and one has said in his letter that he is willing to go as second cook, if there is nothing better for him to do.

THERE SEEMS TO BE some truth in the statement of Mr. Stauffer, who said that we are are all mongrels. Dr. Wood Hutchinson now says that there is no such thing as a pure race. That every race upon the face of the earth has been mixing with others for thousands of years. He is wrong in one respect; we are, at least, all pure members of the human race.

THE MANUSCRIPT copies of Burns' Works, which were sold last year to an American by the Atheneum Club, Liverpool, are now being restored to the old land. John Gribble of Philadelphia, has purchased the relics and is presenting them to Burns' native land. Lord Rosebery is to have the placing of them.

PROFESSOR HERING, of Concord, N. H., speaking on Christian Science at Toronto, said that Mrs. Eddy did not invent the Christian Science of healing, that she merely re-discovered the spiritual power exercised over material conditions by the Apostles. Most of us wonder why this power was lost for so long and why we were ever to pay doctor's bills at all. Christian Science must hurry up, it ought to reduce the cost of living.

THE BOBBIES of London are now forming a union and have held a meeting in Trafalgar Square to protest against the official ban placed recently upon their union, and to demand more pay. It is said that a "tone of restraint" marked the speeches. It would rather complicate matters if the Bobbies went on strike and got out of hand. They could scarcely tell each other to "move on there." It may be that the extra work for policemen in these days in suppressing the suffragettes has had something to do with their demand for more pay.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Back to the Cities.

Montreal Herald.

What is the use of shouting, back to the land until the people who are on the land are contented with their lot and do not come crowding into the cities?

Aristocrat and Democrat.

Toronto World.

We have long since learned that liberty in the broadest and best sense of the word may be practically unknown in a country with free institutions, and that the most zealous promoters of democratic reform and popular progress have been found among those who were by birth aristocrats.

Going Too Far.

The News.

It is easy to carry a joke too far. The returning officer finds that Mr. Hawkes got only 65 votes in South Lanark. This is a drop of five since the night of polling. If there is to be any more counting the results should be suppressed. We understand Mr. Hawkes had become reconciled to 70 and into the silence of his repose no rough foot should intrude.

Helen Keller.

Exchange.

Dr. James L. Hughes says:—"Helen Keller is beyond comparison the most interesting person I have ever met. I first met her at the world's fair in Chicago. I saw her tested in various ways. I had heard deaf mutes who had been trained to speak and who could conduct a conversation by watching my lips to see what I said. Here was a young woman who was blind as well as deaf. She saw with her fingers. She could tell what I said by placing her finger tips on my lips. All the great experts said she could not possibly be taught to speak. She determined to speak, however, and she succeeded so well that she can address great audiences. Mrs. Macey is almost as wonderful as Miss Keller. Both Mrs. Macey and Helen Keller will speak in Massey Hall on January 9th.

A Eugenic Love Song.

Stick out your tongue, my love, and let me see
Once more its pink, uncoated loveliness.
Eugenia, healthy maid, each day I bless
The hour when first you felt the pulse of me!

Behold the birthday gift I bring to thee:
A brand-new stethoscope! Ah, nothing less!
But oh, my dear, it gives me great distress
To see you eat hot muffins with your tea!

Loved one, I know no other dame or maid
Whose bony conformation equals thine!
And when thine adenoids are cured next year
And my rheumatic ghosts have all been laid,
Eugenia, love, the doc will make you mine;
But pray be careful of your diet, dear.

—"New York Sun."

BANK OF COMMERCE IN GOOD POSITION

In common with the majority of banks reporting for 1912 the Canadian Bank of Commerce has issued the best report in its history. The report shows that net profits for the year increased from $2,811,00 in 1912, to $2,992,000 in 1913 which with the balance brought forward from Profit and Loss amounting to $771,000, makes $3,764,000 available for distribution. This has been apportioned as follows:

Dividend Disbursements at the regular rate of 10 per cent. with two bonuses of one per cent. each absorb $1,800,000.

Bank premises account took $500,000. Officers Pension Fund $80,000, while $1,000,000 was transferred to the Rest Account, leaving a balance to be carried forward of $384,000.

Not only were the shareholders well taken care of during the year, but they will be specially interested in seeing that the bank has a very large proportion of its assets in a quickly available form. Dominion Notes and Bullion held by the bank amounts to $30,415,000, an increase of $3,0000,000 over the previous year's holdings. Other quickly available assets in the form of notes and cheques on other banks call loans and Government and Municipal Securities, bring the total up to $97,300,000, or over 42 per cent. of the bank's total liabilities to the public. The total assets of the bank now stand at $260,030,000 as compared with $246,571,00 for the previous year. Deposits show a slight falling off, but this is accounted for by the fact that there were extraordinary demands for funds throughout the year.

The public, both at home and abroad, will find satisfaction in a perusal of the report as it indicates that the busines retrenchment proclaimed in money quarters as prevailing in Canada, has not existed to any material extent. The report of the Bank of Commerce shows no evidence of a period of financial stringency, the excellent crop in the West undoubtedly being a favorably factor in relieving the situation in so far as Canada was concerned.

UNION BANK STATEMENT

The 49th annual meeting of the Union Bank of Canada was held at Winnipeg on Dec. 17. Under the capable direction of the gentlemen identified with the institution, the Union was able, after deducting expenses of management, payment of interest due to depositors, making provision for bad and doubtful debts and for rebate on bills under discount, to show net profits of $750,095.27, being slightly over 15 per cent. on the paid-up capital, an increase of $43,623 over the year 1912. A close analysis of the official statement shows that business has been conducted on sound and conservative lines. Mr. C. H. Pennefather is the manager of the Peterboro branch, while the south end branch is in charge of Mr. D. C. MacRostie.

Farmer Kills Himself.

CORNWALL, Dec. 22.—Fred. Myers, a native of [illegible], committed suicide by hanging himself in a cow barn at his farm at Antwerp, following a murderous attack on his wife and a man named Daniel Gilligan, who had been asked by Mrs. Myers to stay in the house that night to protect the Myers family, which consists of Mrs. Myers and three small children. Myers had been acting strangely for a few weeks. He was a prosperous farmer, about 42 years of age.

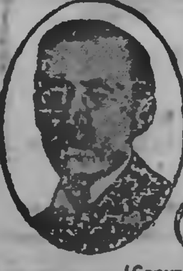
A SPLENDID HAZARD



By HAROLD MacGRATH

(Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.)

"That's the spirit." The admiral drew strongly on his cigar. He had really never been so excited since his first sea engagement. "And it comes in so pat, Laura. We were going away in a month anyway. Now we can notify the guests that we've cut down the time two weeks. I tell you what it [illegible] this will be the greatest cruise I ever laid a course to."

"Guests?" murmured Fitzgerald unconsciously poaching on Breitmann's thought.

"Yes; but they shall know nothing till we land in Corsica. And in a day or two this fellow would have laid hands on these things and we'd never been any the wiser."

"And may we not expect more of him?" said Breitmann.

"Small good it will do him."

"Corsica," repeated the girl dreamily.

"Aye, Napoleon. The Corsican brothers' daggers and vendetta, the restless island! It is full of interest. I have been there." Breitmann smiled pleasantly at the girl, but his thought was unsmiling. For some reason he would have given much to know Fitzgerald was covertly watching him.

"You have been there, too, have you not, Mr. Fitzgerald?" asked Laura.

"Oh, yes, but never north of Ajaccio."

"Laura, what a finishing touch this will give to my book!" For the admiral was compiling a volume of treasures found, lost and still being hunted. "All I can say is that I am really sorry that the money wasn't used for the purpose intended."

"I do not agree there," said Fitzgerald.

"And why not?" asked Breitmann.

"France is better off as she is. She has had all the empires and monarchies she cares for."

The secretary spread his fingers and shrugged. "If there was only a direct descendant of Napoleon!"

"Well, there isn't," retorted Fitzgerald, dismissing the subject into limbo. "And much good it would do if there was."

"This treasure would rightly be his," insisted Breitmann.

"It was put together to bring Napoleon back. There is no Napoleon to bring back."

"In other words, the money belongs to the finder?"

"Exactly."

CHAPTER X.

PREPARATIONS AND COGITATIONS.

THE girl could bring together no reasons for the thought that between the two young men there had risen an antagonism of some sort, nothing serious, but still armed with spikes of light in the eyes and a semitruculent angle to the chin. Fitzgerald was also aware of this apparency, and it annoyed him. Still, sometimes instinct guides more surely than logic. After all, he and Breitmann were only casual acquaintances. There had never been any real basis for friendship, and the possibility of this had been rendered nil by the telegram. One cannot make a friend of a man who has lied gratuitously.

"Now, Mr. Breitmann," interposed the admiral pacifically, for he was too keen a sailor not to have noted the chill in the air, "suppose we send off those letters. Here; I'll write the names and addresses and you can finish them up by yourself. Please call up my yacht master, Captain Flanagan, at Swan's hotel and tell him to report this afternoon." The admiral scribbled out the names of his guests, gathered up the precious documents and put them into his pocket. "Come along now, my children, we'll take the air in the garden and picture the Frenchman's brig rocking in the harbor."

"It is all very good of you," said Fitzgerald as the trio eyed the yacht from the terrace.

"Let me see," began the admiral, "there will be Mr. and Mrs. Coldfield, first class sailors, both of them. What's the name of that singer who is with them?"

"Hildegarde von Mitter."

"Of the royal opera in Munich?" asked Fitzgerald.

"Yes. Have you met her? Isn't she lovely?"

"I have only heard of her."

"And Arthur Cathewe," concluded the admiral.

"Cathewe? That will be fine," Fitzgerald agreed aloud. But in his heart he swore he would never forgive Arthur for this trick. And he knew all the time! "He's the best friend I have, a great hunter, with a reputation which reaches from the Carpathians to the Himalayas, from Abyssinia to the Kongo."

"He is charming and amusing, only he is very shy."

At 4 that afternoon Captain Flanagan presented his respects. The admiral was fond of his yacht captain, a friendship formed in the blur of battle smoke. He had often been criticised for officering his yacht with such a gruff, rather illiterate man when gentlemen were to be had for the asking. But Flanagan was a splendid seaman, and the admiral would not have exchanged him for the smartest English naval reserve afloat.

"Captain, how long will it take us to reach Funchal in the Madeiras?"

"Well, commodore, give us a decent sea an' we can make 'er in fourteen days. But I thought we wus goin' t' th' banks, sir?"

"Changed my plans. We'll put out in twelve days. Everything shipshape?"

"Up to the bustin', sir, and down to her keel. I sh'd say about 600 tons, an' mebbe twelve days instead of fourteen. An' what'll be our course after Madeery, sir?"

"Ajaccio, Corsica."

"Yessir."

If the admiral had said the antarctic Flanagan would never have batted an eye.

"You have spoken the crew?"

"Yessir; deep sea men, too, sir. Halloran 'll have th' injins as us'l, sir. Shall I run 'er up t' N' York fer provisions? I got your list."

"Triple the order. I'll take care of the wine and tobacco."

"All right, sir."

"That will be all. Have a cigar."

"Thank you, sir. What's the trouble?" extending a pudgy hand toward the chimney.

"I'll tell you all about that later. Send up that man Donovan again." It occurred to the admiral that it would not be a bad plan to cover Mr. Donovan's palm. They had forgotten all about him. He had overheard.

This long time Breitmann had dispatched his letters and gone to his room, where he remained till dinner. He was a servant in the house. He must not forget that. He had been worse things than this, and still he had not forgotten. He had felt the hirsh of shame, yet he had remembered, and white anger had embossed the dull scars. It was impossible that he should forget.

With what infinite care and patience had he gained this place! What struggles had ensued! Like one of yonder birds he had been blown about, but even with his eyes hunting for this resting. He had found it and about lost it. A day or so later! He had come to rob, to lie, to pillage, any method to gain his ends, and fate had led him over this threshold without dishonor, ironically. Even for that, thank God!

In his hand, tightly clutched, was a ball of paper, damp from the sweat of his palm. He had gnawed it; he had pressed it in despair. Cathewe was a man, and he was not afraid of any man living. Besides, men rarely became tellers of tales. But the woman, Hildegarde von Mitter! How to meet her, how to look into her great eyes, how to bear the sound of her voice!

He flung the ball of paper into the corner. She could break him as one breaks a dry and brittle reed.

Verona's Amphitheater.

More than 15,000 people were turned away from the performances of "Aida" recently given in the Roman amphitheater at Verona in honor of the Verdi centenary. This amphitheater holds 30,000. There are more than 800 performers in the orchestra. The scenery for the amphitheater cost nearly $100,000. The artists' dressing rooms are subterranean chambers which the gladiators used in ancient times.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Dry Hair.

Many women are troubled with dry hair and would like to know how to relieve this condition. First try shampooing once every two weeks with an egg shampoo. Then twice a week rub into the scalp, being careful not to touch the hair more than is absolutely necessary, a bit of white vaseline which has been gently heated until liquid.

Salt is good for lusterless hair. Rub it well into the roots of the hair at night, then tie the hair up in a large handkerchief or wear a nightcap. Brush out the salt in the morning. Several applications of this treatment will bring about a great improvement in the appearance of the hair.

HEADACHES ALMOST DROVE HER WILD

Until A Friend Advised Her To Use "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., May 29th. 1913.

"About four years ago, I was in a dreadful run-down condition, weak and hardly able to walk up stairs. Weakness peculiar to women was the chief trouble. I had Headaches that almost drove me wild, and most distressing constipation. I took many dollars' worth of medicine from the doctors without any good results.

A neighbor advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they proved to be the best medicine I ever got and the only medicine to do me any good. Today, I feel as a young girl, and am able to go about my household duties as usual. My health is splendid and "Fruit-a-tives" is the cause of it". MRS. WM. CRIM.

Captain Washed Overboard.

HALIFAX, Dec. 22.—The Nova Scotia schooner, John Parker, from Barbados, arrived here with her flag at half-mast yesterday, for the loss of her captain, James Richards, Lahave, who was swept overboard and drowned on the passage. On Dec. 11 Captain Richards was taking his reckoning when a heavy sea broke over the ship, carrying the captain overboard. The captain's son was at the wheel at the time, and shouted a warning to his father, but it came too late.

Looped Loop In Whirlwind.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—A French aviator named Rost was caught in a whirlwind at a height of over 14,000 feet and looped the loop, not once, but 20 times. An official of the French Aero Club, who was watching the flight says Rost was attempting to beat the world's height record. After tumbling down and turning this extraordinary series of somersaults, Rost's machine regained a normal position, and the pilot was able to bring it safely to earth.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

What Progressive Farmers say about Good Roads

THE following reproduced testimonials have been selected at random from many hundreds, and show conclusively the consensus of opinion among farmers who have good roads over which to haul their produce, and one who hasn't.

A Washington Farmer's Indorsement

Enthusiastic Testimony from Lauderdale County, Mississippi.

The surest evidence of a Satisfied, Progressive Farmer.

Mr. Joe Clark, who lives on an improved road, makes the following statement -

"I live four miles from the city and two miles from the school. This has been the worst winter that [illegible] ever seen, but there hasn't been a single day that my children haven't walked to school and not a single day have they come home with wet feet- and to think, they walked down the middle of the road. Not one of them has been sick with a cold even, while heretofore my doctor bills have been more than my road tax. Talk to me about paying taxes to build roads. I am willing to pay taxes on my pack of fox hounds, my bird dogs, my chickens, my horses, and if necessary, my wife and children, if they will use it in extending roads like this all over the county. I would rather have my house and ten acres of land on this road like it is now than have my whole farm on the old road like it was before improvement."

Mr. Edward N. Hines,
Board of County Road Commissioners,
Wayne County, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir,-

Our concrete roads are the climax of the expectations of the majority of us farmers. There we used to be two days marketing fifty bushels of produce, we now market twice as much in one day, and can go to the city any time we want to. We do not have to wait till the roads are good so we can go. Also, our horses and wagons will last twice as long.

Hoping you will keep right on building these roads, and that the county will stand back of this movement, I remain,

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) Geo. W. [illegible]

Redford, Wayne County, Mich.

From an advocate of Good Roads who lives on a bad one—

Mr. Charley Odom, who is a farmer and merchant on the Meridian road in Lauderdale County, Mississippi, which has not been improved, plainly evidences his dissatisfaction with the road conditions with which he has to deal. Mr. Odom says -

"There hasn't been a time since the first of December that I have been able to get anything hauled to my place from Meridian, just four miles, for less than 35 cents per hundred. In the majority of instances it has cost me as high as 50 cents and a good many times it has been impossible to get it at any price. The people in my community have actually had to go without oil for their lamps for a week at a time because they couldn't get it. If these conditions are not a heavier tax on the people than paying for the construction of roads then I am a bad judge and a bad mathematician."

This evidence is given because these farmers, as well as every other person who has had an opportunity to use good roads, have found them eminently satisfactory in every respect, from the view points of both utility and economy.

Once built, a concrete road is permanent. It is safe, clean, passable at all times, free of ruts and holes, requires practically no upkeep, and is cheaper in the matter of dollars and cents at the end of ten, fifteen or twenty years than any other method of road construction.

The fullest information about concrete roads will be sent you upon request. Simply ask for Good Roads literature, or send the coupon.

OMEMEE NEWS

Special Correspondence.

OMEMEE, Dec. 23.—Mr. C. R. Courtney of Mount Pleasant made a business call on Monday.

Mr. Fred Clarke arrived home the first of last week from British Columbia, and is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. Clarke.

Schools closed on Friday afternoon with a concert, and some tangible token of good cheer the pupils felt the real Xmas spirit as they began the vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Parsons spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Toronto, where Mr. Parsons was on business.

The grandest, biggest, best ever given in Omemee, will be the Orange Concert on Xmas evening in Coronation Hall. The program is choice humor, and quite lengthy, with encores exacted every lover of humor should be satisfied. The seats are not reserved.

Many Omemeeites and people of the surrounding rural districts attended the Winter Fair at Lindsay on Tuesday. The weather was not on its best behavior, however, the excellence of the free fair more than made amends and everybody was happy.

The Public Library Board has secured the services of a brilliant lot of platform artists, who will give a concert in Coronation Hall on Jan. 21st. Note the date.

Mr. John G. Staples returned to his home at Bethany for the vacation.

Mr. Clifford Mulligan returned home on Thursday evening from Toronto, where he is attending Varsity. He will spend the Xmas recess with his parents, Reeve and Mrs. Mulligan.

Miss Nelta Thurston has gone to her home at Dunsford for the Xmas holidays.

On Thursday evening Mrs. J. C. Eaton of Toronto, and her sons, Masters Timothy and John David, arrived in Omemee in their private car, "Eatonia." They were guests of Mrs. Eaton's mother and sister, returning home on Saturday.

On Saturday Miss Morden took the "Flyer" for her home at Niagra Falls, where she will spend the Xmas season.

Miss Ola Earle has returned home from Albert College Belleville, where she has been a student.

Miss Wray left on Friday to spend the holiday season at her home in Lindsay.

The Epworth League held an entertainment and a Xmas tree on Thursday evening. The exercises gave much happiness to all who attended, especially the younger persons.

On Friday evening Miss Davidson took the evening train to her home in Toronto, where she will spend the festive season.

Our Municipal pot cannot be said to boil, but there are some bubbles appearing and about the 29th the evaporation process may reach its zenith.

Mrs. Jas. Gall has returned from a visit wiht out-of-town friends.

The Presbyterian Sabbath School had a tea, Xmas tree and entertainment on Friday evening. It was a real treat for the children to have a truly live Santa Caius unload the tree. The event caused much merriment and practical enthusiasm which should materially aid the cause.

Messrs. C. Best and H. Gardiner of Mount Pleasant, were in town on Friday.

The Presbyterians held a congregational meeting on Wednesday evening.

Miss Maude Handley was a visitor to Peterboro on Saturday.

Rev. Mr. Brown of Campbellford, was a guest at the Manse on Wednesday, of Rev. D. H. and Mrs. Currie.

The Presbyterians will hold their annual concert in Coronation Hall on New Year's night.

Some measurements and cost data of a new bridge across Pigeon River were taken last week by some outside gentlemen.

There has been some splendid skating during the past week and many have been indulging.

New books for the Public Library have been ordered. These will be put in circulation about the first of the year.

The Village and Township of Emily Councils held their last meetings of the year on the 15th inst.

Municipal nominations are announced for 29th inst., and polling on Jan. 5th.

We regret to learn that Mr. Chas. McCaffrey sustained so severe a fall in Lamb's tannery that the injury to his shoulder will incapacitate him for work for some time.

Messrs. W. Brown and L. Brooks are students at the School of Telegraphy at Lindsay.

One of our young men broke through the ice of the pond where the water was deep and sank to his shoulders, his arms on each side of the hole sustaining him till a companion, with much difficulty, rescued him. The consequent chill may deter him from further ventures on the ice. Skating is a splendid physical and most exhilarating exercise but it should be taken with caution.

Mr. Walker, a student of Knox College, preached morning and evening in the Presbyterian Church, and at Mount Pleasant in the afternoon of last Sunday.

Fresh Eruptions in New Hebrides.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Fresh eruptions have caused further destruction of life among the natives of the Island of Ambrim in the New Hebrides group, according to a report received yesterday from the French Ministry of Marine from the captain of the French gunboat Kersainten, on his arrival at Noumea, New Caledonia.

Dip Point, on the western coast of the island, has been buried beneath a heavy fall of cinders and many of the inhabitants are missing. Two local steamers rescued 1,300 natives. No Europeans or Americans have been injured or killed.

EARLY ARREST EXPECTED IN THE JOKINEN CASE

Inquest Into Death of Finnish Domestic is Opened in Toronto and Evidence of Man Who Identified Her is Taken---Police Refuse to Give Information But Are Working on Definite Line.

TORONTO, Dec. 23. — Coroner Crawford opened an inquest last night into the death of Anna Jokinen, the Finnish girl, who was found after an absence of over two weeks, beside a stook of corn on Forest Hill road Sunday afternoon. After the jury had viewed the remains and the evidence of Evard Jokinen, the man who identified the body as that of the girl in question, has been taken, the inquest was adjourned until Monday, Dec. 29.

Evard Jokinen, who roomed at the same house as Anna Jokinen, whom he had known in Finland since she was about six years of age, stated that he had last seen the girl alive at the rooming house, 46 Widmer street, on the evening of Dec. 4. She had left there in company with two other Finnish girls, Martha Blumquist and Kertu Arppe, and had gone to the Finnish Hall on West Adelaide street. The next evening, when he returned from work, Mrs. Flimk, the landlady, notified him that Anna was lost and that thus far they had been unable to locate her. The witness knew of no reason why the girl should run away, as she was quite happy, liked the place where she was working and seemed full of life. He had known the family of the girl for many years and knew of no eccentricities conected with it.

Although there is nothing definite as yet for publication, detectives assigned to the Jokinen case intimated last evening that they were working along definite lines, and unhesitatingly stated that the parties, if any, who are responsible for the death of the unfortunate girl will be rounded up before the resumption of the inquest.

"The public will readily understand that it would be, to say the least, foolish to disclose the results of yesterday's investigations," stated Provincial Detective William Greer last evening. "We are working along very promising clues, and there is little doubt that we will have matters cleared up before the next adjournment of the inquest."

Detective Greer is assigned on the case for the province, and Detective Wallace of the local force, for the city.

Mr. Greer stated last evening that the theory that the girl bad lived for any length of time in the corn stook where she was found, had been pretty well exploded. There is now little doubt in the minds of the police that the girl was murdered.

MILITANTS IN COURT

Misses "Red" and "Pink" Had Kerosene on Their Stocking

CHELTENHAM, Dec. 23. — "Miss Red" and "Miss Pink," two members of a militant suffragette "arson squad," who had eluded the police on many occasions, were brought up at the police court here yesterday, on a charge of setting fire to Alstons Lawn, a large mansion on the outskirts of this city.

The two women, who have been rechristened for police court purposes, as they had refused to reveal their names, were seen in the neighborhood of the burned building, and when arrested their stockings were found to be soaked with kerosene which had overflowed from the cans they had emptied on the woodwork of the mansion. They appeared in the prisoners' enclosure barefooted.

The accused were remanded.

Rumors of Suffragette Split.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Rumors were in circulation yesterday that relations were strained between Miss Sylvia Pankhurst and Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the two daughters of the militant leader, in consequence of Miss Sylvia's determination to concentrate her campaign in the east end of London and in efforts to cooperate with the members of the Labor party. Miss Christabel disapproves of this scheme and is said to be withholding funds.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, left London very quietly Sunday for Paris on the way to Switzerland to recuperate.

THE VATICAN IS WORRIED

Rampolla's Private Papers Cannot be Found

MILAN, Dec. 23.—The Chronicle's Milan correspondent says that consternation has been caused at the Vatican, not only by the mysterious disappearance of the late Cardinal Rampolla's will, but also by the abstraction of diplomatic documents of more extreme importance. Since the late cardinal left the state apartments at the Papal palace at the outset of the present pontificate, a number of confidential papers have found their way into the possession of persons outside the Curial circle.

Not long before his death Cardinal Rampolla was amazed at seeing a famous letter addressed to Cardinal Galimerti published textually in a volume of lay memoirs dealing with the political affairs of the late Pope. As only an old will of Rampolla's, drawn up twenty-six years ago, has been found, disposing of the Cardinal's personal fortune of $28,000 among Pope Leo XIII., various cardinals, members of his own family, and domestic servants, nearly all of whom long since dead.

While Cardinal Rampolla evidently attached no further value to this will, which came to light among a heap of discarded odds and ends, he carefully left in his personal writing desk a small key with a label affixed, on which was stated in the cardinal's handwriting that the key was that of a black box stored inside a wardrobe in his bedroom and containing his last will. Since then his villa has been ransacked in vain for the will.

At 10 cents a drink the United States liquor bill figures $859,300,000 for the year. And the value of all the bread made in the bakeries of the country was but $396,865,000.

FOX RANCH SELLS FOR $250,000

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Dec. 23.—The Tuplin fox deal, which has been under negotiation for some time, was closed yesterday.

James Tuplin of Black Bank, Prince county, has sold out his property, including fox ranch, farm residence and oyster area, to a syndicate of Boston, Toronto and Island capitalists for a quarter of a million dollars. The ranch contains twelve pairs of island black foxes and the farm includes land which will be devoted to cranberry culture. The woodland will furnish the branches used for collecting spot on the oyster beds.

Poor-Boxes His Speciality.

BUFFALO, Dec. 23. — Leonard Wintgens, aged 23, of Springfield, Ont., was arrested here shortly before noon yesterday on a charge of burglary in the first degree.

Wintgens, who confessed to having robbed poor-boxes in various churches throughout New York State of sums ranging from two to four dollars, was arrested by Patrolman Jordan while about to board the bumpers on a passenger train bound for Erie.

Witgens claims he robbed churches in Albany, Rochester, Hastings and Brooklyn.

Hit by Bucket; Man Killed.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Michael Rober, an employe of the Orpen Construction Co., was struck on the head by a bucket ful' of cement and instantly killed in a 65-foot sewer which the company are building at Pacific avenue and Bloor streets yesterday morning.

Krafchenko Again Remanded.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 23.—Jack Krafchenko appeared before Provincial Magistrate Bonnycastle yesterday morning charged with the murder of manager Arnold of the Bank of Montreal, at Plum Coulee, Man., and the theft of $4,749 from that institution. He was remanded for a week without pleading. Krafchenko has been held since his arrest on a charge of supplying a revolver illegally.

General Reprimand.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — President Wilson yesterday afternoon issued a general reprimand to officers of the army and navy responsible for the program at the recent Carabao dinner, where a burlesque of political affairs was put on.

FEDERAL JUDGES ARE EXEMPT FROM TAKES

Judgment For Plaintiff is Given in Test Action.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Judge McGibbon of Brampton has rendered a decision in favor of the plaintiff in the action brought by Judge Morson against the City of Toronto, to recover taxes paid by him under protest on his income received by him from the Dominion Government as a judge of the County Court of York. The judgment is of considerable importance to Dominion Government officials in Ontario at least, and will likely be followed all over Canada. Lengthy written arguments on all aspects of the question were submitted by R. A. Reid, counsel for Judge Morson, and by William Johnston and B. W. Essery, counsel for the City of Toronto.

Judge McGibbon holds that no authority can be found in the British North America Act authorizing the imposition of an income tax on Dominion Government officials by, or through municipalities under the authority of provincial legislation, and that under a Federal system of government such as obtains in Canada, one Government cannot tax another, nor tax the means and instrumentalities used by each, such as officials and employes engaged in maintaining and carrying on its powers and authority and the various departments of government, and executing and administering the law and other affairs of state.

He also holds that the Ontario Assessment Act does not authorize the imposition of any such tax on Federal officers, but that, on the contrary, the act impliedly exempts them from such tax, and does not apply to Canadian Government officials at all. He says the weight of judicial decision and authority is all against the contentions of the defendant, and the Privy Council decision relied upon by the City of Toronto is not applicable to the Canadian constitution.

When interviewed last night, City Solicitor Johnston said he had not yet received official notification of the judgment. He stated that it would be impossible for the city to appeal since the amount in question was less than $100. Until the text of the judgment was in his hands, Mr. Johnston stated that he would not be prepared to state what he would recommend the city to do as to the general proposition involved.

HARBORED A WOMAN

Prominent Lawyer's Death Reveals Secret Room.

MONTICELLO, N.Y., Dec. 23.—The death of Melvin H. Couch, a prominent lawyer and former district attorney of Sullivan county, revealed yesterday that unknown to his family and friends and to his clients, a woman had lived for three years in a secret room connecting with his law office. Couch was found lying dead on his office lounge.

Death was due to rupture of a blood vessel near the heart. In the next room crouched a frightened woman who admitted she had seen him die, but insisted she was not responsible for his death. She said she was Adelaide M. Brance of Goshen, N.Y., and that the secret room had been her only home during the three years.

Couch was 65 years of age. The woman is 40. Her hair has begun to turn grey. She was poorly dressed and the room where she lived was sparsely furnished with an old cook stove, a table, an iron bed and two chairs. She said she had lived there voluntarily and had never gone out in the daytime. At rare intervals she went for a walk at night.

The woman was held on a technical charge, but the coroner's verdict as to the cause of Couch's death supported her assertion that she was not responsible.

Express Car Burned.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 22.—While it is impossible to determine the exact loss, an estimate of $75,000 is placed on the damage done to a heavily laden express car, in an eastbound train over the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, which mysteriously caught fire while passing through East Lynn Saturday, driving the messenger, Charles Billings of Woonsocket, R. I., to the outside of the car, where he clung to chains, unable to notify the engineer, and nearly ready to collapse when the train reached here. Practically all the merchandise in the car was damaged.

TWENTY LOST

Destructive Fire in Georgetown, British Guinea.

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Dec. 23.—A large section of the business quarter of Georgetown, which is known also as Demara, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Twenty persons were killed and many injured. Scores were rendered homeless. A vast amount of sugar for exportation was burned, and a warehouse and many other buildings were destroyed.

Georgetown is the capital of British Guiana. Its population numbers 55,000, of whom 5,000 are whites.

TERM EXTENDED

Major-General Cotton to Retire After March Next Year.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—The period of tenure of the appointment of Major-Gen. Cotton as inspector general, is officially gazetted as extended to March 31 next. After that he will retire. It is understood that Brig.-Gen. Lessard now in command at Toronto, will be the next inspector-general.

Major F. D. Lafferty succeeds Col. F. M. Gaudet as superintendent of the Quebec Arsenal, who was retired as a result of the irregularities there. Major Lafferty has been made lieutenant-colonel.

Capt. Armand R. Lavergne, the well-known Quebec politician, has been appointed lieutenant-colonel and given the command of the 61st Regiment, De Montmagny. It is an infantry regiment. Col. Lavergne is an enthusiastic militia man.

GOOD POTATOES MAY ENTER.

U. S. Government After Conference Modifies Recent Embargo.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — Secretary Houston yesterday issued an order continuing the quarantine put temporarily into effect Sept. 20 last, forbidding potato importations from the British Isles, Canada, and all continental Europe. This action was modified, however, by a second order under which the quarantine may be raised, under proper regulation and inspection, for foreign countries or districts which can show that they are free from potato wart and powdery scab, the two diseases which the Department of Agriculture aims to keep out of the country. The first order becomes effective Dec. 24, but will admit until Jan. 15 next potatoes covered by consular invoices issued on or before Wednesday next. The second becomes effective Jan. 15 next.

Representatives of various countries affected appeared at hearings recently held at the department and protested against the quarantine.

In the case of certain provinces in Canada, and certain countries and districts of Europe, the officials here believe the absolute prohibition can be lifted in time to allow the movement of the present year's crop, under regulation and inspection, which, under the Secretary's order, is similar to that for nursery stock.

Latest Move in Thaw Case.

CONCORD, N.H., Dec. 23.—Certified copies of all records of the Matteawan Insane Hospital, relating to Harry Thaw since his commitment to that institution, have been requested of Wm. T. Jerome, special deputy attorney-general of New York, in the legal battle to secure Thaw's return to the New York jurisdiction. The request was made yesterday by the commission appointed by the Federal Court to determine whether Thaw's mental condition would make his release on bail a menace to public safety.

New Use For Wireless.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 23. — New use for the wireless equipment of Lackawanna trains had been found yesterday. An ambulance was waiting at the station when the flyer from New York pulled in here, a wireless message sent from the speeding train having informed hospital authorities of the illness of a passenger.

Special Prosecutor Asked.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — Premier Gouin, Attorney-General of the province, has been requested by the Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, to appoint a crown prosecutor to conduct the cases against the six men under arrest at Joliette in connection with the counterfeiting of $10 United States gold certificates.

PROPERTY IS PURCHASED

The Dominion Government Acquires Land on Waterfront

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—An important step has been taken by the Dominion Government in the purchase of three miles of waterfront at Quebec, which will be held in the general interest of the people of Canada. The cost of the property was a quarter of a million dollars.

Included in the three miles of property acquired is the whole of the Allan Steamship Co.'s waterfront. The purchase of the waterfront is a part of the scheme to develop the harbor of Quebec towards accommodating the growing traffic of the port.

This special purchase, it is stated, is only one of a number of similar purchases which will be made from time to time at harbors throughout the Dominion, the purpose of the Government being to encourage and develop ocean and inland water navigation.

One of the Ministers yesterday, in discussing the policy of the Government, said although he did not care to have his name quoted, "Transportation of all kinds it is our purpose to encourage. Good roads, good railways, good vessels everywhere—these are the big things to-day."

GOING HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

Hosts of Prosperous New Citizens Going to England.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—Never before have so many recently arrived Britishers returned to the old country to spend Christmas. Steamships have been loaded with them and every available accommodation has been utilized. The reason given by the Immigration Department is that they have plenty of money in their pockets, prospects in Canada this winter are not so good as usual, and they can have a pleasant holiday with the old folks.

"We are glad to see them go," said an immigration official ambiguously.

"Why? Because," he observed smiling, "they will be back here in a month or two and they will bring lots of their friends and relatives with them. They are the best class of people we get. We are glad to see them go back and bring more of their kind to Canada. Wait and see."

MAY BE LAW TO-DAY.

U. S. Currency Bill Accepted by House By a Big Majority.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — The House passed the conference report on the administration currency bill at 10.46 o'clock last night by a vote of 298 to 60, and sent the report to the Senate, which had waited in session to receive it before the adjournment for the night.

Prolonged and uproarious cheers from the Democrats greeted the announcement of the vote by Speaker Clark and many members of the House hastened over to the Senate to see the report received there. Earlier in the evening the Senate had agreed to vote not later than 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, and the leaders regarded it as certain that the completed bill would be in the hands of President Wilson for his signature before to-night.

School teachers in Cincinnati will soon receive an increase of 10 per cent. in their salaries.

LABOR PARTY IS VICTORIOUS

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Final figures of the New South Wales general election returns show that the Labor party has secured a sweeping victory. The new Parliament is composed of 50 Labor, 38 Liberals, including six who were candidates put forward by farmers and settlers' associations, and two independents. Mining constituencies returned ten Labor, wheat farming districts sent 12 Liberals, and 9 Labor members. The pastoral vote elected 7 Labor, and the dairying interests 11 Liberals and 2 Independents.

Explosion on Royal Train.

ROSTOCK, Mecklenburg, Schwerin, Dec. 23.—An explosion occurred on the Russian court special train at the railroad station here, just before the arrival of Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, who left Copenhagen yesterday for St. Petersburg. Seven members of the train crew were injured.

According to the official account the explosion was caused by a defect in the lighting apparatus.

Gold King's Condition Critical.

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 23. — Sir Lionel Phillips, the leading gold mine operator of South Africa, who was shot Dec. 11 by an assassin, is in dangerous condition. The bullet was extracted from his right lung yesterday. It proved a long and difficult operation, under which it was feared he might succumb. The operation was successful, but the patient is suffering intense pain and is in a weakened condition.

Life Without Brain.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Before the Academy of Sciences last night Dr. Robinson reported a case in which life was sustained when a great part of the brain had been destroyed. The case was that of a man 62 years of age, whom he treated for a year for an apparently slight wound of the occiput. During this time the patient showed no signs of brain trouble, but the autopsy revealed the presence of an abscess which had reduced the brain tissue to a mere shell.

Bennett Burleigh Retires.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Bennett Burleigh, the famous war correspondent of The London Telegraph, is retiring. In the American Civil War he was once condemned to death, but he points out nowadays that the sentence was never executed. During the same period he was held a prisoner for some time in Toronto jail.

Mr. Burleigh is a familiar figure at the Bisley July meeting and is well known to many Canadians.

No Definite Stand Likely.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 23.—Although Postmaster-General Burleson in his annual report favored the principle of Government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines, President Wilson has not taken a position on the question and has not yet made up his mind. It is not believed that the administration will take any definite position on the subject now.

Christmas Tree Caused His Death.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 23. — A Christmas tree, which Michael Mahorcic of Steelton was carrying over his shoulders, prevented him from seeing a train as he was crossing the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks yesterday and he was struck and instantly killed. The accident occurred near his home. Mahorcic was 56 years of age and left a family.

Improved sanitation methods introduced at the instance of an American have cut down the prevalence of malaria and other diseases in Jerusalem.

HUERTA CHECKS RUN.

Dictator Gives Banks a Long Legal Holiday.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 23.—By a Presidential decree issued yesterday afternoon every day, including to-day, until the end of the present year, is made a legal holiday in order to check the run on the banks here, particularly that on the Bank of London and Mexico.

On the promulgation of this decree the Bank of London and Mexico opened its doors but refrained from paying deposits.

Provisional President Huerta in the decree says he deems such action necessary in order to protect the banks until public confidence is more nearly restored. The banks, by this decree, are absolved from meeting any obligations until Jan. 2. It applies to all banking houses, whether a bank of issue or not.

With the exception of the Bank of London and Mexico and the Central Bank, none has yet taken advantage of the decree, and business at the other institutions is being conducted as usual. Crowds gathered about the doors of the two banks mentioned but there was no disorder. Both banks are being guarded by a strong force of police.

HUMOR THAT SNAPPED THE TENSION AND SAVED THE DAY

Many a time has the sense of humor which is the heritage of the sons of Uncle Sam been as a sheet anchor to them. Danger deadly enough to make the bravest pause has lost its terror when touched by this saving grace.

"I remember well how a timely bit of pleasantry in a moment of deadly peril turned utter defeat into victory for us at Port Republic, considered by Stonewall Jackson the most desperate of all his desperate battles," said an old veteran of the "Stonewall" brigade of the Confederate army.

"General Shields' line of battle, composed of the flower of the Union troops then in the Shenandoah valley, stood with its right flank resting on the Shenandoah river and its left clutching firmly to the steep shoulder of the Blue Ridge mountains; stood there like the mountain ridge itself, not to be moved, not to be flanked. High on the slope above and in front of the left wing a well posted battery of eight powerful field guns poured destruction into the Confederate lines.

"Stonewall Jackson must have those guns. Not only was this necessary to victory, but also to save himself from complete defeat, for to attempt to withdraw his army by the [illegible] fire meant ruin. Already two Georgia regiments had hurled themselves against the battery and then reeled, crushed, to the rear. General Taylor's Texans, veterans of San Jacinto in the Mexican war, had twice stormed up the steep slope to the muzzles of the guns, only to stagger back, leaving half of their officers on the field.

To us, lying in reserve, in view of that bloody mountain side, there galloped up an aide from General Jackson.

"'Charge that battery and take it!' he shouted to our commanding officers, pointing to the bristling guns. 'General Jackson says he must have those guns—he must have them!'

"A murmur ran down our line. None, neither friend nor foe, ever accused the Stonewall brigade of being afraid, but when we looked up at those grisly guns, yawning, black mouthed, beneath their smoke canopy; when our eyes swept up that fatal slope, now gray with southern dead, we came about as near knowing fear as ever a soldier wishes.

"And just then there came from a lank and ragged private in the front ranks the drawling words:

"'Say, boys, let's we-all-l-l chip in an' buy them air guns for Ole Jack!'

"A roar of laughter rolled rioting down the line, snapping the tension. The commanding officers, seizing the opportune instant, started the charge. The gray lines, close on their heels, swept up the slope, laughing, shouting, falling, yelling, dying—to victory!

"A little timely humor had saved the day for the Confederate army!"—New York Times.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 80 cars, comprising 1450 cattle, 92 calves, 1120 hogs and 466 sheep and lambs.

Butchers.

Good steers and heifers, $7 to $7.90; medium, $6.50 to $7; common, $5 to $6; good butcher cows, $6 to $6.75; medium, $5.25 to $5.50; canners, $3.50 to $4.25; good bulls, $6 to $6.75; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; common, $4.50 to $5.

Stockers and Feeders.

Good steers, $6.50 to $6.75; common, $5.60 to $5.75; rough, common stockers, $4.75 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

There were few of these on the market. The demand is good, the right kind bringing in the neighborhood of $90. Poorer types range from $50 up.

Veal Calves.

Calves of good quality are scarce. Medium kinds brought $10 per cwt., and good animals would bring a considerably higher figure.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices of these were firm. Ewes averaged about $6 per cwt.; culls and rams, $2.50 to $4.50, and lambs, $8.50 to $8.80.

Hogs.

Hogs were quoted lower, at $8.60, fed and watered, and $8.25 f.o.b.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, offerings this morning were 1500 cattle, 1150 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 400 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, prices being well maintained at the advance noted a week ago. A feature of the receipts was the number of northwest range cattle on the market, the quality of which was generally good, and they met with a good demand.

The supply of sheep and lambs was somewhat larger than it has been lately, but in spite of this fact the tone of the market was very firm. Choice milk fed calves were rather scarce, while the enquiry was good.

There was no further change in the market for hogs, prices being firm.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.75 to $9; do. medium, $6.75 to $8.25; do. common, $5.50 to $6; canners, $4.50 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do. medium, $6.25 to $6.50; do. bulls, $5.25 to $6.75; milkers, choice, each, $90 to $95; do. common and medium, each, $60 to $85; springers, $70 to $75; sheep, ewes, $5.50 to $6; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.25; lambs, $8.75 to $9; hogs, f.o.b., $9 to $8.50; calves, $5 to $20.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Cattle—Receipts, 17,000; market steady. Beeves, $6.70 to $9.70; Texas steers, $6.70 to $7.75, stockers and feeders, $5 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $3.25 to $8.50; calves, $8 to $10.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 34,000; market unsettled; light, $7.35 to $7.70; mixed, $7.45 to $7.80; heavy, $7.45 to $7.85; rough, $7.45 to $7.55; pigs, $6.50 to $7.65; bulk of sales, $7.55 to $7.80.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 18,000; market higher; native, $4.40 to $5.75; yearlings, $5.50 to $6.80; lambs, native, $6.40 to $8.

Famine Origin of Game.

Herodotus learned from the Lydians that the Greek ball game originated in a prolonged famine in Lydia. For some time they endured it, but at last they invented dice, knucklebones, the ball and all other games except draughts. One day they played these games so as to keep their minds off food; the next day they took food and did not play. This alternation eked out their provisions for eighteen years, at the end of which time, the situation still being desperate, half the population emigrated. One can only suppose that the ball games were not very athletic, otherwise the increased appetite given by them must have undone much of the saving.

An Expert in Handwriting.

Mother was fair, but she wishes to be fairer still. Adorned by nature, she sought further beautification. Loveliness was her great goal.

Invited out for dinner, she stood before the mirror and proceeded to apply the pencil to her eyebrows. This, it may be remarked, is an age of artificiality, and mother had reached this age.

The little daughter stood by and wondered. Finally she asked:

"Mother, what are you writing on your face for?"

HOW SCOTSMEN MARRY

CURIOUS LAWS AND CUSTOMS IN THE LAND OF CAKES.

The Old Gretna Green Weddings, Which Consisted of a Mere Declaration Before the Village Blacksmith, Have Passed and the Scottish Laws Governing Matrimony Are Highly Intricate.

If you ask anyone, layman or lawyer, outside of Scotland to give you a correct definition of the marriage laws of Scotland, there is the ten-to-one chance that he will be unable to do so. People have been heard to gravely declare that if a person, even in jest, introduced a lady as his wife to somebody else in Scotland, they were thereby tied together in matrimonial bonds. Others who do not "joke with difficulty" have been heard to state their belief that many Scots do not know whether they are married or single! Such matrimonial travesties may have had some semblance of reality in the romantic days of Gretna Green, when runaway couples were united in wedlock by the village blacksmith, but in these days a higher standard is placed upon the ceremony of marriage, both by the civil law and the law of the church.

Only the other day an important point arising out of evidence given by a Scottish minister at a bigamy trial in London was settled by the Registrar-General for Scotland, who has laid it down that "witnesses are essential" to the due observance of a Scottish marriage. The essence of the Scots' law is that marriage is essentially a civil contract. Thus, if two parties in the presence of witnesses solemnly and deliberately say to each other, "You are my wife," "You are my husband," they are as indissolubly married as if the whole ceremony of banns, clergyman, and marriage lines had been gone through. No need, therefore, for anxiety on the marriage day about mistakes in these formalities; the want of any or all of them does not in the least impair the validity of the marriage. Or again, if a man and woman write, say, on the fly-leaf of a Bible the words, "I take you, A, for my wife," and "I take you, B, for my husband," respectively, and add their signatures, both intending to marry, they are as firmly knit as if they had been wedded by the Archbishop of Canterbury. Such are the unromantic facts of a Scottish marriage.

The propriety of allowing marriages to be effected in this simple way without the safeguard of any religious ceremony has often been questioned, but the fact remains that the Legislature allows it and that "it is suited," as one authority has said "to the Scottish national character and circumstances." It cannot be said, however, that such marriages are regarded with favor either by the law or by public opinion.

Another interesting point cropped up the other day when a minister refused to marry any couple whose names had been published on the registrar's board instead of having been proclaimed in the parish church. He did not object to the registrar's certificate on the ground that proclamation in the church was a guarantee of greater publicity, but simply that it was a prerogative of the minister that he was not obliged to marry parties unless after proclamation of banns. In olden days the fees charged by church officials or kirk session for proclamations of banns were very heavy. An ordinary charge was $5 to $7.50, but sometimes it rose as high as $10. After the Marriage Notice Act of 1878 came into operation (for the express purpose of encouraging regular marriages), the church had to set its house in order, and in 1880 an act was passed by the General Assembly, in which it was decreed that the fee for proclamation of banns and certificates should in no case exceed 60 cents. When originally instituted, proclamation of banns was made on three successive Sundays preceding the marriage, but it is now sufficient if proclamation is made on one Sunday "for the first, second, and third times."

Dissenters of strong opinions like to show their independence by patronizing the registrar rather than the Clerk of the Kirk-Session, but the women still have the preference to be "cried in the kirk." The marriage "lines" are issued by the session clerk or the registrar, as the case may be, and the minister of any church can carry through all the formalities of the marriage at the bride's home or in an hotel. A small party of relatives, or a large assembly, is gathered, according to the accommodation of the house and the means at disposal. The more fashionable have their weddings about noon or two o'clock. But a great number of marriages take place in the evenings about seven or eight o'clock. Among the working classes Friday evening is the popular time, and in Glasgow and the other great towns the last Friday of the year sees as many weddings as any ordinary month. In recent years in Scotland marriages in church have become quite common among the "better class" people, but it is not often that a couple belonging to the artisan population are wedded in church.

As is the case in England, civil marriages are greatly on the increase in Scotland. They provide a lucrative business for a certain class of solicitors in large towns.

WHERE MONEY IS USELESS.

Ascension Island Has None and Has No Need For It.

The island of Ascension, in the Atlantic, belonging to Great Britain, is of volcanic formation, eight miles by six in size, and has a population of about 450. It was uninhabited until the confinement of Napoleon at St. Helena when it was occupied by a small British force. It is 280 miles northwest of St. Helena. Vast numbers of turtles are found on its shores, and it serves as a depot and watering place for ships.

Ascension is governed by a captain appointed by the British admiralty. There is no private property in land, no rents, no taxes and no use for money. The flocks and herds are public property, and the meat is issued as rations. So are the vegetables grown on the farms. When an island fisherman makes a catch he brings it to the guardroom, where it is issued by the sergeant major. Practically the entire population are sailors, and they work at most of the common trades. The muleteer is a Jack tar; so is the gardener; so are the shepherds, the stock men, the grooms, masons, carpenters and plumbers. Even the island trapper who gets rewards for the tails of rats is a sailor.

The climate is almost perfect, and anything can be grown.—London Family Herald.

Hard to Suit.

"Maria," sharply asked Mr. Dorkins, "is that worthless young whipper snapper of a Dick Doogood still coming to see Bessie?"

"What do you mean by talking that way, John?" said Mrs. Dorkins. "He hasn't been here in six weeks."

"Hasn't he? Is the scoundrel trifling with her affections?"

A Lack of Foresight!

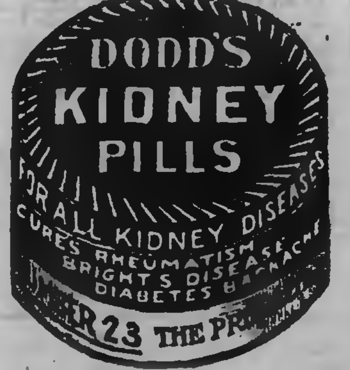
The primary teacher asked for volunteers in story telling or singing, and one little girl finally offered her services. She came to the front of the room and after standing quietly for a moment, turned to the teacher and remarked:

"Gee! I wish I had kept still."

Her Revenge.

A lawyer asked a woman in the witness box her age, and she promptly replied:

"Old enough to have sold milk for you to drink when a baby, and I haven't got my money yet."



TO THE RATEPAYERS — OF — Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

There are certain matters about which one may not promise, but decently try.

Take the block, north Brock and east Aylmer Streets. For fifty years it has been an eye-sore. Never built on, practically shunned. Within a block of the centre of the city. Now why?

Because of the creek.

The rights of improvement on and along the creek remain with the property owners—not to the city. The city should get the right, deepen the bed, wall along each side, fill in behind. Then it can be built across and practically blotted out. Bring in a revenue from taxes, which is not now the case to any extent.

I propose—if elected—to see what can be done. It may not come about at first try, but a little pushing may presently carry it through. I will provide the push.

And in the meantime, if you approve, you might say so by your vote in my favor.

Yours respectfully,

THE MAYORALTY

VOTE FOR
Wm. BULLER
THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR FOR 1914.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate, for

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of municipal ownership and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,
J. J. HARTLEY

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Your votes are earnestly desired in favor of Jos. W. Worth, as Alderman for this Ward.

Respectfully, JOS. W. WORTH

To Electors of CENTRE WARD

Having decided to offer my services as Alderman for No. 2 or Centre Ward, at the request of a large number of ratepayers I pledge myself, if elected, to assist in the administration of the city's affairs to the best of my ability. My platform briefly is Lower Taxation. Careful scrutiny of city's finances. Advancement of city's Industrial interest. Extension of the present Street Paving scheme; and all things calculated to make Peterborough a bigger and better city.

Soliciting your vote and influence.

Yours for a bigger and better city.

OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED AT ANNUAL MEETING OF BALL CLUB

All the officers and directors of the Peterborough Baseball Club were re-elected at the annual meeting, held last night in the Bank of Montreal chamber and the ball was started rolling again toward another championship battle. Dr. Wightman withdrew from the Board of Directors and Mr. C .G. Graham was elected to fill the vacancy.

The officers and directors follow:

Pres.—W. H. Denham.
Vice.-Pres.—E. G. Patterson.
Sec.-Treas.—E. T. Carr.

The directorate: Messrs. P. Trebilcock, E. Desautel, Jas. Lynch, W. H. Bradburn, C. G. Graham, the President and the Vice President.

The financial statement was adopted as read. Messrs. W. C. Ackerman and B. A. Rose were reappointed auditors.

As for the prospects for this season, they are to a large extent in the hands of the very large majority of the citizens who last season, saw Dave Hilliard pull off a thriller in the middle garden and then nail a runner coming home, or saw some other player contribute a play that made the grandstand sit up and take notice.

It takes a lot of money to run a baseball team and there are a number of men who have contributed handsomely in an endeavor to give Peterboro a good team composed of players who besides giving a good account of themselves, on the diamond, would conduct themselves as gentlemen and good sports. They have been quite successful and it is quite safe to say that Peterboro people want the game to continue here.

They are looking for a baseball team next season, but if their expectations are to be realized, the finances of the club must be increased by at least $2,000. From now on the object of the directors will be to secure funds. It is to be hoped that they will meet with success.

Now that we have been initiated, we want some more of it. There would be gloom indeed if the ball lot were silent next summer. Peterboro too, would not be half so prominent on the map and that would never do. As an advertising medium, the baseball team would be hard to beat.

CURLING CLUB MEMBERSHIP

Twelve New Members Added to the Roll.

The Curling Club met last night in the rink and twelve new members were balloted for and passed. The committee of management met afterwards and went over a draft of the rules to regulate the inter-rink matches to be played this winter. This set of rules and the schedule will be published in the course of a few days.

The rink is in fair shape for ice, lacking only the cold weather. If that comes there will be matches on Christmas.

HARRY BRANT HERE ON VISIT

He Has His Contract for Next Season and Also a Xmas Gift

It is litle wonder that the weather man changed his delivery today for instead of hockey players being around, one of our baseball players drifted back. This one is none other than the peppery little shortstop. Harry Brant. Harry came up for Christmas season, and no doubt will be around for a few days. He came from his home in Brunswick, Ohio.

Brant's speed was far too good for him to stay in this league so he was drafted by Chatanooga Club of the Southern league. Harry McCormick, the famous pinch hitter of the New York Giants, in the fall accepted the management of this club. He sent Brant his contract for next year, and a few days ago Harry was the recipient of a safety rasor from McCormick as a Christmas gift.

SPORTING NOTES

The executive and one representative from each team of the Mercantile League are reminded of the very important meeting to be held tonight in The Review Office. It is called for eight o'clock.

East Kennebunk, Me., Dec. 23.—Pitcher Jack Coombs of the Athletics, arrived at his home here today to recuperate after his long illness. He said he wouldn't accompany the world's champions on their spring training trip, but hope to be able to join them next June.

Los Angeles, Dec. 23.—Jim Jeffries is making preparations to go around the world. He has no idea of fighting again, but may fill theatrical engagements in Australia.

San Francisco, Dec. 23.—Gunboat Smith is a ten-to-eight favorite in the betting for his twenty-round battle with Arthur Pelky here New Year's Day.

Los Angeles, Dec. 23.—Betting here today favored Leach Cross at odds of ten to seven for his bout with Bud Anderson on New Year's day at Vernon.

A Prophetic Dream.

One of the most inexplicable forms of dream is the prophetic one, instances of which abound. The late Lord Dufferin when in Paris dreamed one night that he was in a hearse en route for the cemetery. A day or so later he was entering the lift at a hotel when he recognized the attendant as the driver of the hearse in his dream. He stepped back and the lift ascended without him. As it neared the top something broke, and it crashed to the bottom again, killing every one in it.

FOOTBALL MAKING

Work That Requires Powerful Hands and Arms.

THE PIGSKIN IDEA IS WRONG.

That Brand of Hide Is Never Used, the Finest Balls Taking Calf or Cow Skin and the Cheaper Grades Sheepskin. The Bladders Are Made of Rubber.

That phrase so much used in the football season, "chasing the pigskin," involves a popular error. The football is not made of pigskin, but of the hide of the calf or cow and for the cheaper variety the skin of the sheep. Footballs of the ordinary grade are made in this country, but some of the finest, sold to those who are not particular about price, are imported from England, where the industry was an old one before it was started in America.

The making of a football is almost entirely a male industry. The only share that women have in the work is seen when one first enters a football factory. At long tables girls sit pasting linings on sections of the footballs cut in another part of the factory. It is work that a girl is particularly fitted for, as the linings must be carefully fastened to the rough leather and smoothed until there is not a sign of a bubble or rough place on the surface of the lining.

The first step in the making of a football is to select the leather. Only the best of picked skins are used, and each skin is carefully gone over for defects before being cut into the necessary sections. This is done by machinery, and the sections are then sent to the room in which the girls are at work for the lining to be pasted on.

Then the lined sections are sent to the sewing room and the linings are stitched together, bringing the outer covering of the football into position for the final stitching. This is done by a machine that turns the footballs out stitched in the seams but wrong side out. They must then be turned right side out, a job that is left to men who do nothing else all day long but reverse the leather covers by hand, a work that requires great strength and endurance and gives the workers a prodigious amount of pulling power in the muscles of the arms and hands.

When the cover is pulled right side out the outer part of the football is finished ready for the inflation. The bladder is inserted and blown up, and the ball is then stamped on a hot press and worked up until the surface is perfectly smooth and free from rough spots. The ball is then deflated and placed aside for shipment.

Balls intended for the soccer game or for basket ball are also made in the way described. A new idea recently applied to the making of the football is to provide a ball suited to the rough treatment inseparable from play on the stone flagged or asphalted pavement of the school playground. It was found that the finely finished football intended for use on a grass covered field could not stand the hard usage received during practice in the school yard, and a football was therefore devised especially for this rough work, with the seams stitched on the outside instead of the inside. Sewing the seams from the outside provided a ridge that protects the ball when kicked and bounced in a paved court and makes the cost of the footballs used in a season somewhat less than when the finely finished oval of the gridiron grounds is used.

The origin of the term "kicking the pigskin" was explained by one of the authorities in this way: "Years ago, when the game was in its early stages in England, the inflation was done by means of a bladder of a pig. In those old days the skin of the pig was actually subjected to the indignity of being propelled high in the air by the toe of a football player, but as the bladder is no longer used the term has ceased to apply.

The bladders are now made of the best Para rubber. The regulation football weighs from thirteen and a quarter to fourteen ounces. The soccer ball weighs from thirteen to fifteen ounces. One cannot definitely predict the life of a football, but the makers say the hardest kicking should fail to retire the ball in less than two years.

It may not be generally known that football has a patron saint. In 1320 a boy named Hugh had the misfortune to kick a football through a window of the house of a neighbor, who became so incensed at the damage done that he stabbed the boy to death. The populace avenged the boy's death by killing his slayer and then exalted the name of the unfortunate boy by calling him "Saint Hugh."—New York Sun.

Saving Himself.

Murphy was assistant cook on board a "trooper" ship bound for India. The first morning he forgot to wash the boiler out after breakfast. Consequently there were tea leaves on the surface of the soup when dinner was served. To clear himself of blame he went to the respective messes and said:

"If yez foind any tay laves in the soup you'll know it's mint."—London Globe.

A Disadvantage.

Lady—I wish you would paint me a storm at sea. Marine Painter—Impossible, madam! "But other artists paint storms at sea." "Yes, but I've seen one."

A covetous man makes no friends. Cingalese Proverb.

Strength of Eggshells.

Most people are aware of the power of eggshells to resist external pressure on the ends, but not many would credit the results of tests recently made, which appear to be genuine. Eight ordinary hens' eggs were submitted to pressure applied externally all over the surface of the shell, and the breaking pressures varied between 400 and 675 pounds per square inch. With the stresses applied internally to twelve eggs these gave way at pressures varying between thirty-two and sixty-five pounds per square inch. The pressure required to crush the eggs varied between forty and seventy-five pounds. The average thickness of the shells was thirteen-thousandths of an inch.

No Scarcity of Labor.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 23. — A report reached the city yesterday morning that in Winnipeg, where soup kitchens have been established, advertisement is made that there is plenty of work in St. Catharines on the Welland ship canal.

Similar advertisement is being made in London, Eng., to the effect that a second Panama Canal is being built here and that 12,000 men are wanted.

While men are being placed at work daily, there will be no occasion for any great influx of laborers for a few months. Several who have arrived in anticipation of employment have found that they came too soon.

Must Maintain Standard.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Arthur Myers, ex-Minister of Finance in New Zealand, speaking here yesterday, discussed the question of Asiatic immigration.

They were determined the standard of living should not be lowered by Asiatics. The time had come when New Zealand should have her own navy and in time of war that navy would be placed under the control of the British Admiralty. The dominions whose shores were washed by the Pacific should unite to police the Pacific Ocean and so relieve the Mother Country of the duty of safeguarding trade routes in those waters.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE POWER QUESTION

To the Editor of The Review:
Sir,—

It is possible that the Government may get the city out of the box that it appears to be in over the expropriation. If the government takes the dam it must be not for Peterboro only, but for public purposes anywhere. This will relieve the local situation however, and the minds of those who fear big purchases and lawsuits.

Yours truly,
READER.

THE REMARKABLE WILL OF REV. FATHER BROPHY

The will of the late Father Geo. Cummings Butler Dwyer Brophy, who lived at St. Mary's-of-the-Lake Orphanage, Kingston, and who died a short time ago, disposes of an estate valued at $158,356.64, and divided in the following manner:

1. To my nephew, Frank Ryan, $1,200.

3. To my niece, Catherine Brophy $1,200.

3. To my niece, Catherine Brophy $75 per year for and during her natural term of life.

5. To my brother, John Brophy, $2,000, with the particular hope and request that at his death he will bequeath $1,000, of the same to his only daughter.

6. After my sister Catherine's death, $3,300 is to be divided among her family.

7. To pay the sum of $75 each to the children if any of them are living at my decease, of each of the following uncles and aunts: Thos. Brophy and Eliza Brophy, of Kilkenny, Ireland; Matthew and Catherine Butler of Ballingarry county, Ireland; if only one child be living at the time of my decease $75. is to be paid to such child, but if more children than one, it is to be divided equally among them.

Balance Invested.

8. The remainder is to be invested and accumulated as long as it is legally right to do so, the annual income must be expended in the following manner:—(a) divide $300 among priests of Toronto for intentions to be said by them for any persons I have wronged. If I have not wronged any, these intentions must be said for myself. (b) $400 a year must be given to each unfortunate Roman Catholic priest in Ontario who has been cast out or debarred by clerical authorities and who may apply for help. Should there be no applications in any one year, so much the better, and the money that would have been expended shall be placed at the disposal of the Ontario Government for insane asylums and deaf, dumb and blind institutions, where the poor and unfortunate of every creed are to be taken in and cared for alike. This request I make on account of my having lived nearly all my life under the fair and impartial laws of Ontaria.

I direct my executors to publish this will in one of the public newspapers in Toronto as soon after my death as might be convenient, and publish the same at intervals of 25 years during the currency of the trust declared herein.

I have claims against the late Archbishop Cleary. If the heirs or friends think proper to settle those claims I direct my executors to acknowledge the settlement and publish it.

May God forbid that this will would give any encouragement to insubordination, disobedience, or scandal in the church. No one has any more respect for superiors than I."

Decent Burial.

The following extract is taken from the will:

"I want my executors to give me a decent and becoming funeral avoiding great and unusual expense in connection therewith. In the preparation of my remains for burial the executors are to positively prohibit the use of poisonous or injurious matter which is commonly used by undertakers for the purpose of improving the appearance of bodies after death. My body is to be enclosed in a plain oak coffin, I want the tombstone to be five feet high and to have carved thereon, 'Sacred to The Memory of Michael Brophy, born in the Isles of Ballingarry, Tipperary, Ireland, 1796. Died in 1871, aged 75 years. May He Rest in Peace. The same must be done in the case of my mother, my sister and myself. My father's inscription must be on the east side of the stone; my mother's on the south; my sister's on the north and mine on the west. Footmarkers must also be procured and put down; my sister's on the north, father's next, mother's next and mine on the south."

The inventory and valuation of the real and personal estate of the late Father Brophy is as follows: Book debts and promissory notes, $1,000; moneys secured by mortgage. $9,500; securities for money, $131,340,78; cash on hand, $8,952.84; cash in bank, $94.02.

The money invested amounts to $113,361.40 and the Toronto Guardian Trusts Corporation has in its hands in cash $8,939.29. The bank and other stocks were as follows: 2,700 shares Imperial Steel and Wire Co., preferred, woth $10 per share; 2,250 shares Imperial Steel and Wire Co., common, worth $10 per share; 200 shares Canada Cement Co., worth $18,500.00; 100 shares Monarch Life Assurance Co., worth $10 per share.

Insured Lives of Others

He also held life assurance policies on the lives of the following men payable to him at their death. The amounts follow: Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Co., Policy on J. J. Mahoney; $5,115; Equitable Life Assurance Co., policy on J. J. Mahoney $1,110; Dominion Life Assurance Co., policy on J. A. Hilliard $1,307; Dominion Life Assurance Co., policy on W. J. SHIPMAN TAKES ANOTHER WIFE

Theatrical Manager and Wife Repeat Ceremony After Three Years.

A New York despatch the other day told of how Roselle Knott, the well known Hamilton actress, had started suit against her former husband, also an ex-Hamiltonian, to recover $10,000 which she claimed she loaned him for show production purposes in the days when they lived happily. The New York Telegraph tells the story of Mr. Shipman's second marriage to his second wife, as follows:

Ernest George Montague Shipman better known to his friends as Ernie, theatrical manager, and former husband of Roselle Knott, an actress, admitted yesterday at his office, 110 West Fortieth Street, that he had been one of the principals in a marriage which took place Thursday afternoon in North Bergen, N.J. Mr. Shipman married Helen Foster Barham, former a leading woman in one of his companies, and more recently a writer of film scenarios, vaudeville sketches and other things for the stage, under the name of Nell Shipman. The manager said yesterday that he had merely married his wife over again. And thereby hangs the tale.

"In 1909," he said, "I went west and obtained a divorce in California. Then I married Helen Foster Barham out there. That was in 1910.

"My lawyer, Thos. McMahon, told me that my California divorce might not be recognized here in New York.

"Of course, you understand, we considered my California divorce entirely legal and our wedding out there absolutely regular. However, it was such a simple thing to be married over again that we just went over to Jersey and had another ceremony."

CHARIOT RACE FROM BEN HUR

Now Appears on Asbestos Curtain at the Grand.

To add to the extra fine fittings of the Grand Opera House, the orchestra curtain has been repainted and the work done on it surpasses all previous records. The immense painting represents the famous chariot race as told in the ever popular story "Ben Hur." Ben Hur driving his noble steeds has just passed Messala and the latter is falling to the ground. The horses, the expression on the drivers' faces is all exceptionally well brought out.

The back ground which is the Roman amphitheatre, is well worth going to see for all the various details made known through books are plainly set out on the curtain. Owing to the thickness and course texture of the asbestos, the painting was made rather difficult, but notwithstanding this, the work is excellent. It was done by employees of J. J. Turner & Sons.

RELATIVES IN THIS CITY

Ephram Jackson Died Suddenly in the West

Postmaster Edgar has received the following letter, regarding the death of a man near Prince Albert, who is supposed to have relatives in this city.

The letter is from the North West Mounted Police.

Postmaster,
Peterborough.
Re Ephraim Jackson, deceased.

I enclose herewith a letter addressed to the relatives of the above named man.

I am informed that he had two brothers who used to live in Peterboro, and I would be greatly obliged if you would hand the enclosed letter to them, if you happen to be acquainted with them. Of course, I realize the prospects are very remote in view of the fact that he has not heard from any of his friends for twenty years. But I wish to acquaint them with the facts of his sudden demise and would be very glad to have you do what you can in regard to the matter.

Commanding Officer of R.N.W.M.P.
Prince Albert.

The letter is to the effect that the above named party died suddenly on the 9th of last month at Steep Creek. Death was due to old age. The deceased had no property to speak of. What property there is however, it is in the hands of David Reid, of Steep Creek, a friend of the deceased. Friends of the deceased can communicate with the Commanding Officer of the R.N.W.M.P. at Prince Albert.

The lowest human habitation is said to be that of the coal miners of Bohemia, some of whom make their dwellings at a point over 2,000 feet below the level of the sea.

THE PEOPLE WILL NOT LET THE LIGHT & POWER CO. RULE

The Day of Monopoly Charges For Power and Light Ends With the Coming in of Hydro.

See That Municipal Candidates For Whom You Vote Are Supporters of the Municipal System---Pledge Them to it---A Plain Statement of the Situation as it is in the City To-day.

The people are being urged to call for public meetings on the claim that something is wrong with the Hydro-Electric situation in the city. There are suggestions made that someone is grafting. That the whole scheme is blocked and will fall to pieces. That there has been hole-and-corner work,, and that the operation and work of the Council has not been given to the people as it should have been. All of this is whispered with an object, and is directly traceable to the interests that would, if they could, block the city and nullify the work that has been done.

So far as the city has gone, the ratepayers have been holding the Council in confidence, and relying on the assistance of the Hydro-Electric Commission. There is no reason now to doubt either of these. There has been a change in the situation, but not from any act or omission of the Council. Just one of the wiggles, the squirmings, the quirks of the Power Trust, to try and delay what they cannot avert.

In the interests of the city as a whole, in that of the individual power and light consumer, the people at the polls should back up the Council, by electing men who will be thoroughly in accord with the local enterprise, and who will see it through. There may be a little delay, while some legal quibbles, put forward by the Power Trust, are being knocked on the head and brushed aside. They are only minor obstructions, meant to delay and if possible harrass the Council and alarm the ratepayers. There are just two lots of people to believe—not both—the Trust or the Council. The Council are of the people. It has worked for the public. The Trust has not.

Your duty is plain. See that the candidate you vote for is an avowed supporter of the city's enterprise in gaining control of that important municipal utility—Power and Light. Pledge him to it. The situation calls for it. Never mind the Trust, it can, and no doubt will, look after itself.

THE CASE PLAINLY PUT.

While some furore is being made by those who would try to stir up opposition and throw obstacles in way of the city's plans and work, there is little difficulty in understanding the present situation on the city's endeavor to own electric power and light.

The Electric Power Co., of Toronto controls the Peterborough Light and Power Co., the Auburn Power Co., the Otonabee Power Co., and a long list of companies. The city secured legislation to enable it to purchase the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., which was a distributing concern, only, and owned no power. The property was valued by engineers for the city. The law was passed and the by-law to raise the money passed. Then the Electric Power Co., the holding company or trust, transferred the Auburn dam from the Auburn Power Co., to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. This was done to baffle the efforts of the city. In passing the by-law the Council and ratepayers had in view the purchasing of a distributing system while the Hydro-Electric Commission purchased for the city a power development. It is quit possible that the original idea can be carried out.

It is to be remembered that at the time of the valuation and passing of the by-law there was no evidence that the Auburn Power was in the hands of the Light and Power Co. It was taken over, afterwards, "for one dollar and considerations." The transfer was not registered until middle of 1913.

But suppose the city purchased the Auburn dam along with the distribution system, in what shape will it be or what change does it make.

If the Hydro-Electric Commissioners procured the dam it would sell the developed power to the city at a price that would pay interest and sinking fund on the cost and the operating expenses, and the city would sell it to the consumers at the same rate plus the cost of distribution. That is, the rate charged consumers would pay the expenses of development and also distribution.

What the City Can Do.

On the other hand, if the city should have to, or find it advisable to purchase the Auburn dam property directly, instead of through the commissioners as well as the distributing system, the city could sell the power to the consumers at a rate that would pay the interest and sinking fund on the cost and operating expenses, plus the cost of distribution. That is, the rate charged the consumers would pay the cost of development and distribution, just as it would by the other method. The cost would be no more and no less, and the city would directly, instead of indirectly, own the dam and power plant. That is all there is to it. It puts the case in a concise way.

Why Things Were Not Done.

Why did not the city in the first place undertake to buy a power plant directly instead of through the commission, it may be asked by some practiced or inspired questioner? Well, the city had an agreement with the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and that company did not own a power plant. The Hydro-Electric Commission had authority to expropriate a power plant wherever situated, and the city had not that authority. A bill was introduced into the legislature to give the city authority in that direction but it did not go through. So then the arrangement was that the Hydro-Electric Commissioners, who possessed the legal power so to do, would secure the power plant and the city the distributing line or system. That was a feasible plan under the circumstances. The power trust by selling the Auburn dam property to the Peterborough Light and Power Co., (by taking the property out of one pocket and putting it into another) has changed the circumstances somewhat, but the main objective remains the same and that is that the city will secure power for the people either through the commission only, with its assistance, and in either case the power and light will reach the people for use at cost.

Who are the people who are trying to make a bugaboo of this trick on the part of the power trust. The very same people who said the power trust should own all the power in the Trent district from Trenton to Fenelon Falls, and that the people in this well settled and populated district would be compelled to take light and power from the trust or do without. Their argument —you remember—was that one company could develop and operate all the powers more cheaply than several companies could develop and operate them, and that therefore this power trust, officially styled The Electric Power Co., and popularly known as the Seymour Power Co., should have all the powers on the waters then available. That argument has been used to bolster up every trust that has ever been formed from the Standard Oil Co. down, and the people know what the argument amounts to. Yet with such an excuse, this power company actually did get and actually now controls all these powers, and the people must either submit to take power and light from the monoply prices or break through the ring.

THE COUNCIL AND THE PEOPLE OF PETERBOROUGH SAY, "BREAK THROUGH THE RING," AND BREAK THROUGH THEY WILL.

Everything Was Done Openly.

The Examiner complains that: "We have been kept too much in the dark as to the proceedings of the City Council." And it says this brazenly in the face of the fact that every meeting of the Council has been open and reporters present.

And, further, do not the people see that this very openness which the council has maintained has been a handicap. The city wanted power, the Trust wanted to prevent it getting power. Here were two opposing interests and the council could not take an effective step, except in the open, so that it was at once known to the trust, and the trust could hold its directors' meetings behind closed doors and take its measures entirely in the dark. The Council have to fight in the open and the Trust in the dark. The Council could not pass a by-law or pass a motion or order the expenditure of a cent without the fact being published broadcast. But the Trust could act entirely to itself and could transfer property from one of its companies to another without outsiders knowing anything of the transaction, and could hold the deed of it, if it so wished, and register it when it liked.

Effect of Publicity.

Oh, yes, let the Council be open in its movements. It has to in the nature of its functions as a Council, and the Trust can see its every move, and even its intended moves. Surely this should satisfy the most ardent advocate of fair play to the Trust.

Take one historic example of the effect of publicity. In 1911, when Mr. W. G. Morrow was mayor, the Council asked the Hydro-Electric Commission to advise the Council as to the best power plant to secure. The commission reported and advised purchasing the property of the Otonabee Power Co., at the price of $225,000. The Trust did not control the Otonabee Company then. But the Commission's report was made public and the Trusts jumped in and bought the Otonabee Company's property. It was certainly nice for the Trust to know of the advice given the city and the very price named. It could act at once, and quietly, while the Council could only act by public meeting and by by-laws published and voted upon by the ratepayers.

Should not even the Examiner be satisfied with the advantages the Trust has in the matter of publicity? Or does it wish every consultation between the Council and its solicitor and every conversation of members of the Council made known at once to the Trust to put it more fully on its guard?

Will Try to Baffle the People.

Let two things be recognized. One is that the Trust will use every effort to baffle the people of Peterborough in their effort to procure power, and that it can work in secret and with its different companies, can juggle its properties to try and delay the end of its monopoly. The other is that the people of Peterborough will not lie down under a monopoly, but will go forward on their course of securing city owned power and that they will have the active assistance of the Hydro-Electric Commission, and that they will succeed. They may, by legal quibble, be delayed a month or months, but delay is not defeat, and DEFEAT CANNOT COME.

CANDIDATES AT NORWOOD

Two Aspirants for the Position of Reeve

Hot Time in Dummer With Four Candidates in Race

Reeve Brown Will be on the Job Again at Asphodel

NORWOOD, Dec. 26.—The municipal pot in Norwood is steadily boiling and the boom for civic honors that was started last year continues to grow. There will undoubtedly be more interest taken in the elections this year than there has been for many a day, which omens well for the progress of the place.

Up to date there are two candidates in the field for the Reeveship, viz:, Reeve A. Breault and Councillor B. W. Squire. For the council board, six parties have already signified their intention of running as candidates. They are Councillors, Stanley Hendren, W. E. Pakenham and Thos. W. Morrison and Messrs. J. R. McKelvie, Richard Girven and Wm. Portway. It is also possible that some others may decide to come out during the coming week. However, there will be eight candidates at least, for the offices of reeve and councillor, to make their bow to the ratepayers at the nomination meeting on Monday next.

On the Board of Education the three retiring members this year are Messrs. E. P. Cuffe, J. F. Elliott and Fred Anderson. Another vacancy on the Board has been caused by the removal of Mr. G. H. Niebel. It is rumored that Mr. J. A. Finlay, who has received his appointment from the council, will not accept re-appointment again.

Messrs. Cuffe, Anderson and Elliott will in all probability be candidates for re-election, while Mr. P. M. Grover is also spoken of as a candidate. The name of Mr. C. J. Searight is coupled with the office too.

The election in Dummer township this year also promises to be a hot one. No less than four candidates it is said, are in the field for the Reeveship, namely Messrs. Nathan Payne, Jas. Greystock, John Darling and Hugh McDonald. For councillors the names of Messrs. T. A. Webster, Bullock, Garfield, Crowe, D. D. Nixon and Geo. Kirk are mentioned as aspirants for office.

In Asphodel a contest for the Reeveship is assured. Reeve Brown will again be a candidate, while Councillor MacNaughton has signified his intention of being in the field. For councillor, the three old members of the council, Messrs. T. Davidson, A. Quinlan and John Scott will seek re-election. The only new name mentioned so far is that of Geo. Elliott, but others may be brought up at nomination Monday afternoon at Westwood.

RAILWAY MEN WERE HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

The employees of the Grand Trunk Railway on this division were given more liberty this Christmas than ever. All way freights were held over till night in order to allow the men to have their Christmas dinner at home. The local yard men and gatemen were likewise allowed home to dinner.

THE CITIZENS WERE LIBERAL

Children's Hearts Made Glad at the Shelter

Mr. and Mrs. Henry, on behalf of themselves and the Children's Aid Society, wish to thank the citizens for their gifts to the children at the Shelter. These brought much happiness to the eleven children. The gifts were not confined to fruits, candies and toys, as many articles which will be of service to the children, were received.

If there are any names missing from the list given below, it is because many gifts were received, without the name of the sender being supplied.

The contributions acknowledged are as follows:

From Firemen's banquet, re Chief Howard, eatables.

Chief Howard, fireman's hook and ladder truck and toys.

Miss Dickson, toys, oranges and candies.

Mrs. Wm. Whitfield, fruit, butter and cookies.

SHAREHOLDERS OF THE YORK LOAN

A New Dividend May Be Declared Next Year.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—A dividend to York County Savings and Loan Shareholders is a possibility but by no means a certainty for early in the new year. The National Trust Company, liquidators for the concern, have hopes that enough of the remaining assets of the York Loan will be disposed of to permit of a dividend, but can promise nothing.

Two dividends have already been paid, but the official in charge of the York Loan affairs did not care to predict the extent of the third, nor the approximate date of its declaration.

Much depends upon how the funds come in. The assets consist of real estate which cannot be disposed of to the best advantage immediately, and mortgages upon which payments are made in small amounts.

PAINFUL MISHAP CHRISTMAS EVE

Mrs. H. C. Winch Fell and Fractured Right Leg.

A very painful accident befell Mrs. H. C. Winch, 81 Crescent Street, on Wednesday evening. She was going to get a car on Lock Street a few feet south of the G. T. R. Crossing, and in some manner she slipped and fell, breaking her right leg.

She was removed to her home and medical aid was summoned and yesterday she was removed to St. Nicholl's hospital, where the fracture which proved to be a trifle below the hip joint, was reduced. Mrs. Winch's many friends will hope for her speedy recovery.

HIS WORK APPRECIATED

At the closing meeting of the Dummer Township Council a vote of appreciation of his valued services as councillor and reeve, was extended to Mr. Rork Ferguson, who is retiring as Reeve.

Costly Friendship

A blacksmith was fined $10 in police court this morning and the man who supplied him with liquor was assessed $25.

A BREAK IN THE WATER MAIN

Montreal is Confronted With Serious Situation.

Special Correspondence

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—A break in the water main leading from the intake pipe at Verdun, has shortened the city's water supply from a necessary sixty million gallons a day to twenty-five million gallons and the downtown and business sections are wholly without water.

Spring water is being purchased by the tons. Bakers are without water and are preparing to order a supply of bread from Toronto. Two million gallons is being held in reserve in case of fire, but this amount would be wholly inadequate. The break is expected to last several days. Two hundred thousand of the population are directly affected.

NEW POSITION FOR F. L. CLARRY

May Be Appointed Master-in-Chamber for Calgary.

CALGARY, Dec. 26.—It is rumored in legal circles in the city that L. F. Clarry, deputy attorney general for the province of Alberta, will shortly hand in his resignation and will be appointed master-in-chamber for Calgary. When the present master was appointed he was only temporarily appointed to sit in this city, his regular course being held in Edmonton, and when the new court house is opened and a great number of changes made, it is generally understood that Mr. Clarry will be appointed master-in-chambers to sit in Calgary. While this rumor cannot at present be confirmed, there is good reason for believing it to be founded upon good authority.

POULTRY SHOW NEAR AT HAND

Big Exhibit of Birds May be Expected.

The directors of the Peterborough Poultry Association are working hard these days in the interests of the annual show, which will hold forth in the market hall on January 6, 7 and 8, and they expect the best exhibition of birds, that has ever been offered to the public of Peterborough.

Several of the members are sending entries to the exhibition of the Orillia Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Association, which will commence on Dec. 30th, and continue for four days.

GETS HIS CERTIFICATE

Physical Director J. J. Thompson of the Y. M. C. A. received his diploma from the Lake Couchiching Training Schol, this morning. This entitles Mr. Thompson to carry on any Y. M. C. A. work.

GERMAN OFFICER IMPRISONED FOR ASSAULTING CRIPPLE

THE 99TH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY MARCHING THROUGH THE TOWN OF ZABERN.

Lieutenant Baron von Forstner was sentenced to forty-three days' imprisonment by a court-martial at Strassburg, Germany, for having assaulted a lame cobbler during the recent trouble at Zabern in Alsace Lorraine.

The charge against him was wilful assault and causing great bodily harm by the illegal use of his sabre.

The sentence of imprisonment in a penitentiary involves the loss of his commission as an officer by Lieutenant Baron von Forstner.

It was while passing with a section of the Ninety-fifth Infantry regiment through Dettweiler he wounded the cripple in the head with his sabre for calling out expressions regarded as offensive.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, DEC. 26, 1913.

THE COMPANY OR THE CITY?

MAYOR BRADBURN in his letter, which appeared in the Review on Wednesday, replying to certain questions relative to the expropriation of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, explained the present position of the Hydro-electric business. It is scarcely possible to explain everything in a letter. It would appear that the Council had done everything they thought necessary at the time to estimate the extent of the undertaking.

The valuation that was made of the company's property before the passing of the by-law of expropriation was certainly much less than that which the company set upon the property at the present time. But the Light and Power Company have been doing business since that time and have evidently been carrying on the business as if nothing had happened. It would appear that they had enlarged their plant and property in the city to a considerable extent, and it is for this enlargement that the city is asked to pay extra.

The object of this expenditure on the part of the company seems to have been to thwart the progress of the Hydro-Electric scheme and if possible, stop it from being carried out. The company do not want to go out of business in Peterborough and they have done what they could to put stumbling blocks in the way of the scheme of expropriation.

As to the Auburn Dam and Power plant, which the company have recently acquired, Mayor Bradburn thinks that, despite the extra expenditure in taking this over, it would be worth the money and would prove a valuable asset to the city's working plant.

The city must not, at this juncture, be made a fool of. The Hydro-electric scheme must be carried through. Peterborough has come to that age when she can take care of her own lighting. Citizens who have faith in the future of their city must support this civic enterprize. We are past the feeding-bottle period of infancy, we are old enough to help ourselves and to look after ourselves and are not compelled to sit up and be dictated to by any private company.

LET EVERY VOTER SEE TO IT THAT THE MAN TO WHOM HE GIVES HIS VOTE HAS GOT BACK-BONE ENOUGH TO STAND UP FOR HIS OWN CITY.

THE COST OF HIGH LIVING.

MR. McDOUGALD states that the commission on the High Cost of Living will have everything ready for commencement of the investigation by the end of the year. Nothing yet has been decided about the method of procedure or the scope of the inquiry. It is to be hoped that no delay will be made and that the inquiry is thorough and will take into its consideration not only food, but many other things, such as house-rent, clothing and other domestic necessities than food. The question of what is a "living wage" in Canada ought to enter into consideration; although this is a question which can only be answered relatively. The cost of living is much higher in Toronto than in Peterborough, on account of the high house-rent. In large cieies there are incidental expenses such as car-fares and attractions which make quite an item in the average family's expenses.

The cost of living is perhaps a matter of taste or economy. If some people who now find it hard to live upon twelve dollars per week were to have their income increased to fifteen or twenty, it is very probable that they would have the same difficulty to make ends meet. The average family lives up to its income and often above it. There will always be a problem of the high cost of living, it is partly through the cost of too high living.

A NATIONAL CONSCIENCE.

THE KINGSTON STANDARD in an editorial prints the following quotation from the Sydney, Australia, Sun:

"Meanwhile, what is Canada's position? What has been done by this Dominion, whose Conservative or ultra-Imperialist press, says that Australia is 'humiliated' because it hopes eagerly for co-operation with America? Canada has done nothing but humbly take shelter under the protection of the United States. While Australia busily sought means after means by which she could take her own part in the general schemes for imperial safety, Canada did nothing, but relied in practice and in faith upon the proximity of a hundred million people in the neighboring Republic. The reason why Canada has felt secure, while Australia has felt uneasy is not because the Dominion has greater faith than the Commonwealth in Imperial protection, but because the Canadians always felt that Uncle Sam would look after them. If there is anything 'humiliating' in Australia's desire to have America as a friend, then Canada must be most ignominiously humiliated, because she has tactitly relied on America for a generation."

We have been trying to argue that Canada has been under the protection of Great Britain, and has accepted that protection and offered nothing in return. There may be something in the argument of the Australian paper, that we have had more reason than Australia to feel secure because of our proximity to the United States. So that we are head and ears in debt to both the Empire and the neighboring Republic.

The United States have had an army and navy for the last hundred years, and when Col. Sam Hughes urges the necessity of military training, he is laughed at. When Mr. Borden tried to square the debt with Great Britain, or at least, acknowledge the free gift of national defence which the Empire has bestowed and is still bestowing upon us as a nation, he was howled down, and told to get out of office. There is no fear of the States putting in a bill for defence upon land, nor is there any fear of Great Britain asking us to contribute to the British navy. But there is such a thing as a National Conscience, and this has yet to be developed in us in the direction of ordinary self-defence.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

DR. COOK who "discovered" the North Pole some few years ago and has ever since been trying to discover someone to believe him, has once more turned upon Admiral Peary. He has now discovered that that gentleman is a "liar." He also calls him a thief and accuses him of immorality. This may be true, but it is not like Cook to keep these real discoveries from the world so long.

IT WILL SURPRISE many Canadians to know that there is a new emigration movement from Canada. Many Canadians and Americans are emigrating to Australia. Fifty-five western Canadian farmers have arrived in Sydney. The reasons assigned for their imigration are the superior climate of Australia, which removes the necessity of feeding stock during winter, the greater marketing facilities, higher returns and cheaper land.

HON. W. T. WHITE, Finance Minister, told the Canadian Club in Montreal that the test of true citizenship was character. That the country cannot depend upon wealth. You test a man by his personal worth and integrity. That is the way in which we should judge a nation. It is good to hear a finance man talk in that way.

MR. A. J. BALFOUR, who a short time ago resigned the leadership of the Conservative party in Great Britain and was followed by Mr. Bonar Law, is now spoken of as likely to return to his old post again, as Mr. Law has not proved a man of sufficient breadth to control the two elements in the party—the free-traders and the protectionists.

AMONG SOME WOMEN arrested in a Montreal departmental store for shoplifting was one woman whose husband was a well-known city man with a rating of over $100,000; she was let out on bail on the charge of pilfering a brooch valued at twenty-five cents. She might plead that her husband did not give her any "pin-money."

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Freed Food and the Other Kind.

Montreal Star.

Our neighbors in the United States have discovered that free food costs just a little more than the other kind.

Timothy Whiskers.

Montreal Herald

One hundred farmers attended a banquet at St. Catharines, Ontario, last night. Every one of them appeared in full evening dress. The farmer, in his stocking feet and with timothy seed in his whiskers is getting scorcer and scarcer every day.

Produce More Foodstuffs.

Windsor Record.

We have been treating our manufacturing industries rather generously. The Government gives them a protective tariff and almost any city is ready to grant a bonus of some kind. Isn't it about time we left the manufacturer to work out his own salvation and directed our attention to more scientific cultivation of the soil in an honest and faithful endeavor to produce more foodstuffs and reduce the burdensome cost of living?

H. R. H. The Hen.

Montreal Mail.

Now-a-days when people who can afford to eat fresh eggs, put on airs in consequence, it is not too much to speak of Her Royal Highness the Hen. If it would do anything towards increasing the supply of eggs, we would be willing to address her as Your Majesty. But alas, that which we call Hen by any other name would lay as few.

Who is Rogers?

Ottawa Journal.

Now, who and what is the real Rogers, the man as he is outside the perverted imagination of Liberal journalists? A highly efficient minister, kind and courteous to everybody, Liberal or Tory; in private life liked by all for his generosity and breadth of mind. He is a man with a big brain and a big heart. If there were no other evidence of it, look at the way he is attacked day in and day out by the Liberal newspapers and the Liberal hangers-on. There was a great deal of philosophy in Sir John A. Macdonald's saying that it was a safe conclusion that the apple tree round about which there is a constant accumulation of sticks and stones hurled by pilfering boys, is by no means the poorest in the orchard.

Intermarried Before.

The London Chronicle.

Mr. Chamberlain's silver wedding recalls a curious instance of the way we are all intermarried. About ten years ago an antiquarian browsing among the registers of city churches, discovered the entry of the marriage early in the seventeenth century of a Chamberlain to an Endicott. A little research proved that the bridegroom was an ancestor of the famous statesman (the Chamberlain's London pedigree is well known) and that the bride was an ancestress of the Miss Endicott that Mr. Chamberlain wooed and won in Washington, U.S.A., 25 years ago and nearly three centuries after the first marriage between the families. Mr. Chamberlain and his wife have inspected together the original entry in the registers.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LABOR AND LIBERALISM.

Sir,—Some of Mr. Burnham's arguments of the 22nd, are answered by me in the same issue. In Pekin, a larger population than London, and London factories are not the cause of the hiving of the people; and there were strikes before Free Trade. The labor market of Liberalism is a better one than the slave market of immigration and "we don't want settlers," and the worker in Liberal Britain is nearer being a capitalist than a vagrant (life of John Barns) and is better in the grip of the capitalist (what is capital?) than exploited by immigration (exiled) and employment agents and skinned by confidence tricksters.

Yours truly,
A Reader.

ARE WE IN A MESS?

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir,—

An attempt is being made by some parties to saddle our present electric troubles on Mr. Beck. That gentleman said at the first and has continued to say that he will see that Peterboro gets the offer of cheap power. Peterboro can get unlimited power at a price already approved of by the city, any day, but can Peterboro accept the offer? That's the point. If we cannot accept it except by a huge capital investment that would cripple our borrowing power for all time to come, then who is to blame for the mess we are in? This is the point that has been overlooked. And don't you forget it.

Yours,
MUNICIPAL.

To Separate "Siamese" Twins.

PARIS, Dec. 26. — "Siamese" twin girls, a month old, who were joined face to face by a strip of flesh over an inch thick, between the two stomachs, have been brought to Paris to be separated by a surgical operation. A radiograph examination suggests that the twins have no vital organs in common. They fight so fiercely and continually with their little hands that they had to be clothed with woollen vests inside which their arms were imprisoned. This, however, does not prevent them from doing their best to bite each other.

Hotelman Dead.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—George Zilliax, of 237 Dovercourt road, died yesterday at the Western Hospital. He was born at Listowel on Dec. 27, 1874, and later took up the hotel business in Hanover. In 1899 he married Miss Pearce in Toronto and moved to Orangeville to become manager of the Queen's Hotel there. Two years ago he came to Toronto, where he has been connected with the Iroquois Hotel.

Shady and Sunny Side of Japan.

A remarkable difference exists between the climates of western and central Japan, so much so that these districts are distinguished by the two names Saniado—shady side—and Sanyodo—sunny side—respectively. During the long and rigorous winter of western Japan the central provinces, bordering the inland sea, enjoy dry and comparatively mild weather. The two regions are separated by mountain ranges, and the factors determining their climate conditions are distinct. A Japanese writer says that while the winter climate of central and southern Japan depends on the southwestern monsoons, that of the western coast is directly related to the barometric area of north China.

DO YOU WANT WORK?

Quality and cleanliness are the levers upon which we depend to move large quantities of coal.

While our prices are the same as those for ordinary coal, we strive to make those prices pay for more and bigger coal satisfaction.

How well we succeed, can be learned by a trial.

Why not take the best when it costs no more.

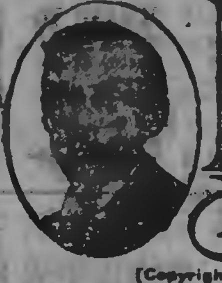
A SPLENDID HAZARD



By HAROLD MacGRATH

[Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.]

And Breitmann, dropping occasionally the ash of his cigarette on the tray, he, too, was pondering. But his German strain did not make it so easy for him as for Fitzgerald to give concrete form to his thought. The outlook, as he saw it, had a nebulous appearance.

M. Ferraud chatted gayly. Usually a man who holds his audience is of single purpose. The little Frenchman had two aims; one, to keep the conversation on subjects of his own selection, and the other, to study without being observed.

With Laura's rising the little after dinner party became disorganized.

It was yet early; but perhaps she had some thought she wished to be alone with. This consideration was the veriest bud in growth; still, it was such that she desired the seclusion of her room. She swung across her shoulders the sleepy Angora and wished the men good night.

The wire bell in the hall clock vibrated twice; 2 o'clock of the morning. A streak of moonshine fell aslant the floor and broke off abruptly. Before the safe in the library stood Breitmann, a small tape in his hand. For several minutes he contemplated somberly the nickel combination wheel. He could open it for he knew the combination. To open it would be the work of a moment. Why, then, did he hesitate? Why not pluck it forth and disappear on the morrow? The admiral had not made a copy, and without the key he might dig up Corsica till the crack of doom. The flame on the taper crept down. The man gave a quick movement to his shoulders; it was the shrug, not of impatience, but of resignation. He saw the lock through the haze of a conjured face. He shut his eyes, but the vision remained. Slowly he drew his fingers over the flame.

Yet before the flame died wholly it touched two points of light in the doorway, the round crystals of a pair of spectacles.

"Two souls with but a single thought!" the secret agent murmured. "Poor devil! Why does he hesitate? Why does he not take it and be gone? Is he still honest? I must be growing old. I shall not ruin him, I shall save him. It is not good politics, but it is good Christianity."

CHAPTER XI.

THE WOMAN WHO KNEW.

"DON'T you sometimes grow weary for an abiding place?" Laura pulled off her gauntlets and laid her hot hands on the cool lichen grown stones of the field wall. The bridle rein hung over her arm. Fitzgerald had drawn his through a stirrup. "Think of wandering here and there, with never a place to come back to."

"I have thought of it often in the few days I have been here. I have a home in New York, but I could not possibly afford to live in it; so I rent it; and when I want to go fishing there's enough under hand to pay the expenses. My poor old dad! He was always indorsing notes for his friends or carrying stock for them and nothing ever came back. I am afraid the disillusions broke his heart. And then perhaps I was a bitter disappointment. I was expelled from college in my junior year. I had no head for figures other than that kind which inhabit the Louvre and the Vatican."

Her face became thoughtful.

"Isn't Mr. Breitmann just a bit of a mystery to you?" she asked.

"In some ways, yes."

"He is inclined to be too much reserved. But last night Mr. Ferraud succeeded in tearing down some of it. If I could put in a book what all you men have seen and taken part in! Mr. Breitmann would be almost handsome but for those scars."

He kicked the turf at the foot of the wall. "In Germany they are considered beauty spots."

"I am not in sympathy with that custom."

"Still, it requires courage of a kind."

"The noblest wounds are those that are carried unseen. Student scars are merely patches of vanity."

"He has others besides those. He was nearly killed in the Sudan." Fitzgerald was compelled to offer some defense for the absent. That Breitmann had lied to him, that his appearance here had been in the regular order of things, did not take away the fact that the Bavarian was a man and a brave one. Closely as he had watched, up to the present he had learned absolutely nothing; and to have shown Breitmann the telegram would have accomplished nothing further than to have put him wholly on guard.

"Are you eager to return to the great highways once more?"

"I should like to stay here for a hundred years."

"You would miss us all very much then," merrily. "And Napoleon's treasure would have gone in and out of innumerable pockets!"

"Do you really and truly believe that we shall bring home a single franc of it?" facing her with incredulous eyes.

"Really and truly. And why not? Treasures have been found before. Fie on you for a doubting Thomas. What a gay little man that Mr. Ferraud is!"

"Lively as a cricket. Your father, I understand, is to take him as far as Marseilles. After tonight everything will be quite formal, I suppose. Honestly, I feel ill at ease in accepting your splendid hospitality. I'm an interloper. I haven't even the claim of an ordinary introduction. It has been very, very kind of you."

"You know Mrs. Coldfield. I will, if you wish it, ask her to present you to me."

"I am really serious."

"So am I."

"They will be here tomorrow?"

"Yes. And in four days we sail. Oh, it is all so beautiful! A real treasure hunt."

"It does not seem possible that I have been here a week. It has been a long time since I enjoyed myself so thoroughly. Have you ever wondered what has become of the other man?"

"The other man?"

"Yes; the other one in or outside the chimney. I've been thinking about him this long while. Hasn't it occurred to you that he may have other devices?"

"If he has he will find that he has waited too long. But I would like to know how he found out. You see," triumphantly, "he believed that there is one." She shook the rein, for the sleek mare was nozzling her shoulder and pawing mightily. "Let us be off."

She put her small booted foot on his palm and vaulted into the saddle, and he swung on to his mount. He stuffed his cap into a pocket, for he was no fair weather horseman, but loved the tingle of the wind rushing through his hair, and the two cantered down the clear sandy road.

Fitzgerald was light hearted and boyish, Breitmann was grave and dignified, but in the eyes of each there was a force the girl had encountered so seldom as to forget its being. Breitmann, in his capacity as secretary, was not so often in her company as Fitzgerald; nevertheless she was subtly attracted toward him. When he was of the mind he could invent a happy compliment with a felicity no less facile than Fitzgerald. And the puzzling thing of it all was, both men she knew from their histories had never been ornaments at garden parties where compliments are current coin. She liked Fitzgerald, but she admired Breitmann, a differentiation which she had no inclination to resolve into first principles. That Breitmann was a secretary for hire drew no barrier in her mind. She had known many gentlemen of fine families who had served in like situations. There were no social distinctions. On the other hand, she never felt wholly comfortable with Breitmann. There was not the least mistrust in this feeling. It was rather because she instinctively felt that he was above his occupation. To sum it up briefly, Breitmann was difficult to understand and Fitzgerald wasn't.

Fitzgerald had an idea; boldly put, it was a grave suspicion. Not once had he forgotten the man in the chimney. Once the finger had pointed at Breitmann or some one with whom he was in understanding. This had proved to be groundless. But he kept turning over the incident and inspecting it from all sides. There were others a-treasure hunting; persons unknown; and a man might easily become desperate in the pursuit of 2,000,000 francs, almost half a million of American money, more, for some of these coins would be rare. He had thoroughly searched the ground outside the cellar window, but the sea gravel held its secret with a tenacity as baffling as the mother sea herself. There was a new under groom, or rather there had been. He had left, and where he had gone no one knew. Fitzgerald dismissed the thought of him; at the most he could have been out an accomplice, one to unlock the cellar window.

While Breitmann lingered near Laura, offering what signs of admiration he dared, and, while the admiral chatted to his country neighbors who were gathered round the tea table, Fitzgerald and M. Ferraud were braced against the terrace wall, a few yards farther on, and exchanged views on various peoples.

"America is a wonderful country," said M. Ferraud, when they had exhausted half a dozen topics. He spread out his hands, Frenchman wise.

"So it is." Fitzgerald threw away his cigarette and quietly caught the other by the wrist and turned the palm.

M. Ferraud looked into his face with an astonishment on his own, most genuine. But he did not struggle. "Why do you do that?"

"I am curious, Mr. Ferraud, when I see a hand like this. Would you mind letting me see the other?"

"Not in the least." M. Ferraud offered the other hand.

Fitzgerald let go. "What was your object?"

"What object?"

Fitzgerald lowered his voice. "What was your object in digging holes in yonder chimney? Did you know what was there? And what do you propose to do now?"

M. Ferraud coolly took off his spectacles and polished the lenses. It needed but a moment to adjust them. "What are you talking about?"

"You are really M. Ferraud?" said the young man coldly.

The Frenchman produced a wallet and took out a letter. It was written by the president of France, introducing M. Ferraud to the ambassador at Washington. Next, there was a passport, and far more important than either of these was the Legion of Honor. "Yes, I am Anatole Ferraud."

"That is all I desire to know."

"Shall we return to the ladies?" asked M. Ferraud, restoring his treasures.

"Since there is nothing more to be said at present. It seems strange to me that foreign politics should find its way here."

"Politics? I am only a butterfly hunter."

"There are varieties. But you are the man. I shall find out!"

"Possibly," returned M. Ferraud thinking hard.

"I give you fair warning that if anything is missing"—

"Oh, Mr. Fitzgerald!"

"I shall know where to look for it," with a smile which had no humor in it.

"Why not denounce me now?"

"Would it serve your purpose?"

"No," with deeper gravity. "It would be a great disaster; how great I cannot tell you."

"Then, I shall say nothing."

"About what?" dryly, even whimsically.

"About your being a secret agent from France."

This time M. Ferraud's glance proved that he was truly startled. Only three times in his career had his second life been questioned or suspected. Should he trust this young man? With that swift unerring instinct which makes the perfect student of character, he said, "You will do me a great favor not to impart this suspicion to any one else."

"Suspicion?"

"It is true: I am a secret agent;" and he said it proudly.

"You wish harm to none here?"

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE [illegible] and relieve all the troubles incident to a [illegible] state of the system, such as [illegible], Drowsiness, Distress after [illegible] the Side, &c. While their most [illegible] has been shown in curing

SICK Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

ACHE Is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

Asparagus Analysed.

Asparagus belongs to the family of plants—liliacae—that includes onions, leeks and garlic. Each of those vegetables contains a small quantity of sulphur in the form of an oil. The presence of the sulphur is more noticeable in onions than in asparagus, but if shoots of asparagus are left in water for a few days the odor of onion develops and becomes quite strong. The food value of asparagus is slight, and much of it is lost in the process of boiling. The London Lancet declares that after boiling for twenty minutes asparagus has virtually no food value.

PUZZLES THE TRAVELER.

The Native Names of Various Foreign Cities and Countries.

A person who is starting on a trip around the world must be thoroughly acquainted with the names of the different places in which he is to stop or he will find himself much perplexed on arriving at the same. One would think that London is called London the world over, but such is not the case. Once you arrive in France and London become Londres. To most persons in Canada, the capital of Turkey is called Constantinople, but the inhabitants of the Ottoman empire call their chief city Stamboul, and it appears as such on all Turkish maps.

Rome and Florence in Italy may sound all right to the average Canadian, but once you visit the two cities you discover that they are called Roma and Firense, respectively. Not one in six of the ordinary inhabitants of Greece call their country by such name. The proper name is Hellas.

Most travelers making their first visit to the Holy Lands are startled by the announcement that Jerusalem is called El Kuds, the Sea of Galilee, Bahr Tubariyeh; River Jordan, Sheriat el Kebir; the Dead Sea, Bahr Lut, and Bethlehem, Beit Lahm.

Every person in the Dominion knows what country you are referring to when speaking of Switzerland, but the traveler visiting the little European republic discovers that the inhabitants of the same call it everything but Switzerland. The population of that country is mostly made up of French and Germans with about six per cent. of Italians and those nationalities call it respectively La Suisse, Schweitz and Svizzera.

Three peoples in one country calling that country by three different names may appear bad enough, but the English and other tourists stopping in the capital of Egypt call it Cairo, the French officials stationed there call it Le Caire, and the Arabs, who were there first and should know best, call it Masr el Kahira.

A Japanese has to leave his own country and go to the nearest English-speaking settlement to know he has ever been in Japan at all. Japan, to its own natives is Nipon or Niphon—whichever way you think gets nearest to their pronunciation.

Likewise there is no China and more strangely still, there is no word in Chinese to represent China as a whole. We of the outside always think of that vast republic as of one country and of one people, whilst in reality it is practically a number of countries with a wide divergence of language and race. The natives range from copper to almost white, and vary in religion from Buddhists to Jews, and in language from Siamese and French in the south to Russian in the north.

The best way to express the term China and the one most often used seems to be Chung Kwoh, China proper, but it is to be expected that the new Government will soon adopt a more comprehensive name for its country along with its other modern improvements.

Most Chinese towns with which we think we are familiar are quite something else if we happen to visit them—such as Kuang Chou, for Canton.

Corea calls itself Tsiotsien; the natives of Siam when speaking of their country refer to it as T'hai, and the Persian thinks he lives in Iran.

Cigars That Last.

Ever smoke an Igorrote cigar? Well, these Igorrotes, in the Philippine Islands, make a cigar that in one respect is like the old time Christmas plum pudding—it lasts a week. It's fifteen inches long and three to five inches thick. Old man Ig. rolls the cig. and smokes it an hour; then Missus Ig. and all the little Igs. take their turn. By about the fourth day it must need a cuspidor attachment to keep it in operation. One smoke like this would last some people a lifetime.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

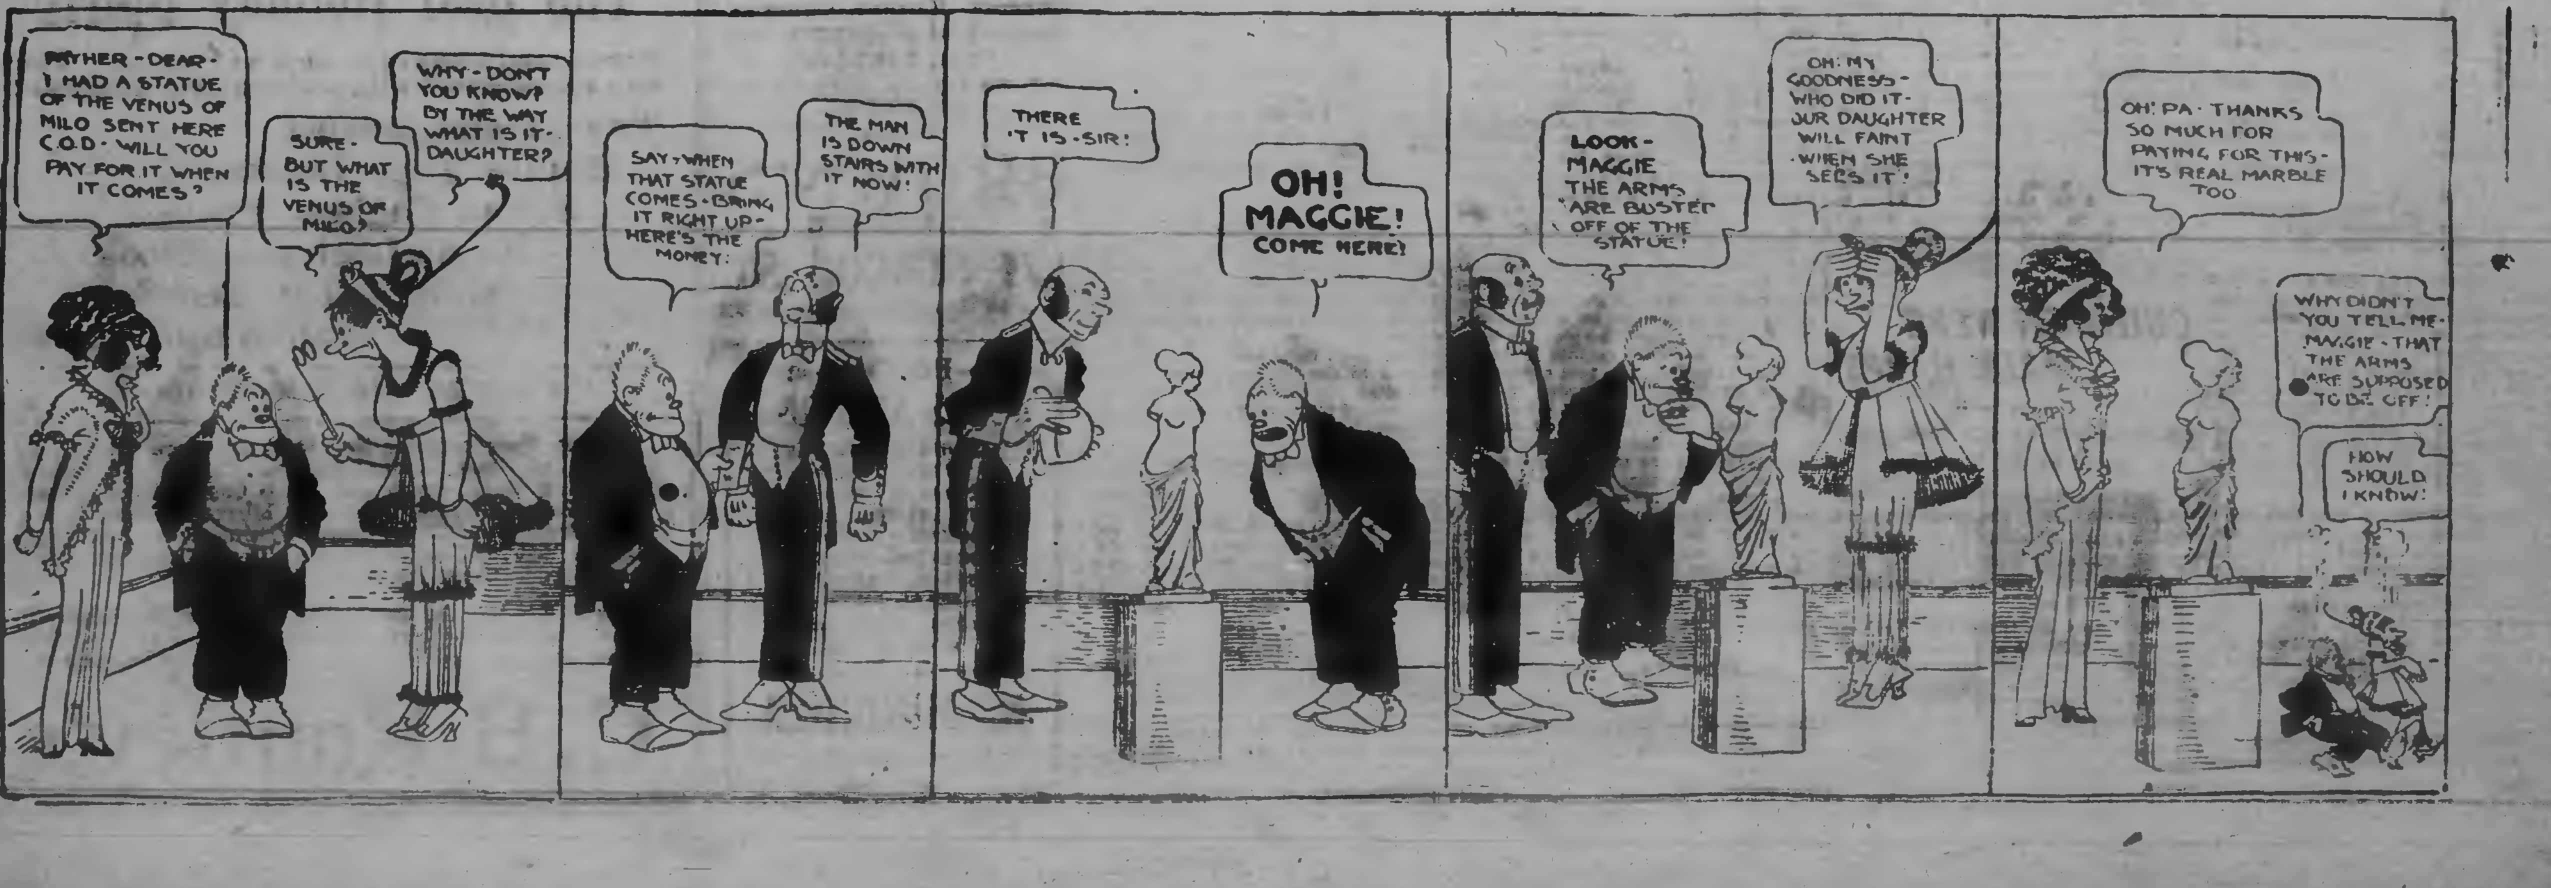
BRINGING UP FATHER

BY GEORGE McMANUS



FATHER - DEAR - I HAD A STATUE OF THE VENUS OF MILO SENT HERE C.O.D - WILL YOU PAY FOR IT WHEN IT COMES?
SURE - BUT WHAT IS THE VENUS OF MILO?
WHY - DON'T YOU KNOW? BY THE WAY WHAT IS IT - DAUGHTER?
SAY - WHEN THAT STATUE COMES - BRING IT RIGHT UP - HERE'S THE MONEY:
THE MAN IS DOWN STAIRS WITH IT NOW!
THERE 'T IS - SIR!
OH! MAGGIE! COME HERE!
LOOK - MAGGIE THE ARMS ARE BUSTED OFF OF THE STATUE!
OH! MY GOODNESS - WHO DID IT - OUR DAUGHTER WILL FAINT WHEN SHE SEES IT!
OH! PA - THANKS SO MUCH FOR PAYING FOR THIS - IT'S REAL MARBLE TOO
WHY DIDN'T YOU TELL ME - MAGGIE - THAT THE ARMS ARE SUPPOSED TO BE OFF!
HOW SHOULD I KNOW!

"About what?" dryly, even whimsically.

"About your being a secret agent from France."

This time M. Ferraud's glance proved that he was truly startled. Only three times in his career had his second life been questioned or suspected. Should he trust this young man? With that swift unerring instinct which makes the perfect student of character, he said. "You will do me a great favor not to impart this suspicion to any one else."

"Suspicion?"

"It is true: I am a secret agent;" and he said it proudly.

"You wish harm to none here?"

Asparagus Analyzed.

Asparagus belongs to the family of plants—liliacae—that includes onions, leeks and garlic. Each of those vegetables contains a small quantity of sulphur in the form of an oil. The presence of the sulphur is more noticeable in onions than in asparagus, but if shoots of asparagus are left in water for a few days the odor of onion develops and becomes quite strong. The food value of asparagus is slight, and much of it is lost in the process of boiling. The London Lancet declares that after boiling for twenty minutes asparagus has virtually no food value.

PUZZLES THE TRAVELER.

The Native Names of Various Foreign Cities and Countries.

A person who is starting on a trip around the world must be thoroughly acquainted with the names of the different places in which he is to stop or he will find himself much perplexed on arriving at the same. One would think that London is called London the world over, but such is not the case. Once you arrive in France and London become Londres. To most persons in Canada, the capital of Turkey is called Constantinople, but the inhabitants of the Ottoman empire call their chief city Stamboul, and it appears as such on all Turkish maps.

Rome and Florence in Italy may sound all right to the average Canadian, but once you visit the two cities you discover that they are called Roma and Firense, respectively. Not one in six of the ordinary inhabitants of Greece call their country by such name. The proper name is Helles.

Most travelers making their first visit to the Holy Lands are startled by the announcement that Jerusalem is called El Kuds, the Sea of Galilee, Bahr Tubaripeh; River Jordan, Sherlat el Kebir; the Dead Sea, Bahr Lut, and Bethlehem, Beit Lahm.

Every person in the Dominion knows what country you are referring to when speaking of Switzerland, but the traveler visiting the little European republic discovers that the inhabitants of the same call it everything but Switzerland. The population of that country is mostly made up of French and Germans with about six per cent. of Italians and those nationalities call it respectively La Suisse, Schweitz and Svizzera.

Three peoples in one country calling that country by three different names may appear bad enough, but the English and other tourists stopping in the capital of Egypt call it Cairo, the French officials stationed there call it Le Caire, and the Arabs, who were there first and should know best, call it Masr el Kahira.

A Japanese has to leave his own country and go to the nearest English-speaking settlement to know he has ever been in Japan at all. Japan, to its own natives is Nipon or Niphon—whichever way you think gets nearest to their pronunciation.

Likewise there is no China and more strangely still, there is no word in Chinese to represent China as a whole. We of the outside always think of that vast republic as of one country and of one people, whilst in reality it is practically a number of countries with a wide divergence of language and race. The natives range from copper to almost white, and vary in religion from Buddhists to Jews, and in language from Siamese and French in the south to Russian in the north.

The best way to express the term China and the one most often used seems to be Chung Kwoh, China proper, but it is to be expected that the new Government will soon adopt a more comprehensive name for its country along with its other modern improvements.

Most Chinese towns with which we think we are familiar are quite something else if we happen to visit them—such as Kuang Chou, for Canton.

Corea calls itself Tsiotsien; the natives of Siam when speaking of their country refer to it as T'hai, and the Persian thinks he lives in Iran.

Cigars That Last.

Ever smoke an Igorrote cigar? Well, these Igorrotes, in the Philippine Islands, make a cigar that in one respect is like the old time Christmas plum pudding—it lasts a week. It's fifteen inches long and three to five inches thick. Old man Ig. rolls the cig. and smokes it an hour; then Missus Ig. and all the little Igs. take their turn. By about the fourth day it must need a cuspidor attachment to keep it in operation. One smoke like this would last some people a lifetime.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

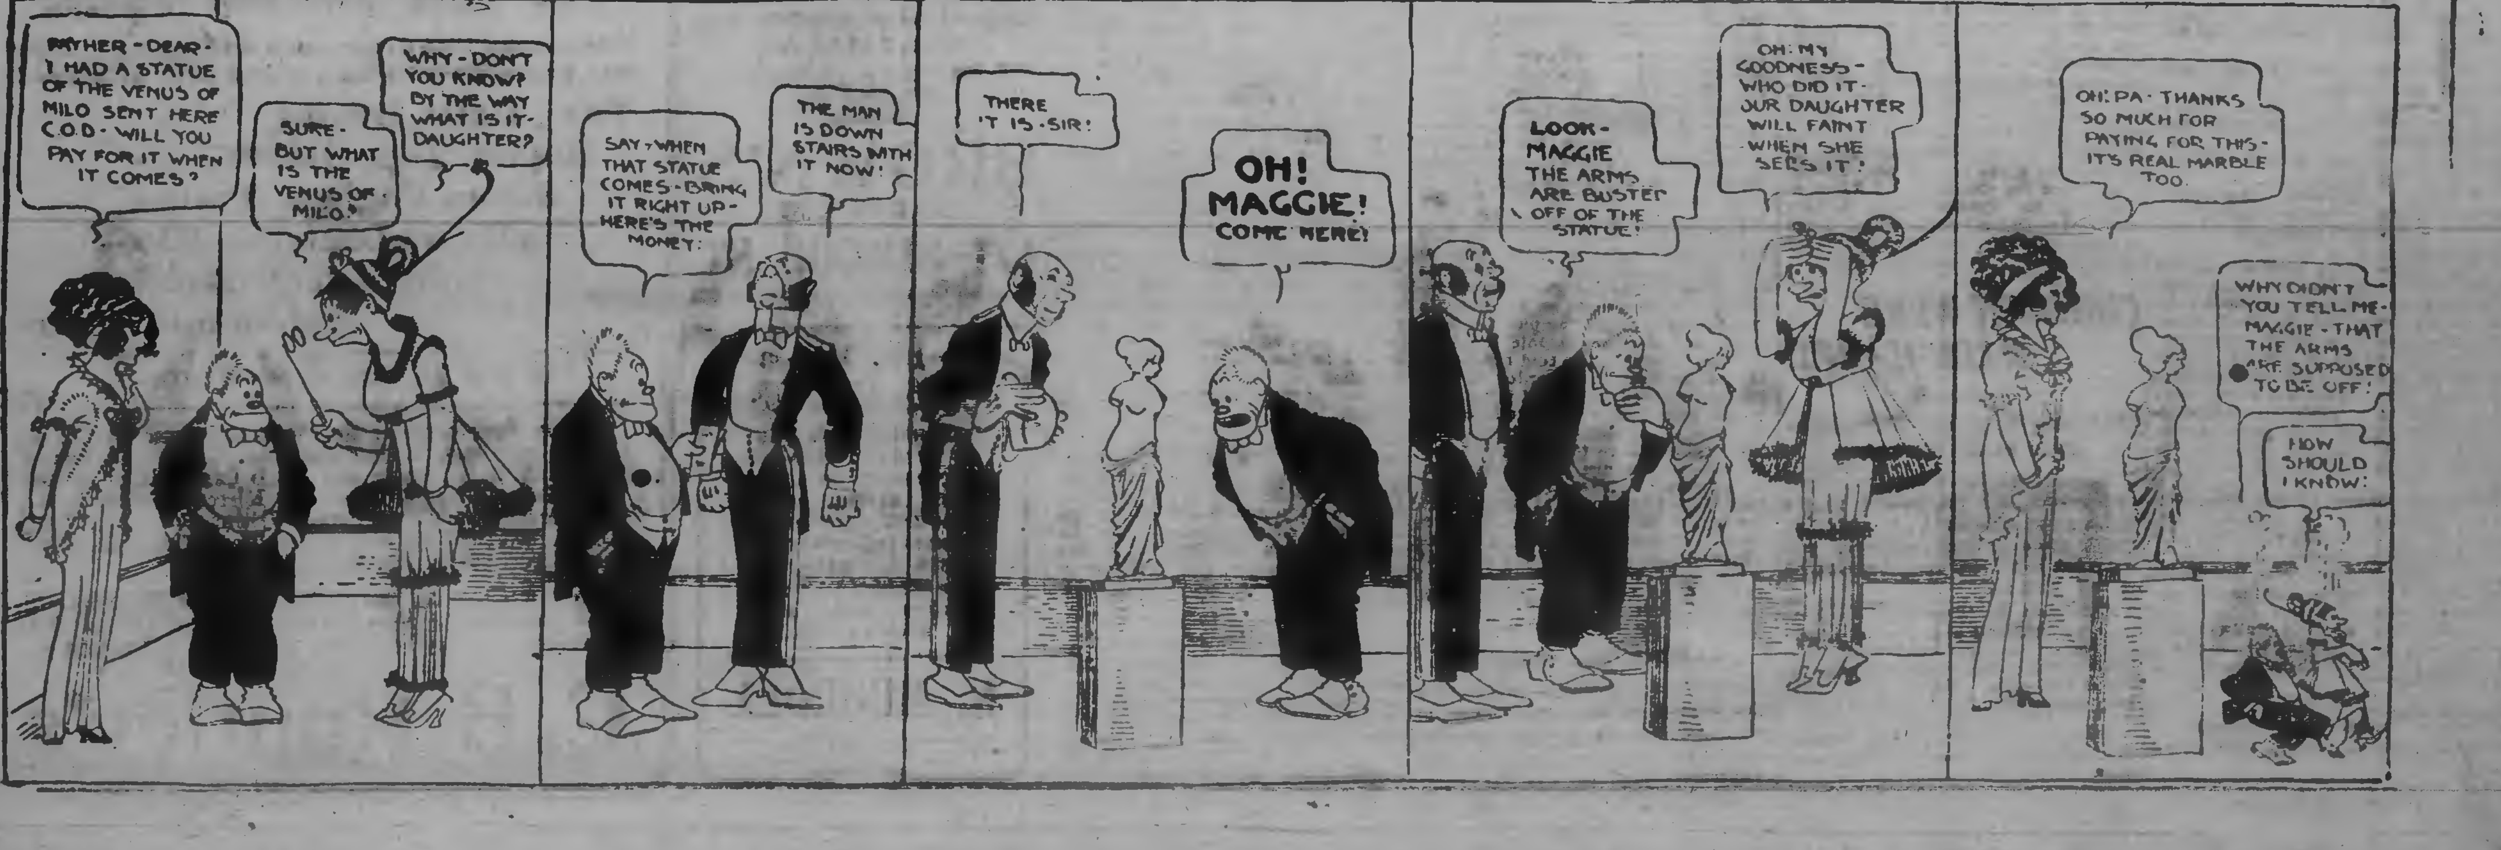
BRINGING UP FATHER

BY GEORGE McMANUS



FAYHER - DEAR - I HAD A STATUE OF THE VENUS OF MILO SENT HERE C.O.D. - WILL YOU PAY FOR IT WHEN IT COMES?
SURE - BUT WHAT IS THE VENUS OF MILO?
WHY - DON'T YOU KNOW? BY THE WAY WHAT IS IT - DAUGHTER?
SAY - WHEN THAT STATUE COMES - BRING IT RIGHT UP - HERE'S THE MONEY:
THE MAN IS DOWN STAIRS WITH IT NOW!
THERE 'T IS - SIR!
OH! MAGGIE! COME HERE!
LOOK - MAGGIE THE ARMS ARE BUSTED OFF OF THE STATUE!
OH! MY GOODNESS - WHO DID IT - OUR DAUGHTER WILL FAINT WHEN SHE SEES IT!
OH! PA - THANKS SO MUCH FOR PAYING FOR THIS - IT'S REAL MARBLE TOO.
WHY DIDN'T YOU TELL ME - MAGGIE - THAT THE ARMS ARE SUPPOSED TO BE OFF!
HOW SHOULD I KNOW!

BRITISH SOVEREIGN AND THE ROYAL FAMILY HAD QUIET DAY

Rideau Hall Also the Scene of an Old English Celebration---One Hundred Thousand Fed in New York---Riot in Los Angeles---Niagara Falls Couple Got a Set of Triplets From Santa Claus.

LONDON, Dec. 26—The royal family spent Christmas at York Cottage, Sandringham, His Majesty's Norfolk estate, where all the old customs on which the late King Edward insisted were observed, and it was just a homely gathering. Their Majesties were surrounded by all their children except Prince Albert, who is with the Mediterranean fleet.

For dinner every famous Christmas dish appeared; turkeys, of which no fewer than fifty were roasted in the Sandringham kitchens, followed h roast baron of beef and plum pudding—an enormous one which made an almost state entrance between two footmen with powdered wigs scarlet and gold coats, white satin breeches and pink silk stockings. The afternoon was taken up with games in which Princess Victoria took a leading part. After tea the children's Christmas tree was lighted up and stripped of its presents, which were distributed among the family.

The royal family will remain at Sandringham until Jan. 12, when the Court will return to Windsor.

King George, like his father, is never so happy as when he is living the life of an English country gentleman, and while at Sandringham all the ceremonies of the Court were laid aside and King George, in the bosom of his family, leads as simple an existence as any of the squires in the district.

Christmas at Rideau Hall.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26. — Christmas Day was spent at Rideau Hall in typical old English fashion. Every member of the household was the recipient of a present from the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia from the humblest page boy to Col. Farquhar, the military secretary. This was not the only manifestation of the Christmas spirit at Rideau Hall, for there was a big Christmas tree given by their Royal Highnesses in the evening, at which every member of the household was invited, and the presents were distributed from it by Princess Patricia. The big tree was set in the centre of the ball room.

The Duke and Princess Patricia attended service in the morning in St. Bartholomew's Church.

Residents of the capital made this Christmas a regular home day.

Hundred Thousand Dined.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26. — Well attended church services and the distribution of Christmas dinners to nearly 100,000 of the city's dependents were the features of New York's observance of the day of nativity.

The Salvation Army led in the distribution of Christmas cheer. In addition to issuing 5,000 Christmas dinner baskets, each of them containing food enough for six, the organization entertained 2,500 children with a Christmas tree party. Commander Eva Booth presided at this and personally distributed the presents.

One of the notable events of the day was the celebration organized by the "spugs," or Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving. Over 11,000 adults and children, rich and poor, attended its Christmas tree party, at which presents, coffee, cake, sandwiches and candy were distributed Riot In Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 26.—Rafael Adames, a Mexican, was killed, and five policemen were injured yesterday in a riot at the Plaza, when the officers started to break up a meeting of several hundred unemployed and hungry men. Twenty of the rioters were arrested.

When the police arrived on the scene and began to clear the streets, stones were thrown and clubs used by the men who had been listening to speeches. Adames was one of the leaders in resisting, and was shot by an officer.

Although the rioters put up a vigorous fight, none were armed, and the police suffered injuries from clubs and stones only. The Plaza finally was cleared, and the disturbance ended.

Released For Christmas.

OGDEN, Utah, Dec. 26. — With their promise to return the only pledge, forty-five boys and young men serving terms at the Utah State Industrial School were released yesterday by Supt. E. G. Gouans, after a special ruling by the board of trustees. They were all able to reach their homes in time to eat Christmas dinner, and will not return to the state school until Dec. 29.

A Real Christmas Present.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 26.—A bounteous Christmas present was left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Tiller, Victoria avenue, when the stork paid a visit and left triplets, all boys. The mother and babes are all doing well.

Hydro Will Be Used.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 26. — Up to the present the city has been unable to supply the street railway with Hydro power because of the lack of direct current. This has been remedied, however, and Wednesday night the new system was tried with satisfactory results. The railway will take 1,000 horsepower and the added consumption means a lowering of the general rate in the near future.

Spanish Cruiser at Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 26.—The Spanish armored cruiser, Carlos V., which was ordered to Mexican waters for the protection of Spanish subjects, arrived here yesterday morning.

TWO MEN KILLED WHEN LOCOMOTIVE EXPLODES

BUFFALO, Dec. 26.—Two men were killed and six were injured when a Wabash Railway engine, running light, blew up on Erie Railroad tracks a quarter of a mile east of Main street, near the northern city line yesterday. The dead and injured are:

John Thorpe, fireman, Fort Erie, Ont.

Gustave Spang, night watchman, Buffalo Crushed Stone Co.

The injured:

Joseph Curran, engineer, St. Thomas, Ont., shoulder dislocated, cut and bruised.

Adam Schultz, switch tender, burned, cut and bruised.

Fred. Clark, St. Thomas, brakeman, fractured ankle, cut about face and shoulders.

William Bartel, Buffalo, slightly cut by flying debris.

William Cameron, brakeman, Windsor, Ont., slightly injured.

J. B. Savage, Windsor, Ont., both feet crushed.

The engine came here with a full train crew from Niagara Falls early yesterday to pick up a westbound immigration train. At the Main street crossing Schultz, a switch tender, signalled the engine to stop so that he could get a ride to his home in East Buffalo. The engine was barely moving when the explosion occurred. Watchman Spang was about to step on the fender. He was struck by the crown shield and carried over 150 feet.

Fireman Thorpe of Fort Erie, Ont., was standing on the tender. The force of the explosion tilted the rear of the engine upward, and when it came down Thorpe, who had fallen between the engine and tender, was crushed to death.

Bartel was an Erie Railway employe who had boarded the engine a few minutes before the accident.

THIEF DROPS DEAD

Jasper Reed Comes to His End in Belgium.

ANTWERP, Dec. 26. — Mystery surrounded the death of an old man with a wooden leg, who fell dead in an Antwerp street just after being accused of stealing a bundle of bank notes valued at £240 sterling, missed from a bank a moment before. A post-mortem showed that he committed suicide by swallowing a dozen potassium of cyanide tablets, but the missing notes were not found on him.

The cripple's identity has since been conclusively established. He is named Jasper Reed, born at Montreal in 1838. His leg was amputated in prison here while he was undergoing a sentence for the theft of £480 in Antwerp in circumstances almost identical with his latest crime. Reed is believed to be a prominent member of an international gang of thieves.

CHILDREN WERE MADE HAPPY

Christmas Tree and Entertainment at the Temple.

Members of the Salvation Army and particularly the young people had a grand time at the Temple last night, when a Christmas tree was unloaded and gifts were distributed to the children.

Bandsmen B. Gray and T. Yost were St. Nicholas and his wife, respectively. The boys' band was prominent during the entertainment of music and song. Mr. R. C. Braund was chairman

"KIDS JUDGE" IS DEAD.

Commissioner J. E. Starr of Toronto Dies of Appendicitis.

TORONTO, Dec. 26. — Stricken with appendicitis a few days ago, Rev. John Edward Starr, commissioner of the juvenile court of Toronto, died at the General Hospital yesterday morning at the age of 58 years. So serious was Mr. Starr's condition when taken from his home at 257 Dunn avenue, that an operation was performed on him on Sunday. He failed to recover.

Mr. Starr was a fine type of man and one which the city could ill afford to lose. He was criticized occasionally since appointed magistrate of the juvenile court, but no one could point a finger at him and accuse him of acting in any other way than he thought proper. Ever since coming from Allandale some years ago Mr. Starr has been interested in boys and their welware, and it was the general opinion that a good man had been selected for the position.

DESPERADO CONFESSES

Admits Robbery and Murder and is Ready to Hang

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 26.—"I have no friends. I will plead guilty. I am ready to hang."

John Bostick, confessed train robber and slayer of Horace E. Montague, a Southern Pacific traveling passenger agent, made this statement shortly after he arrived from San Francisco in custody of Sheriff Hammel yesterday. Bostick held up the Sunset Limited near El Monte Dec. 1 and killed Montague, who was a passenger.

Sheriff Hammel said that on the way from San Francisco, where the prisoner was captured Tuesday, Bostick had made a complete confession not only of the El Monte murder and robbery but of another hold-up Nov. 24 near Richmond, Cal.

WOULD BUY FATHER OUT

Loan Shark's Son Offered to Forego $25,000 Notes.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 26.—Friends, relatives, former employes and attorneys of D. H. Tolman, convicted money lender, now serving a six months' sentence on Harts Island, again besieged the executive chamber Wednesday to solicit a Christmas pardon for him. Among the governor's callers was E. E. Tolman, a son of the convicted man.

Managers of Tolman's enterprises in Buffalo, Albany, Syracuse and Rochester were present to aid in the fight for his liberty.

Tolman's attorneys brought $500,000 in notes with them to the Capitol and offered to burn them in the executive chamber if a pardon were granted. Inquiry by the governor proved that while the notes would be burned, Tolman desired to reserve the right to sue on part of them.

Later Elmer E. Tolman, the prisoner's son withdraw all restrictions and offered to go out of business entirely if his plea were granted.

Should further evidence of good faith be desired, the applicant would be willing to have the pardon made conditional upon the performance of all promises made.

The notes in question affect 25,000 people, it is said, and most of them represent loans of about $20. This indebtedness would be cancelled in each instance.

HOLIDAY TRUCE.

Quiet Reigns In Turbulent Mexico, But Not For Long.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26. — Apparent quiet in the Mexican situation was interpreted here yesterday by officials as merely a "holiday armistice" and temporary. Strategists believe that Gen. Villa, the rebel leader, whose victories already have placed him in the forefront of the Constitutionalists, will press his campaign southward with a view to carrying the warfare into the Federal district to compete with Gen. Huerta for the mastery of the Mexican capital.

Official reports received here yesterday were meagre. Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the American squadron in Mexican gulf waters, reported his departure on the flagship Rhode Island from Tampico for Vera Cruz. As his recent laconic despatches from Tampico have told repeatedly of the restoration of order in that lately disturbed section, it is believed he has gone to Vera Cruz to assign to the proper stations the battleships just arrived there to relieve the vessel about to return to home waters. As Admiral Fletcher is directing the battleship manoeuvres at his own discretion, officials thought he might return without notice to Tampico, where further hostilities may ensue as a result of rebel determination to gain control of a port of entry on the gulf coast.

OBITUARY

GWENDOLYN ARMSTRONG

After an illness extending over several weeks, from fever followed by pneumonia, Gwendolyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Armstrong, passed away Wednesday night, aged 5 years, 2 months and 22 days. She was an exceptionallyb right, winsome child, and had a friendly greeting for the neighbors on the street. She was loved by all who met her and the loss to her parents cannot be told, for she was the delight of the home.

The funeral yesterday afternoon was attended by a large number of the friends of the family.—Kenora News.

MRS. HUGH ROBERTSON

Alma Cox, wife of Mr. Hugh Robertson, 567 Reid St., passed away last night at the age of 40 years. Mrs. Robertson had not been well for some time.

She is survived by her husband and her father and mother.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, to Ray's Cemetery, Lakefield. Service will be held at the late residence at 1:30.

MRS. CHAS McCALL

Alice Frith, wife of Mr. Charles McCall, lot 1, concession 9, Douro, passed away at her home yesterday, at the age of 32 years.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Parents Bereaved

Lillian Grace Yorke, the four-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yorke, 372½ Water Street, passed away yesterday afternoon.

The funeral took place this afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

TO BRING UP THE RATES

Hon. Mr. Foster is Off to Conference in Britain

OTTAWA, Dec. 26—That the question of the increase in ocean freight rates will be considered at two or three sittings of the Imperial Trade Commission, and that he is hopeful of good results was the statement of Hon. George E. Foster last evening. Mr. Foster leaves to-day for England to attend the meetings of the commission, which will continue from Jan. 8 until the end of the month, after which the commissioners go to South Africa. Mr. Foster will not go south, however, but will return direct to Canada.

Canada's Minister of Trade and Commerce said the question of ocean freight rates had only recently been brought to the attention of the commissioners and so no reference to it could be embodied in the report which will be laid before them, but the matter was one of such pressing importance that it would be dealt with as thoroughly as the short time at their disposal would allow.

It is understood that representatives of the leading exporters and importers as well as of steamship companies will be ordered to make statements to the commission.

Transatlantic freight rates are the most important to be considered. The upward trend has a serious effect on the trade of Canada with Great Britain, and the hope of Mr. Foster is that the commission may be enabled to take action immediately.

MAKES HANDSOME GIFT.

Archduke Frederick of Austria Will Give Nation a Fine Museum.

VIENNA, Dec. 26. — Archduke Frederick, the richest member of the Austrian Imperial family, made the nation a magnificent Christmas gift yesterday. He purchased the ancient Augustine monastery next door to his palace and intends to build a museum on the site, which will be the finest and most valuable in Vienna.

The archduke has long considered the scheme of building a suitable museum for the far-famed Albertine collection, and, having obtained the Emperor's consent to the project, now intends to spend some thousands of pounds on his pet scheme.

The Albertine collection contains original drawings by Raphael, Michael Angelo, Rembrandt, Rubens, Watteau, Boucher, Durer, Klinger and 200,000 of the finest engravings in the world, with a library of 50,000 rare manuscripts. It will be remembered that the collection, which now is housed in the monastery, was in great danger of destruction two years ago, when the archduke's palace caught fire.

Boy Accidentally Shot.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 26.—Arthur Schlender, 15 years of age, was accidentally shot yesterday by a 22-calibre rifle in the hands of playmates who had received the gun for a Christmas present. The bullet entered the lad's right hand. He was removed to the Niagara Falls General Hospital. The shooting took place in the rear of the boy's home on Victoria avenue.

Had Thumb Torn Off.

CORNWALL, Ont., Dec. 26.—Jas. Calhoun of Dundee had the misfortune to have the thumb of his left hand torn off and the adjoining fingers badly bruised. He was feeding an ensilage cutter, and in using the levers got his hand caught between the cogs.

Death of Mrs. Stevenson.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Dec. 26.—Mrs. Adlai N. Stevenson, wife of former Vice-President Stevenson, died early last night. She had been ill for several months. Mrs. Stevenson was 70 years old, and is survived by her husband and three children.

TO JAIL FOR THE WINTER

Wm. Sloane Got Three Months on Charge of Stealing $10

Wm. Sloane, a well known character in police court circles, was sentenced to three months in jail for theft of $10 from Arthur Kennedy, by Magistrate Dumble, this morning. Sloane had a judgment of suspended sentence against him.

Arthur Kennedy gave evidence to the effect that he met Sloane in Halpin's blacksmith shop. Sloane asked him for the loan of fifty cents. He gave him a ten dollar bill to get changed, but he failed to turn up.

"You didn't give it to him for a Xmas present then," enquired Mr. McElderry.

"No."

"I next saw him in Long's that evening," continued the witness. Sloane, on being asked to return the money, replied that the bartender had it.

Mr. McElderry—"Did you get any money back?"

"Not a five cent piece of it, did I get back."

To Mr. Gordon, witness denied there being any arrangement made to the giving of the fifty cents for a bottle. Witness also denied drinking that day.

Constable Meagher stated that while in conversation with the prisoner on Wednesday in regard to the theft charge, Sloane had stated that Kennedy wanted him to get a bottle of whiskey for him. He took the $10 Kennedy offered him. On searching the prisoner $2.36 was found on his person. Sloane admitted spending the money. He also said he had come back to the blacksmith shop to see Kennedy. Kennedy was not there however.

In the box Sloane admitted that the constable's story was the same as he had told the constable in the police station on Wednesday.

He returned shortly after Kennedy had given him the money, but Kennedy was not there.

Witness described how Kennedy had treated him out of a bottle. Kennedy put the bottle down and witness finished it.

He denied getting $3 from Indians on Saturday in the same manner.

"The crime of larceny was certainly committed," remarked Magistrate Dumble, at the conclusion of the evidence.

FAMILY RE-UNION FOR CHRISTMAS

Mr. and Mrs. H. Greene, Perry Street, Had Full House.

"Greenoke" the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. Greene, 202 Perry St., was the scene of a very pretty function yesterday. It was a home reunion of all their sons and daughters with their families. Some thirty persons were present, among them being Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund and family; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Greene and family; Mrs. C. S. Greene and son Carlos; Mr. Roy Bacon of Toronto, Miss M. Bacon, city and Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilde of Havelock.

NAPANEE MAN'S SUDDEN DEATH

KINGSTON, Dec. 26.—While sitting in a chair in Sands' cigar store, Charles Byrnes was seized with a weak spell and in attempting to go to the lavatory in the basement went headlong down a flight of stairs, a distance of over 20 feet. He was picked up dead. It was thought that the fall had killed him, but the coroner who made an examination stated that he died of heart failure. Byrnes, who was unmarried, resided in Napanee.

GLACIER PLAYS PRANKS.

It Gave Canada a Harbor and Now Takes It Back.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26. — The grand Pacific glacier in Alaska at the head of Glacier Bay has been "playing indian" with Canada by giving her a harbor on the Alaskan coast and then taking it back again, according to Prof. Lawrence Martin of the University of Wisconsin, who returned yesterday after making a survey of the glaciers in that region for the National Geographic Society.

Glacier Bay, wholly within American territory when the Canadian boundary treaty was made, was extended into Canadian territory during the summer of 1912 by the recession of the grand Pacific glacier, thereby giving Canada harbor facilities, much to the gratification of Canadian officials, according to the press of Canada at the time.

A sudden and rapid advance of the glacier since that time has pushed the head of the bay back 4,000 feet into American territory again, Prof. Martin reports.

C. B. Routley's

January Weather; And Women's Coats at Half-price

Seldom, if ever, bas Peterborough seen such value offered, as there is in these Women's and Misses Coats.

And we would explain just here, that they are not a shoddy line of garments, but coats that in material, design and finish, bear the stamp of quality and good tailoring.

The firm that made them, accepted a very low figure on them as a clearing purchase, and thus the profit that should have been their's, reverts to our customers, in the form of the great saving they obtain, by reason of the very low prices.

The coats are divided and priced as follows:

Coats Worth up to $16.00, for $9.44.

Johnny Coats, Storm Coats and General Utility Coats in heavy checks, tweeds, etc., some with belted effects, and some with trimmed backs.

There are many with fancy collars, and many with convertible collars. Straight or cutaway fronts, certainly of great value at $9.44

For $13.59 There Are Coats That Are Worth up to $20 and $25.

Splendid tweeds, zibelines, chinchillas, and brocaded matelasse, in pleasing shades, which include greys, browns, blues, and black and green mixtures.

Perfect in style and workmanship, each coat is a model of elegance, many having collars and facings of velvet. At $13.59, they are good buying indeed.

Coats Valued up to $13.00, Are Priced $7.83.

A smart collection of checks and stripes in browns and greys, with a number of other plain, serviceable cloths in seasonable colors.

Some are full length, some three-quarters; all fitted with convertible collar, either of velvet or self material.

Smart in appearance, and wonderfully cheap at

GOES THE WAY OF ALL CROOKS

Michael Sage Has Spent Half His Life in Prison.

More at Home in Prison Than Out He Said.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—The last survivor of Chicago's first fully organized band of criminals who flourished a generation ago under the picturesque Mollie Mott, has passed from the stage. Michael Sage, white of hair, and showing everyone of his 63 years, made no defence against a sentence of one year in the Chicago House of Correction. His active days are over, in the opinion of the police, even if he lives out his sentence.

Half of Sage's life has been spent in prison. He began stealing when he was 12 years old, and never learned anything else.

The old man was arrested Wednesday night for attempting to burglarize a residence.

"I did not get in, Judge," he said and then added, as if to excuse his failure: "I guess I am getting too old and stiff. I won't mind a year, I am more at home in prison than out anyway."

The Mott gang of pickpockets, thieves, burglars, holdup men, and general utility thugs 20 years ago lived the scenes that usually are found in dime novels and no member of the gang was more resourceful in crime than Sage. Mollie Mott, by her beauty and personality, led the gang and was the cause of more than one fight between jealous followers.

The gang's success bred emulation and other criminals formed themselves into a band, known in police annals as the Shevlin gang. The gang fought the police and each other, until Mollie's charms conquered one of the Shevlin gang, and brought the two tribes under her harmonious sceptre. Relentless war with the police, disease and prison cells in the succeeding years, broke up the band and its members for the most part are dead, or at least passed from the ken of the local police.

WAS FINED $10

The local woman charged with the theft of a number of small articles, from the store of Woolworth's a few days ago, was fined $10 by Magistrate Dumble this morning on her plea of guilty.

Sweden is on the verge of national prohibition of both alcoholic beverages and tobacco.

INNOCENT MAN GETS FREEDOM

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—After serving five years of a 15-year sentence imposed upon him for a crime for which be was innocent, Gerolmio Fatzari walked out a free man from St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary Wednesday.

Fatzari was sentenced for attempted murder, in connection with a fracas which occurred in St. David's lane in March, 1908. He was convicted on the evidence of three witnesses, one of whom has since paid the death penalty for a murder committed in the eastern provinces. Another is now serving a term in Dorchester Penitentiary, while the third is a fugitive from justice, having jumped a bail bond of $12,000 given at the office of the Court of Appeals.

The police became convinced of Fatzari's innocence about five months ago. Proceedings were hurried at the last minute so that the unfortunate man would be granted his liberty on Christmas eve.

THE IDEAL WINTER RESORT

While Algonquin Park is far from being a sanitarium, it's discovery as the ideal winter resort has been much as anything due to recent developments in medical science. Those who have found the dampness and the frequent slush of eastern cities unpleasant at the best, but impossible in many cases, have been used to seek relief in the southern States. It has seemed the simplest remedy both to physician and patient, to seek for heat where the cold proved unendurable, but more recently there has been a keen appreciation of the dry frigidity of the north and that is where the Park steps in. Two thousand feet above the sea level, it is always dry and cold and usually bright. Days spent in snowshoe tramps through primitive forests where every leaf and bough bears its weight of glistening crystals, in the breathless flight of toboggan or ski, and in the ring of steel against the icebound waters of some lake; together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old-fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but those who have once experienced them, return to their avocations with renewed energies, with hardened muscles, and a grateful memory that forever blots out all thoughts of the relaxing South. Algonquin Park is 200 miles north of Toronto, and 285 miles west of Montreal.

The Highland Inn offers most comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. Write Grand Trunk Agents, or resident manager of the Highland Inn for handsome descriptive booklet.

CALUMET STAGGERS UNDER TERRIBLE CHRISTMAS TRAGEDY

Cry of Fire in Hall Crowded With Children and Parents Who Were Attending Christmas Tree Festivities Precipitated a Panic and the Victims Were Trampled.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 26.—On the day which throughout all Christendom is set aside as a day of rejoicing over the birth of the Saviour, Calumet, stricken to the heart by an almost unbelievable catastrophe, stands mourning by the side of its dead, the 72 victims (most of whom were children) of the frightful panic on Christmas eve in the Italian hall. This panic followed a false alarm cry of fire during the progress of a Christmas tree entertainment arranged for families of the copper strikers. To-day the people of Calumet see their neighbors, their brothers, their sisters and their little children staggering under an almost unbearable burden of distress and grief.

While several hundred miners and their wives looked on, the children pressed eagerly toward the stage to receive Christmas presents. At the instant a man put his head in at the door of the hall and yelled "Fire."

The cry was taken up by those in the hall. Every one started for the doors. The weaker were thrown to the floor, and those behind tried to climb over those ahead of them. The principal exist was a narrow stairway at the back of the hall. When this had been cleared of the bodies that filed it to the top, and a quick accounting had been made it was found that seventy-four corpses had been piled up beside the hall building. It is thought that a dozen others were carried away by friends.

The dead that were piled up beside the hall included 37 girl, 19 boys, 13 women and five men. Excited men and women stood about the building, some dazed by the sudden change from holiday festivities to tragedy, others calling hysterically for a missing child, and a few even threatening violence to the rescuers for keeping them back from the long row of bodies.

A great mass meeting of Calumet citizens was held yesterday afternoon to express their sympathy and devise ways and means to ameliorate the sufferings of those on whom death had fallen so heavly. A committee of twelve was appointed to visit each individual home of the bereaved families and assist financially. Unlimited funds are assured and no outside aid will be necessary.

"With the kindest feeling for those who offered it, we ask no outside help," states the resolutions of sympathy adopted. "These are our own people and this is our sacred privilege to care for our dead and to comfort the living."

The statement of President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners that no benefits from the citizens would be accepted, was disregarded. The strikers also met yesterday afternoon and named a committee comprising representatives of the nationalities of the victims and call on the stricken relatives and learn their wishes regarding the funeral. This committee will meet to-day to make arrangements for the services.

The authorities have so far been unable to trace a man who is said to have gone up the stairs of the Italian hall and raised the cry of fire, which is supposed to have started the panic which led to the fearful crush in the stairway and caused the death of the nearly four score men, women and children. There seems to be little hope he will be apprehended. The other theory that the cry of fire originated within the hall was substantiated yesterday by Matt Sari, a striker, who lost his son in the disaster. He declared the cry came from a group of men and women toward the front of the hall.

President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners, said yesterday that he had with difficulty kept within bounds the relatives and families of the dead. The reports that the Miners' Union had started the panic spread rapidly among the strikers, and there were many threats of reprisals.

He pointed out that the absence of any untoward act was an example of the restraint which he said had characterized the action of strikers from the beginning of the trouble five months ago. President Moyer also said that he could bring witnesses to prove that the man who cried "Fire" wore a Citizens Alliance insignia, and said that he had telegraphed this information to Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor with a view to having the Government investigate the case.

Wilson Will Not Reply.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Secretary Wilson said last night that he would not reply to the Moyer telegram. "The question whether or not the Government has the authority to make the investigation suggested by Moyer," said Secretary Wilson, "has not yet been passed upon. Until it is disposed of I cannot predict what, if any, action will be taken by the Federal authorities."

Social Calls in China.

It is difficult for a Chinaman to master the English pronunciation, and this accounts in great measure for the prevalence of pidgin English. The letter r is almost always sounded like l, so we have ki-lin or kleen for green and lain for rain. "Too muchee lain just now" is often heard, "just now" being a favorite expression to denote the immediate present. In calling upon a lady one says to the boy (house servant of any age from sixteen to sixty), "Missee have got?" and the answer comes, "Have got" or "No have got," according to whether she is in or out. This recalls the time honored, true story of the lady who called and the boy reported to his mistress of the house, "One pieces man down side, b'long missus." Scarcely complimentary to the "pieces man!"—Amy W Hotchkiss in National Magazine.

A smouldering cigarette end, or the smoke from a pipe blown on an aspidistra plant will rid it of insects.

SENTENCED TO WASH HIS FACE

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 26.—The dirtiest man in Kansas City, charged with vagrancy in the South Municipal Court, was sentenced by Judge Bland to wash his face. "You are the dirtiest man I ever saw," said the judge. "Go and wash your face and hands and let us see what you look like." Ten minutes later the man returned. The change was wonderful. His face was flushed from the vigorous rubbing. "You have been punished enough," said the judge. "Discharged."

"THE CANADIAN EXPRESS"

"The Canadian Express", a merry musical comedy of the mile-a-minute laugh variety, will be the featured offering of the all-star English musical comedy company, "The Versatiles", when they come to the Grand for one night and a New Year's matinee, Jan. 1.

This brilliant little musical gem was written by the well known British author, F. Stuart-Whyte, from a series of amusing incidents which came to his attention while travelling from Vancouver to Halifax. The stage version of the hold-up may be a bit highly colored to make it blend into the musical comedy vein of the piece, but the main occurrences were taken from actual life.

The novel setting of this clever musical gem shows the interior half of a tourist coach, with the berths, seats, smoking compartment, etc.

The musical comedy is preceded by the Old Country Pierrots in a forty-five minute program of new songs and dances. There are ten song numbers in the Pierrot show and a dozen in the musical play, making a total of twenty-two in the offering. The presenting company is returning to England from an extended tour of Australia and arrived in Vancouver last month, and sail for England early in February, after playing the most important cities only in Canada.

In a new resuscitation apparatus which weighs but seven pounds, pure oxygen is obtained at any desired pressure by the admission of water to a compartment containing a patented chemical compound.

FAMOUS STATUE IS PURCHASED

FLORENCE, Dec. 26.—Donatello's famous statue of St. John the Baptist which was executed for his friend and patron, Martelli, and purchased by the Italian Government for $80,000, was placed yesterday in Donatello's hall in the national museum after having remained hidden for five centuries in the old Martelli palace.

Large sums have been offered for the statue by foreign galleries and art collectors, but the law prevented its leaving the country.

Explosion Killed Child.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 26.—When Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moore were in the city making purchases of Christmas presents, Percy, their ten-year-old son, was killed by his little brother shortly after noon Wednesday, while they were playing "hunter and moose." A blank cartridge in a high calibre shot-gun exploded near his face, the concussion driving his teeth back into his head, killing him almost instantly.

Larkin To Visit America.

DUBLIN, Dec. 26.—James Larkin, the leader of the Irish Transport Workers, who have been on strike here since September, is going to the United States early in the new year to carry on his "fiery cross" mission among the laboring men, and at the same time to collect funds.

He so informed the strikers in a speech delivered yesterday at Kilmainham, a suburb of Dublin.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH IS A LONELY OLD MAN

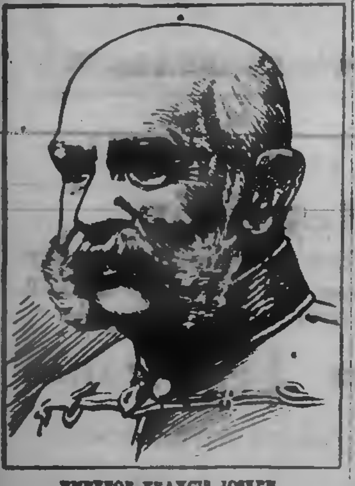
Head of the House of Hapsburg Derives His Throne From a German Baron Who by an Act of Kindness Earned an Empire—Austria-Hungary Is Biggest Country In Europe Except Russia.

The Emperor of Austria-Hungary who is often spoken of as the most lonely monarch in Europe, is a famous shot and is descended from a race of keen sportsmen. It was, in fact, on a hunting expedition that the first Hapsburg to come into prominence met with an adventure which helped him to the crown of what was then "the Holy Roman Empire of German Nationality."

Rudolf von Hapsburg was a simple German baron who led a quiet life in his castle, Hapsburg, among the Alps, and did not concern himself with the troubles which rent the empire into warring factions. He was riding home one night after a day's hunting when he came to a swollen mountain torrent. The tinkling of a little bell on the further bank attracted his attention. He saw a priest and an accompanying acolyte carrying the viaticum of some dying sinner, and their way was barred by the stream.

Rudolf von Hapsburg set the priest upon his horse and not only helped him safely across, but escorted him cap in hand, meekly and on foot, to his destination. The recital of this graceful act to the German princes assembled for the election of an emperor is said to have induced them to vote in favor of Rudolf von Hapsburg. At any rate, Rudolf was crowned emperor and managed a very difficult empire with considerable skill.

The empire of Kaiser Franz Josef is greater in extent than any other European state, save Russia, and wherever you go in it you will find a "jagd-schloss," a shooting box, where the mighty lodge when following their favorite sport.



EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH.

Whitewashed, with red-tiled roofs, and flanked by little round towers, these castles stand among clumps of trees in the fertile duchies of Austria, or rise up on a mountainside dark with fir trees. They look so peaceful, but heavy cares intrude even here, and the spirit of the place is not in harmony with its outward semblance.

The guns had hardly ceased speaking in the Balkans when Emperor Francis Joseph sought rest and peace in his castle among the Alps near Ischl.

When the Archduchess Sophie, the emperor's mother, bought this chalet it was a very unpretentious place. It has gradually been added to. But it still retains its original simple character. Every room looks as if it were lived in. The imperial owner's living apartments are as simple as, or even simpler than, the other rooms. He sleeps on a small camp bedstead.

Francis Joseph's daily life is in perfect harmony with these plain surroundings. He rises between 4 and 5 every morning, and after a cup of coffee and roll, without even butter, goes straight to his desk and begins the work of the day. Although far away from the seat of government he cannot escape the affairs of state.

Usually the emperor works steadily until about eight o'clock, when he goes for a quiet stroll in the forest for an hour or so. Then he returns to his desk and has a sort of light preliminary lunch, a chop or cutlet, with one glass of beer. This is brough on a tray to his writing desk. With occasional interruptions work goes on until midday, when a family luncheon is served.

Francis Joseph confines himself to a slice of "Rindfleish," that boiled beef of which Austrians are so fond. One glass of Austrian wine, red or white as he may fancy, or the doctor may direct, is all that he drinks. This is followed by a mild cigar, smoked from a long holder.

In the afternoon, between four and five o'clock, the emperor goes on a long drive through the forest. He never fails to take his gun along, and usually manages to have a little shooting on the way.

Not a Bull at All.

An English paper prints this joke under the title "A Laughable Bull."

"An Irish doctor sent this bill to a lady: 'To curing your husband till he died, 25 guineas.'"

It sounds funny, but it isn't a bull. In justice to the Irish physician let us state that the original meaning of the word "cure" was "to treat, to nurse." It is still used in that sense in many communities. "With this herb," says Mandeville, "I cured them all till some were healed and some did die."

Crowded London.

Nine hundred thousand of London's population are living more than two in a room.

CAN REDUCE WEIGHT IN BATH.

German Professor Gives Simple and Harmless Remedy for Stoutness.

Professor Franz Nagelschmidt, of Berlin, Germany, after pointing out the poisons that lurk in all anti-fat panaceas, declares that he has for nearly two years employed an electric battery for the reduction of superfluous flesh. This electric battery produces a "foradic" current which sets the little fibres and strands of your muscles in rhythmic, regular, harmonic vibrations. These muscular movements are attuned to the normal rhythm of a resting muscle in such a way that the muscular motions occur without fatigue to the bulk of huge flesh.

Fat, then, according to this "Nagelschmidt electric current" can be turned off and on at will. You may take on adipose or eliminate as much as you please. The only question seems to be one of submitting to the battery.

Another method of reducing fat to a minimum, available for many who cannot be placed in touch with this new electricity, is to artificially produce a current of electricity in your bath tubs. Although it is not so reasonable nor yet absolutely explainable upon our knowledge of the impenetrability of the human skin, yet it is a well-proved fact that if Epsom salts or sulphate of magnesium is added to the water of your full bath, in the course of a few months from fifteen to thirty pounds will be eliminated.

Whether this is a mysterious electrolytic action that is set up between your skin and water, or merely a powerful assault of the salt upon the usually impervious skin has not been positively determined. The fact, however, remains that Epsom salts in the bath tub aids materially in reducing your avoirdupois.

It is evident from these two procedures that corpulent persons need not expend all sorts of money upon every published anti-fat remedy. It is far better to apply these certainly harmless, cleanly and non-fatiguing methods discovered by medical men of acknowledged training than to pick up every catchpenny panacea with no other support than the emblazoned words of an advertising writer.

Prehistoric Relics From Africa.

Central Africa was once the home of a highly civilized people. The latest proof of this comes from Leo Frobenius, a German explorer, who collected and brought back to Berlin recently many specimens of ancient art. Much of this material is not older than the sixth century after Christ, but the various objects were found in the ruins of places from 15 to 25 feet below the surface, and these buildings had been built on the ruins of still older and more pretentious structures. The latter were of solid, well built masonry with court yards and gardens surmounted by roofs of tiles.

Some of the finest specimens of statuary and bas reliefs in bronze, terra cotta and carved quartz come from these prehistoric ruins. They rival in perfection of workmanship the best relics of ancient Egypt, thus proving that in very remote ages Central Africa must have been inhabited by a highly civilized people, and supporting the theory that Africa was the seat of the first high civilization which was transmitted across the Mediterranean to Europe, while the peoples who had founded it sank gradually into a condition of savagery, through what cause we can only conjecture.

The Oriental Beauty.

If the woman of fashion of London, Paris or New York spent as much time over her toilet as her sister of the far east she would have very little left in which to attend to her social and domestic duties. The oriental belle devotes most of her day to the preservation of her health and beauty. She uses many wonderful cosmetics for coloring her eyes and brows and for beautifying her skin. On arising her hair is dressed by her maid, who massages the scalp with oil made from aloe wood or cocoanut. The eastern woman will never interfere with the color of her hair, for the long silky blue black locks are considered her chief charm.

Next a very hot bath is prepared and in this she remains for two or three hours. In place of soap numberless unguents are used which render the skin as soft as velvet. These delicate perfumes are secret preparations of the bathing woman. The hair of the oriental beauty is beautifully long and soft and she has a way of arranging it which adds a distinct charm. The face is washed over with a milk into which the juice of a lemon has been squeezed.

BOWSER'S GOAT.

Its Milk a Sure Panacea For His Tuberculosis.

HIRES IT BY THE WEEK.

Installs It in Pigpen Despite Mrs. B.'s Objections—After Catastrophe Discovery of Animal's Sex Wrecks Bowser's Faith in Humanity.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

It was just dark and half an hour before Mr. Bowser might be expected home when the cook came running upstairs to gasp to Mrs. Bowser:

"Oh, ma'am, Mr. Bowser is home!"

"But where?"

"In the back yard."

"What's he doing there?"

"Talking with a man and looking into the empty hogpen. He's sure going to buy another hog!"

"He sure isn't if I have anything to say about it! Here he comes now. He's sneaked around to the front door!"

It was Mr. Bowser, all right, and he was seeking to look childlike and bland.

"Well?" he queried as he noted that Mrs. Bowser was regarding him with a stern look.

"What were you and that man talking about in the back yard?"

"We were talking about goats," was the stammered reply.

"Goats! You were not thinking of buying a goat?"

"I wanted the milk of one as a cure for my tuberculosis."

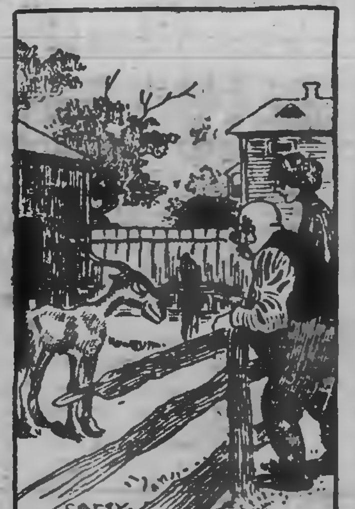
"Your grandmother's heel!"

"I have been told that I have symptoms of it."

"And you may be told that you are a lunatic!"

Goat's Milk the Panacea.

"Look here, Mrs. Bowser, I don't propose to let this thing run on me till one lung is gone. Goat's milk will arrest the dreaded disease right where it is, and that's the reason I have hired a goat."



"ISN'T HE A LULU?" ASKED MR. BOWSER.

"Hired a goat?"

"Yes, hired or rented or leased one just as you want to put it. I didn't want to buy, but I did want something in that pen, and so I am to give 20 cents a week for the use of the goat. The animal will be over here in the morning, and it will seem like farm life to be fussing around with him."

"But you—you"—

"Oh, I know I had trouble with the hog, but this is a different thing. The other critter and I didn't understand each other, but it will be all right in this case. He'll come here prepared to conduct himself in a proper manner and be as one of the family, and I shan't ache to brain him with the crowbar or hang him by the neck. He's a Prince Albert goat, you see."

"I never heard of a Prince Albert goat," said Mrs. Bowser.

"Very likely. There are plenty of things you never heard of, but if you keep on living they will come to you. In goats there is the Merino, the Southdown, the Suffolk, the Leghorn, the Shanghai, the Holstein and several other sorts, but the Prince Albert is known for his sweet and lovely disposition. You'll be glad I got him when you see him. I was lonely for a goat, and I've got one, and I shall take a heap of comfort out of it. Besides that, if it cures my case of tuberculosis"—

"Which you haven't got!"

Bowser Defends Plan.

"It's barely possible I haven't, Mrs. Bowser, but you must remember that goat milk is a preventive. There will be all that we can both drink morning and night."

"Did the man agree to do the milking for you?"

"Not much! He wasn't asked. Farmer Bowser will take charge of that and be glad to."

Mrs. Bowser had no more to say. She realized that if Mr. Bowser took a notion to buy a rhinoceros to occupy the empty henhouse, or a walrus to take possession of the cellar, nothing she could say would prevent. Indeed, she felt thankful that it was a goat instead of a gorilla.

The rented cure for tuberculosis arrived next morning soon after breakfast, and when he had been placed in the pen and his owner had departed, Mrs. Bowser went out to view him. He was long and lean and thin. One of his horns was broken off and his ears displayed liberal records of old dog bites. There was a film over one eye, and his chin was thrust out as if he were calling some one a liar. He had once had a tail to wave on the glorious Fourth, but some cannon firecracker thrown by a boy had battered and abridged it.

"Well, isn't he a lulu?" asked Mr. Bowser after a long minute.

"He would be—for a dime museum!" replied Mrs. Bowser.

"You don't fancy him?"

"He's homelier than the hog, Mr. Bowser. If you had hunted the whole of North America"—

Mrs. B.'s Innate Meanness.

"That's you—that's your way!" he interrupted as he danced around. "I go and rent a goat to make things cheerful and homelike and to prolong my life, and you lie awake all night to think of something mean to say. G'way from here!"

"But can't I give you my opinion of a goat?" she protested.

"No, ma'am! Keep away from this pen! Don't come within ten rods of it. You abused that hog in the most shameful manner, and that's why he acted in the way he did, but I'll protect this goat from your malignancy!"

Mrs. Bowser entered the house, and Mr. Bowser leaned lovingly over the pen and gazed down at his new acquaintance. The goat squinted up at him with his one good eye and seemed to feel at home. By and by, as he laid down with a grunt and a sigh, Mr. Bowser tiptoed softly away and whispered:

"A goat can read the human heart, and this one knows that I am his best friend!"

He had just reached the house to tell Mrs. Bowser that all Prince Albert goats were thorough gentlemen and ladies, when he heard a stifled shriek at the pen, and ran back to find the goat lying on his back with his four legs pawing the air.

"What's the matter—what's wrong?" called Mrs. Bowser.

"The blamed critter seems to have a fit!"

His Goatship's Feelings.

Mrs. Bowser came out and looked his goatship over and said: "Perhaps you made some observation that hurt his gentle feelings."

"Perhaps I didn't, but I will, though, if he tries to play any of his tricks on me! See—he's getting over it. Maybe he thought I was going to leave him alone."

"Shouldn't wonder. I have heard that Prince Albert goats love human society."

She motioned for him to step back with her, and they were not ten feet away when the P. A. uttered a "bah!" and a "woof!" and came near leaping out of the pen.

"Durn his eyes, he must stop that!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he rushed forward.

"It's just as I told you. That goat wants human society, and you'll have to hang around the pen for two or three days and nights."

"I'll see him in Halifax first! The idea of a goat acting like this! If he doesn't stop it I'll brain him with the ax!"

They backed off again, and again the goat made a tremendous effort to get out. Mrs. Bowser ran for the house and Mr. Bowser looked around for a club. His back was turned toward the pen, and then the concussion took place. He was lifted and precipitated eleven feet four inches, and Mrs. Bowser turned just in time to see the goat walk around on the prostrate body and then take a leap over the alley fence. She went down to Mr. Bowser, and as soon as he had regained consciousness she said:

"What you ought to have done was to hire some one at $3 per day to give that goat his society."

"Has he gone?" was faintly asked.

"Where the woodbine twineth."

All Mrs. B.'s Fault.

"And it's all your fault, and I'll never forgive you."

"Why, what did I do?"

"Made faces at him or something!"

"But he didn't love you, or he wouldn't have butted you."

"Woman, don't you think to deceive me!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he sat up. "Into the house with you and communicate with your lawyer!"

"I will in a minute. Did you see the man you rented the goat from looking over the alley fence?"

"No, I didn't!"

"Didn't hear him chuckling?"

"No, sir!"

"When you rented that goat, Mr. Bowser, didn't it occur to you that there were two kinds of goat—a billy and a nanny?"

Mr. Bowser turned pale.

"This was a billy!"

Mr. Bowser groaned.

"And the milk to cure your tuberculosis"—

"G'way!"

"A billy, Mr. Bowser—milk—tuberculosis!"

Mr. Bowser fainted away, and Mrs. Bowser went into the house and left him.

The Opening.

An air of assurance distinguished the jaunty young man who had appeared in answer to an advertisement for a clerk, but his manner did not commend him to the leather merchant.

"Is there a good opening here for a young man who keeps his wits about him and does not care to begin at the bottom of the ladder?" asked the applicant before the merchant had an opportunity to speak.

"Yes," he replied after a comprehensive survey of his jaunty visitor, "there is. A thoughtful carpenter, foreseeing the appearance of just such a young man, provided a good opening in the middle of that left hand wall. Kindly make use of it."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ELEPHANT SERVANTS.

An Easy Solution of the Nursemaid Problem In Bengal.

In "Tigerland" the author relates an extraordinary comedy witnessed by a friend who was sitting in the veranda of his tent in Bengal watching his elephants, which were picketed under some trees a short distance off.

He saw the wife of one of the mahouts emerge from her tentlike shelter with an infant in her arms. She took it close up to a huge "tusker," to whom she made a low salaam; then put the sleeping child down before it and salaamed again. Next she spread a blanket on the ground and placed the baby in the center of it, well within reach of the tusker's proboscis. Then salaaming again, more ostentatiously, went off to the bazaar.

Presently the child awoke and soon began to crawl toward the edge of the blanket. But when it had gone a foot or two the elephant, stretching out his trunk, gently pulled it back to its original position. Again and again the baby attempted similar excursions to regions beyond the blanket's edge, but always with the same result. Exploration under elephantine supervision finally proved too dull, and so the child lay quiet for awhile, gazing up at its huge nurse, then dropped off peacefully to sleep again.

Clock Story Variation.

A very young enthusiast at the Central telegraph office, says the Manchester Guardian, really wanted to know about things, and, being unable to gain certain technical information from his colleagues, he decided to unscrew one of the elaborate instruments from the desk and take it home to examine it and find out for himself how it worked. Some weeks later a box of pieces was returned to the engineer in chief with the following note: "I am not quite certain how to put the inclosed instrument together, so have inclosed 3s. for the mechanic's time. It took me four hours to unscrew it."

Where George Eliot Went to School.

The ancient cottage at Griff, Warwickshire, in which nearly a century ago was held the first school attended by George Eliot, is situated two miles from Nuneaton, exactly opposite the entrance gates of Griff House, which for twenty years was the residence of George Eliot's father, Robert Evans, the original Adam Bede, and subsequently tenanted by Isaac Evans, the Tom Tulliver of "The Mill on the Floss."—London Times.

Impostor and Malefactor.

Carlyle used to tell of an old Scotch woman who, speaking to her family, said: "There's twa sons, baith doin weel in Glasgie. Tane's an impostor, and t'ither's a malefactor." It was found that she meant "upholsterer" and "manufacturer."

Where the Cost Comes.

"Does it take much money to send a boy to college?" asked the boob.

"No," replied the cheerful idiot. "It's keeping him there that takes the coin."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The debris left from coral made into articles of jewelry, etc., is crushed, scented and sold as tooth powder at a high price by east Indian perfumers.

Being Awake.

Moral reform and improvement are the effort to throw off sleep. Why is it that men give so poor an account of their day if they have not been slumbering? If they had not been overcome with drowsiness they would have performed something. The millions are awake enough for physical labor, but only one in a hundred million to a poetic or divine life. To be awake is to be alive. I have never yet met a man who was quite awake. How could I have looked him in the face?—Thoreau.

VOTE FOR
Wm. BULLER
THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR FOR 1914.

J. J. HARTLEY
The Workingman's Candidate, for
MAYOR
Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of municipal ownership and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years. I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,
J. J. HARTLEY

Asks your support and influence to ensure his election as MAYOR FOR 1914

To Electors of
CENTRE WARD

Having decided to offer my services as Alderman for No. 2 or Centre Ward, at the request of a large number of ratepayers I pledge myself, if elected, to assist in the administration of the city's affairs to the best of my ability. My platform briefly is Lower Taxation. Careful scrutiny of city's finances. Advancement of city's Industrial interest. Extension of the present Street Paving scheme; and all things calculated to make Peterborough a bigger and better city.

Soliciting your vote and influence.

Yours for a bigger and better city,

GROVER HALPIN CAPTAIN OF JUNIOR O.H.A. SEVEN

At a meeting of the O. H. A. Junior players yesterday morning, Grover Halpin was elected captain. Halpin was the fastest man of last year's juniors, and has had lots of experience which will prove a big asset to him. He is very popular with the boys and will no doubt, make an excellent captain.

With Rose at centre, Halpin at rover, Barrie at left wing and Richardson at right, the junior's forward line should be as fast as any in the O. H. A.

Manager Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox, has had a confab with his new boss, Joseph J. Lannin and now he declares there is nothing in the American league that scares the Sox. No doubt Bill has made Mr. Lannin feel very, very happy.

PUCKERINGS FROM PUCK

Robinson, who played O. H. A. hockey for Galt three years ago, will be on the Tool Room lineup.

Frank Barrie is bound to be in shape. He was out last night doing considerable road work with his mate, Donohue, of the Tool Room.

The Test will no doubt unearth several dark horses in their first game. There is one however who is by no means dark and he is Joe Dwyer, their goal-minder.

Some information as to the speed of De Laval team would be very much welcomed by the fans.

Have you got a season ticket for the Mercantile League games yet? They only cost 50 cents and the minimum number of games is 15. All the teams have them.

Latimer is the best yet as goalkeeper for the Juniors.

Percy Foster and Bruce Regan will have a merry old battle for cover point of the Tool Room defence.

There is considerable trouble in the hockey circles at Oshawa. Some soreheads have raked up a certain baseball match and are trying to get some of the hockey players thrown out.

With Clancy, Morrow, Burritt, Crane and Cook, Peterboro will be represented in the Toronto Bank league.

FLIES OVER ALPS

Swiss Aviator Does the Trip in Five Hours.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 26.—Oscar Bider, a Swiss aviator, made a successful flight across the Alps yesterday, though for several hours he was unable to see his way because of the heavy fog which hung over the mountains. The airman arrived here at 2.15 o'clock yesterday afternoon after a journey from Buc, from which place he started at 9 a.m.

Bider said that after leaving the French aerodrome he was forced to maintain an altitude of 6,500 feet almost constantly in order to avoid the fog. He passed over the Jura, the chain of mountains separating France from Switzerland, without being able to see any landmarks, but recovered his bearings on sighting the Junggran, one of the most famous mountains of the Swiss Alps, about half an hour before he came to Berne.

Fireworks Plant Blows Up.

ROME, Dec. 26.—The explosion of a fireworks factory at Torre Annunziata, in the Province of Naples, resulted in the death of many persons. The buildings collapsed, burying the victims in the wreckage. Fourteen dead and five injured were taken from the ruins and it is believed that many other bodies are covered by debris.

The Greatest Happiness

Comes To Ourselves When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

The value of a gift consists, not in costliness or variety, but in the feelings of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honor, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both giver and receiver realized this. Too often the spirit of gift-giving is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into it. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry and doubt. When you give something to wear, you exhibit good sense, good taste and good judgment.

$300 TROPHY AND $25 GOLD MEDAL FOR THE BEST PLAYER

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—Mr. Leclaire, manager of the Federal Hotel, who has hung up a $300 trophy to be awarded the best all round player in the Canadian League each year, has attached additional features to the conditions. The trophy will be made a permanent one, and the successful player will receive a $25 gold medal. The club which the player is a member will be given possession of the trophy for a year. The design is that of a baseball pitcher in the act of delivering the ball and is of solid silver mounted on a bronz base.

HOLIDAY GAMES MAKE CHANGES

Blackburn Rovers Lead in the First League.

BRITISH FOOTBALL.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—This is a busy week in the big football leagues with many games scheduled for three consecutive days, Christmas, Boxing Day and Saturday. Some big scores were registered yesterday and some results that change for the moment the league tables. Birmingham's 6-0 defeat at Glossop, and Blackburn's 5-0 win over Preston North End were the big figures.

The defeat of Manchester United while Blackburn and Sunderland were winning puts the latter two in the first and second places in the First League, and United drops to third.

The Southern League leaders, Swindon Town, were well beaten at Bristol, but still retain the premiership with Crystal Palace now only four points away.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Last season Joe Tinker finished in the list of .300 batters for the first time in his career of twelve years in the National league.

Second Baseman Del Pratt of the St. Louis Browns, has resigned his place as the representative of his club in the Baseball Players' Fraternity.

Harry Welchonce, who has the distinction of leading the Southern League in batting last season, has been appointed field captain of the Atlanta team.

John (Dots) Miller, recently traded by Pittsburg to St. Louis, says he is willing to play with the Cardinals. Why do you mean, willing?

President Dreyfuss of the Pirates, made "Honus" Wagner the only exception in any trade for "Big Ed" Konetchy, when he and Manager Clarke discussed the proposed deal.

Earl Mack, son of Connie Mack, of the Athletics, will coach the baseball squad at the University of North Carolina before he begins his duties as manager of the Raleigh team.

Art Shafer, of the Giants, has announced his retirement from the game. When baseball dope is scarce Art can always be depended upon to put over the Patti stuff.

Brooklyn is willing to release Catcher Eddie Phelps if he can land the job as manager of the Albany team. Eddie has been in harness sixteen years and believes he is capable of piloting a minor league outfit.

Manager Tom O'Rourke is anxious to match "Porky" Flynn against Gunboat Smith for $7,000 a side.

Harry Stone, the New York lightweight, who is now in Australia, has defeated the four opponents he has met there.

Champion Willie Ritchie denies the report that he is to change managers. He says he is satisfied with Harry Foley.

Jimmy Clabby has signed to meet either Frank Klaus, George Chip, or Jack Dillon, at a show in Milwaukee next month.

Frankie Mandole, who has been touring Europe, was stopped in fourteen rounds at Geneva, the other evening, by Badoud, the Swiss champion.

Johnny Coulon, the bantam champion, is ready to box again and says he is willing to take on "Kid" Williams, if the latter will make 116 pounds ringside.

George Rodel, the Boer heavyweight, will challenge the winner of the Gunboat Smith-Arthur Pelkey fight, which is scheduled to be pulled off New Year's Day in California.

The New York State Assembly may vote each member of the boxing comission a salary of $2,000 a year. Up to the present time the commissioners have received nothing from the State for their services.

COLLEGIANS LOST THEIR FIRST GAME

Morrow Played in First Game Against Cleveland.

Cleveland, Dec. 26.—The Cleveland team continued its winning streak last night by defeating the Ottawa College seven by the score of 6 to 3, in the first of a three-game series. The game fas fast throughout, and noticeable for the fine team work of both sevens. Cleveland got a lead from the start, and was never in danger, though the Ottawa puck-chasers kept the local goal man pretty busy during the last half. Line-up:

C.A.C.—G., Chapman; l.d., Winters; r.d., Elder; r., Poland; c., Trimble; l.w., Verner; r.w., Debernardi.

Ottawa—G., Derocher; l.d., Morrow; r.d., O'Leary; r., Cavanagh; c., Braithwaite; l.w., Davis; r.w., Duford.

A MASTERPIECE IN MARBLE

Wonderful Table Made by an Obscure French Sculptor.

There recently died at Ivry, a Paris suburb, a remarkable old man, a septuagenarian, named Fraissard. He died in poverty, but had he chosen he could have become one of the most famous European sculptors. As it was, he finished life as he began it—more or less penniless. When a boy he was apprenticed to a marble cutter, and he at once discovered his power in this direction. For fifty years he had continued to execute the most beautiful works of art, mostly in mosaics.

M. Fraissard's masterpiece took him nearly twenty-four years to perfect. It is a black marble table. In the middle is a chessboard, on either side of which are playing cards arranged as fans. On the table are dominoes and dice, cigars and cigarettes, and several coins in gold and silver. All these are of course inlaid. The materials in the table, besides the black marble, are agate, onyx, porphyry, malachite and lapus lazuli, the tones of which are black, red, orange, blue and white. Ninety different kinds of marble were also used.—London Standard.

INDIAN ATHLETES.

From the Race Standpoint They Are in a Class by Themselves.

Ask any expert to call the roll of American athletes and he immediately begins to include Indians in his list. The names of Bender and Sockalexis come to mind at once, and besides these there are Chief Meyers—whose real name is Tortes—Cayou, Hudson the incomparable Thorpe and a dozen others.

The noble red man takes up room enough in athletic annals to furnish pride for a nation of many millions of people, yet the total number of Indians in the United States is only a little over 300,000.

That is the most astonishing part of the record. If the city of Washington should produce such a group of athletes as the Indians have done experts and scientists from all over the earth would come to the federal capital to learn the secret of its success. The entire Indian population of this country is less than that of Washington.

Considering the meagerness of its numbers, probably no other race in the world can compare in athletic prowess with American Indians.—Chicago Journal.

Plenty of Fur Animals.

"Do not believe all you read about 'the extinction of fur animals,'" writes a statistician in a Paris paper. "With the exception of a few—seal, chinchilla and American lynx—'fur animals' are no less numerous than they were thirty years ago, when the prepared pelts, now popular for outer garments, were used for lining purposes. The high prices are caused by the increased demand. The fur bearing animals will not be exterminated because the fashions change. While one animal, temporarily popular, is being hunted the other has time to recuperate. Nature helps also in this way: The overhunted animal instinctively abandons its habitat, often seeking refuge where the hunter cannot follow."

Captain Robert Wringe, who seems likely to command Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, Shamrock IV., when she races for the America's cup a year hence, gained first hand knowledge of the American coast conditions when he was skipper of the Mineola for August Belmont in 1900. He also added to his knowledge of the Atlantic coast currents, tides and winds as skipper of the challenge sloop Shamrock II. when he sailed that craft for Sir Thomas Lipton in the international races in 1903. He was in an advisory capacity aboard the Shamrock I.

Gas Famine Possible.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 26. — The Brantford gas situation may prove serious. The company is forced to turn off its supply of Tilbury gas, and has only a limited supply of pure gas to offer. In fact, while Brantford consumes on an average 36,000,000 feet per month, the company can give only about 500,000 feet of pure gas daily. This is because it is tied up by contract with Hamilton manufacturers.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. NEW CHARGES ARE PREFERRED

Two Boys Are Committed For Trial Before Judge Huycke

Maxwell McClelland and Ernest Jamieson were this morning committed for trial.

Already the prisoners have pleaded guilty to the charge of entering the store of R. C. Brand and stealing the jewelry to the value of $100. Also to the charge of entering the store of Nelson Routley and stealing money from the till.

The new charges preferred are as follows:

Charged with theft of goods from the store of J. E. Lillico; also theft or $5 from the same store.

September 24th.—Theft from the store of H. Bradshaw to the extent of $3.50.

September 24th—Theft from the store of G. A. Goheen of $10 from the till.

September 19th—Theft of $13 from the store of J. Longo on Charlotte Street.

The prisoners are also charged with theft from three stores in Hastings to which they have signed a confession. The value of loot will probably total nearly $200.

"How did you manage to connect all these cases with the two prisoners?" the chief was asked.

The Chief answered by presenting fingerprints of the prisoners.

V. J. McElderry conducted the prosecution. G. N. Gordon appeared for the prisoners.

ADMIRAL DEWEY IS 76 TO-DAY

Hero of Manila is Still With the Navy.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Hale and hearty, Admiral George Dewey is celebrating his seventy-sixth birthday at his home here to-day, when, following custom, many old friends paid their respects to the hero of Manila Bay, and congratulated him.

Admiral Dewey is in better health than he has been for several years since he returned to the United States in 1899 from his triumphs in the Philippines. He takes an enthusiastic interest in everything pertaining to the navy, especially as President of the Naval General Board. Under the act of Congress reviving the rank of Admiral for his benefit, he remains on the active list, although to-morrow will mark his fourteenth year beyond the legal age of retirement.

PLAYED ROUGH HOUSE IN CELL

Bill of $18.75 is Made Out Against Bad Injun.

In Police Court this morning an Indian by the name of Richard Cornelius was fined $8.75 for being drunk while Dick also had a bill of $10 to settle for damages to the police cell, which he put on the blink through his erratic actions.

"I guess it was me that did it," replied the Indian, when questioned by the Chief of Police, how the cells became in such a condition.

"I thought we had something that would hold him," remarked the Chief, who has had considerable experience with the wild man before.

The appearance of the iron cot, Richard must have been practicing the tango all by himself.

MASS AND VESPERS AT ST. PETER'S

Rev. Father Kelly, of Norwood, Delivered the Sermon.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien sung Pontifical High Mass and Vespers at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday and was assisted by Rev. Father Galvin, Deacon and Rev. Father Cote, sub-Deacon Rev. Father Phelan was master of ceremonies. In the morning His Lordship spoke a few words to the congregation, wishing them the compliments of the season and in the evening Rev. P. J. Kelly of Norwood delivered an eloquent sermon.

Father Kelly urged the parents to bring their children to the crib and enlighten them with the various facts concerning the birth of Christ. He also urged the parents, the mothers especially to pray earnestly and fervently that they might have a son who would imitate the Son of God by being elevated to the priesthood.

The singing of the choir reflects great credit upon Mr. A. New, choir leader, and Miss. M. Doherty, organist. The mass sung was Turners' Mass of St. Cecilia. At the offertory Miss T. O'Donnell assisted by Messrs J. Minicola and J. Weyer, rendered Adeste Fidelis. Other solists were Miss G. Clancy, Miss Eilleen McCabe, Messrs. J. Minicola, E. Hanhahan, J. Brierly and A. New.

The altar and crib were beautifully decorated by the Sisters of St. Mary's Convent.

A LONG RUN FOR THE FIRE HORSES

The fact that Peterboro is greatly in need of a motor driven apparatus, was demonstrated on Christmas Eve when the fire brigade was forced to stop twice in a long run to 709 Aylmer St., to attend a fire. The trip was too much for the horses with the wheels.

Apparently some coal oil behind the stove was the cause of the fire which was confined to the kitchen. The house is occupied by Mr. F. Morris.

BOX IS FOUND BUT WILL OF CARDINAL STILL MISSING

Sensation is Promised--Interference is Now Suspected

Rome, Dec. 26.—Sensational developments are expected to result from the mysterious disappearance of the late Cardinal Rampolla's will. Efforts to hush the scandal have failed. Full particulars are now available. The only will found was one dated 1899. Under it the late Cardinal's sister was entitled to the entire estate valued at about £40,000 sterling.

She accordingly made necessary arrangements to enter into possession when Princess Altieri, wife of the late Cardinal's nephew, the Duke of Campobello, threatened legal proceedings unless a thorough search was made for the missing box in which it was understood the late Cardinal Rampolla's last will was deposited. The Princess, who was separated from her husband, and guardian of their two sons, declared that Rampolla assured her that his will would amply provide for the two boys.

Suspected Later Will.

She was convinced of the existence of the later will. The Treasurer of St. Peter's Basilica instructed a notary to affix seals to the late Cardinal's apartments where search was made. The missing box yesterday was finally found, but it contained no testamentary document.

It is stated that Rampolla was confident friends had disinherited his nephew, and there are suspicions that it has been interfered with by some person. The police are secretly investigating the case and collecting evidence before further action is taken. Meanwhile the late Cardinal's will is not granted probate.

NEW LAW FOR ELECTION DAY

Candidates Cannot Supply Vehicles for Carrying Voters.

It is to be hoped that the walking will be good on January 6th, for voters will find a scarcity of automobiles and carriages this year to take them to the polls. The following amendment has been made to the Municipal Act since last New Year's Day concerning bribery and corruption.

It reads:

"A candidate who himself or by any other person on his behalf and every other person who:

"(a) Hires or promises to pay or pays for a conveyance to carry a voter to or near or from or on the way to or from a polling place; or

"(b) Pays the travelling or other expenses of a voter in going to or returning from a polling place; and and every person who for a valuable consideration provides or furnishes a conveyance knowing that it is to be used to carry a voter other than the hirer to, or near, or from, or on the way to or from a polling place shall be guilty of a corrupt practice, and shall incur a penalty of $100, and, if a voter, shall be disqualified from voting at the election; but this sub-section shall not apply to the carrying of voters to the poll in a conveyance used by the candidate personally on polling day.

"(2) Every person who provides or furnishes transportation free of charge or at a diminished rate to a voter to, or near, or from, or on the way to or from a polling place, and whether passes or tickets or the like are or are not supplied, shall be guilty of a corrupt practice and shall incur a penalty of $100 and, if a voter, shall be disqualified from voting at the election.

"(3) 'Conveyance,' for the purposes of this section shall include a horse, team, carriage, cab, vehicle, boat, or vessel."

Employers Are Generous.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—At least $1,000,000 has been distributed by the banks and big industrial corporations having their headquarters in this city, as Christmas gifts to employes. While many firms and banks adhere to the time-honored custom of presenting turkeys and gold pieces of varying denominations there is a noticeable increase in the number of corporations substituting profit-sharing plans organized on a systematic basis of remuneration for length of service. The banks pretty generally are sticking to the gold dollar distribution of yore, the sums given ranging from $10 to $40 for each employe.

Caught In Machinery.

NEW HAMBURG, Dec. 26.—Chas. Merner, superintendent of the New Hamburg Felt Boot Co., died last evening as the result of an accident that happened on Saturday last. He was engaged in the works examining a loom that was close to another one in full operation, when his sweater caught in the drum and he was instantly carried into the machinery, sustaining terrible injuries. Mr. Merner was about 45 years of age and unmarried.

FORMER PREMIER IS 90 YEARS OLD

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 27.—Sir MacKenzie Bowell, former Dominion premier and for many years a leader in Canadian public life, attained the age of four-score and ten today, having been born Dec. 27, 1823. Sir Mackenzie became a member of parliament at the time of Confederation and in 1878 joined the cabinet of Sir John Macdonald. During his long career he held numerous cabinet positions and for a period of about one year he was prime minister.

DEATH OF CAPT. W.H. COTTINGHAM

Native of Omemee Passes Away in Red Deer.

The Lindsay Warder says:—The friends in Lindsay and Omemee of Captain W. H. Cottingham will hear with regret of his demise in Red Deer, Alta., on Sunday, Dec. 21. He was a son of the late Wm. Cottingham, one of the pioneer settlers of the above village, and like his father, became a prominent figure also. He was a leading spirit wherever he went and his large heartedness coupled with his many good and manly qualities, gave him a high standing in the community.

The deceased represented the village of Omemee in the Victoria County Council during the years 1876, 77 and 78. About the year 1880 the captain moved to the western province, where he since remained, having accepted a position with the Government as Dominion land agent. His illness extended over several months, passing away at the date above stated, surrounded by his wife and family, at the age of 71 years.

LAKEFIELD AND HYDRO

Council Receives Letter from the Commission

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 27. — The Council has received the following reply to a recent communication to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission with reference to supplying power to Lakefield, which bears out the verbal report given by Reeve Fitzgerald, at the last meeting of the Council:

Gentlemen—Referring to your letter of Dec. 10th, regarding the power situation in Lakefield, we wish to advise you that we are at present actively engaged in trying to find the best solution of the problem of supplying power to Peterboro. In considering this we are taking into account the fact that Lakefield will be a large consumer of power as well as Peterboro, and whatever arrangements will be made will be for sufficient capacity so that the requirements of Lakefield will be taken care of. As soon as we are far enough advanced in the settlement of this problem we will be glad to forward a proposition to your Municipality.

The contract with Peterboro, as you may well imagine, is but the foundation stone of a system for your district and you may be sure that the interests of Lakefield will be well cared for.

Yours very truly,
Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

JUDGE IS 75

Fredericton, N. B., Dec. 27.—Sir Frederick E .Barker, chief justice of New Brunswick, received congratulations today on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary. Sir Frederick was born in Sheffield, N. B., in 1838. He became a judge of the Supreme Court of the Province in 1893, and has been chief justice since 1908.

REV. R. POGUE IS ILL AGAIN

Overwork Since Operation is Believed to be the Cause.

The members of St. Paul's Church and citizens in general, will regret to learn that Rev. R. Pogue is ill at his home. He will be unable to take the pulpit of St. Paul's on Sunday and Rev. Robert Laird of Toronto will preach morning and evening.

Mr. Pogue, evidently has been doing too much work since his recovery from an attack of appendicitis, this past summer, and a rest will be necessary.

MARTIN HARVEY IS ON HIS WAY HERE

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Martin Harvey, the well known actor, sailed on the Empress of Ireland today to begin a sixteen weeks' tour of Canada and the United States. After filling a week's engagement in Montreal, he will make a transcontinental tour of Canada as far as Vancouver. In addition to "The Only Way," in which he has already appeared before American audiences, he will be seen in "The Breed of Treshab," which is a royalist costume play, and "A Cigarette Maker's Romance," which is founded on Marion Crawford's well known novel.

COMMISSIONER REES IS IMPROVING

Toronto, Dec. 27.—The recovery of Commissioner David M. Rees, who has been ill at his home, for some time, is almost assured now. "His condition has been improving rapidly," said the nurse in attendance, "and he has been out for a few short drives this week."

LEADING THE LIFE THAT WINS

Judge Stafford Addresses the Boys of the Y.M.C.A.

The members of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. were afforded a very interesting and instructive vocational talk last evening by Judge Reid, of Stafford, U.S., who is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hainsworth, of Maitland avenue.

Judge Reid gave an interesting account of the life of a judge of the Superior Court. He also pointed out that despite the handicap of being poor, no boy should be discouraged and that the majority of the big men were poor boys and had worked their way up.

The speaker strongly urged the boys to start a straight life. He gave a number of instances where a bad start had wrecked lives.

To-morrow afternoon Judge Reid will address the Life Problem Club at 4.15.

From Darkness to Light.

"From Darkness to Light," will be the subject of Mr. Mulligan's address at Gospel Hall to-morrow evening. Members of Gospel Hall will hold a baptismal service in Bethany Tabernacle at 4 p.m., when a number of believers will be baptised.

EVANGELIST W. A. PUGSLEY

ORANGEMEN AT OMEMEE

Coronation Hall Packed to Hear Annual concert

WAS FINE TREAT

Special Correspondence

OMEMEE, Dec. 27.—The committee of L. O. L. 113 appear to be able to cater to the public taste in the matter of entertainment; as soon as the doors were opened on Christmas evening for their annual concert,—though the hour was but 6:30 a rush of people formed into Coronation Hall and at 7 o'clock the seating space of the theatre was exhausted. Chairs and standing room were then utilized to cover every available foot of floor space. The stage was beautifuly decorated with the banner of L. O. L. No. 113 evergreens, flags, Christmas bells and portraits of our King and Queen. Bro. D H. Currie, pastor of the Presbyterian church, presided over the great gathering; his speech on the merits of orangeism was the prelude of a lengthy "bill-of-fare" which kept the assemblage convulsed with laughter. The first number was a duet, "When we rere boys at school", by James Fax and Robt. Wilson, the encore following was entitled "Nobody."

2. Comic song—"The band," by Bert Harvey, encore—"Darling I am growing old."

3. Reading—"The Bride at the butcher shop", by Miss L. M. Key, encore—"A darkey lullaby."

Comic song.—"When the boys were on parade." by James Fax. Encore—"Hooligan's fancy dress ball."

5. Vocal duet by Miss Jessie Fax and Mr. Robt. Wilson. Encore—"The day that I got wed."

6. Comic song—"When father was mother for a day" by Bert Harvey. Encore—"The trials of oug boarding house."

7. Soprano solo—"Sympathy" by Miss Jessie Fax.

8. Comic song—"She's the lass for me." by Robt. Wilson. Encore "She sells sea-shells on the seashore.

9. Reading—"Woman's rights," by Miss L. M. Key. Encore—"Chums."

10. A musical sketch entitled "An old-fashioned school," by Miss Jessie Fax, Mr. Jas. Fax, and Mr. Robt. Wilson; this called forth a double encore: "The old oaken bucket" and "A smarty cat."

11. Comis song—"Dad papering the parlor," by Bert Harvey. Encore "The boy who stuttered and the girl who lisped."

12. Vocal duet—Miss Jessie Fax, Mr. Jas Fax. Encore—A vocal duet.

16. Reading—"Canadian Born," by Miss L. M. Key. Encore, "He met her in the meadow, as the sun was sinking low."

17. Vocal duet—Scotch character by Jas. Fax and Robt. Wilson. Encore "The ducks,", encore "Vocal duet."

18. Comic song — "Our hands have met, but not our hearts," by Bert Harvey. Encore—Conversational dancing song.

19. Trio—"Past twelve o'clock," by Miss Jessie Fax, Mr. Jas. Fax, Mr. Robt. Wilson.

20. God save the King.

With the original program reinforced by 20 encores the artists were kept busy for three full hours. Miss Grace Bonnick was the accompanist. She had a strenuous evening but performed faultlessly. Deputations were present from Reaboro, Mt. Pleasant, Orange Corners, Dunsford and other near-by places. The order was the very best, the management perfect, and the artists exceptionally fine. L. O. L. 113 are to be congratulated upon the signal success of their Christmas concert of 1913. The receipts amounted to about $249.

ONE ITEM IN GROWTH OF THE CITY

Number of Residentials Increased This Year by 183

COST $267.682

April Was Banner Month With Thirty-five Permits to Build

The building permits issued at the City Clerk's office during the present year reveals the fact that permits for 183 residences have been taken out, amounting to $267,682, making the year a most favorable one in the building line.

The permits issued during the month of November 1912, amounted to $18,900, while the month of December, 1912, contributed $5,950. The number of permits issued for these months was six and five respectively.

This year November had sixteen permits amounting to $24,000. December was rather low when only three permits as yet have been issued amounting to $4,250.

The permits issued per month for the year are:

	permits	amt.
Jan.	4	........$ 8,000
Feb.	5	 7,500
March	1	 600
April	35	 62,350
May	26	 32,250
June	18	 28,575
July	32	 45,610
August	13	 9,300
Sept.	11	 19,000
Oct.	19	 26,050
Nov.	16	 25,000
Dec.	3	 4,250
Total	183	$267,682

According to the permits the southern part of the city is apparently the mecca for buildings as a very large percentage of permits issued are for the south, but the other sections of the city are growing steadily.

PRESIDENT OF WESTERN MINERS BADLY USED

Was Beaten and Dragged Through Streets by Mob.

Canadian Press Despatch.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Dec. 27.—Charles Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners passed through here in a sleeping car on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad at two this morning. He was lying in his berth with a blood-stained bandage on his head. Moyer told an interviewer he was shot, terribly beaten, dragged more than a mile through streets, threatened with hanging and finally placed on board the train at eight fifty last night and guarded by two thugs until the train reached Channing, Mich.

"A Committee of fifteen headed by Pederman, Attorney for Calumet and Hecta, of the Mining Company, had been in conference with me," Moyer told the interviewer, "and had scarcely left the room when the mob appeared, which did this work. I believe the strike is won in the Calumet district." He added "I expect to return in a few days under the State and National Government protection."

PRESENTATION TO TEACHER

Miss Agnes Holland Was Honored by Her Pupils.

AN UMBRELLA.

On the afternoon of Monday, Dec. 22nd, the parents and friends of the pupils gathered at S.S. No. 1, Douro, where a most enjoyable time was spent. An interesting program was rendered by the pupils and later Santa Claus paid the school a visit and distributed gifts to all from a well laden Christmas tree.

At the conclusion of the program the pupils presented their teacher Miss Agnes Holland, with a handsome umbrella and the following address. The address was read by Mamie Cavanagh, while Annie Cavanagh made the presentation.

Dear Teacher,—We the pupils of this school could not allow this happy festal time to pass without in some way showing that we have appreciated your most trying efforts on the behalf of our welfare. And now in remembrance of us all, we ask you to accept this umbrella, not for its intrinsic value, but as a momento of the year we spent together.

Now each and every one joins in wishing you a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year.

Signed on behalf of the school:—
Mamie Cavanagh,
Annie Cavanagh,
Chas. Whibbs,
Jos. Sheehan.

Miss Holland replied thanking the children for their gift and good wishes, and the pleasant afternoon ended with the singing of the National Anthem.

A BIG TIME AT ST. JAMES

Christmas Tree and Entertainment for Parents and Children.

Superintendent and Teachers Also Received Gifts.

The Christmas Tree and entertainment at St. James' church last evening was a big success. Members of the congregation and Sunday school filled the body of the church and also the galleries, and all enjoyed the program.

The young people were not the only ones to be remembered, as Mr. A. Prest, superintendent of the Sunday school, received a study chair; Miss Mary Collins, superintendent of the primary department, was presented with a pearl sunburst and Miss C. S. Greene, teacher of the Cheerful Workers' Class, received a silk parasol.

It was reported that the Sunday school attendance on the previous Sunday was 359, this being a big gain over the same Sunday of last year, when the attendance was 246.

Rev. J. N. Clarry, the pastor, was chairman.

HOSPITALS ARE WITHOUT WATER

Nurses and Doctors Work in the Cold at Montreal.

Canadian Press Despatch.

MONTREAL, Dec 27.—With the temperature nearly at zero the Western and Royal Victoria Hospitals were compelled this morning to put out their fires, owing to lack of water in the heating plant.

Nurses and doctors go around wards in great cold. Many large buildings also put out fires, fearing an explosion and many offices are closed up.

Water carried around in buckets is in many cases delivered in a frozen state. The city officials are repeating warnings against fire and adding others against pestilence, due to lack of water for flushing closets.

CAROL SERVICE

There will be a children's carol service at St. Luke's church to-morrow evening.

COL. DENISON IN FAVOR OF POLICE WOMAN

Toronto's Police Magistrate Finds Them of Great Service

The women of Peterboro, through the representative body—the Women's Council—hold that health and morality have first claim upon public funds. They believe that, since a large proportion of women and girls are now a part of the working world, they are legitimately entitled to the kind of police protection which women feel will be most effective. Our whole conception of the police department and its administration has been dignified and a new insight and appreciation given to all who heard Mrs. Alice Stebbens Wells' address. It was her remark that police work would in the near future rank equally with law, medicine and engineering. Arresting people is not the sum and substance of a police officer's duty, in a way an officer is the guardian of the community. We do not rank the police high enough nor give our Chief the support he deserves. He cannot adequately discharge his responsibilities with a force of only nine men. The appointment of a policewoman would ensure the most useful service along preventive and protective lines where women are concerned, they hesitate in many cases to go to a policeman for advice or help.

"None can deal so well with women. They can always get the desired information from women that a man cannot in many cases."—Staff Inspector Robt. Gregory, Toronto.

"We have two policewomen and two police matrons and we find them of great service."—Colonel Denison, magistrate of Toronto.

"Our opinion is that they will be of very great service in detecting and preventing breaches of the law that would otherwise escape the natice of the men on the force . . . and in saving young people from entering upon a career of crime.—Chairman Police Commissioners, Ottawa.

"I am not opposed to the appointment of a policewoman and will welcome her presence on the force should the police commissioners appoint one.—Chief Thompson, Peterboro.

MY 64th BIRTHDAY

Brig. Gen. William H. Dixby, who recently retired from the post of chief of engineers of the United States Army, was born in Charlestown, Mass., Dec. 27, 1849. He is a West Point graduate and in his long career in the army he had to do with most of the great engineering projects which fell to the charge of the army engineers, notably various projects for the improvement of the Mississippi river. Gen. Bixby is particularly noted as an authority on the construction of bridges, having demonstrated the practicability of a 4,000-foot span across the Hudson river in the face of strenuous opposition from engineering circles.

THE DEATH OF MAX E. WEIR

Former Resident of This City Passes Away in Toronto.

The death occurred in Toronto last evening of Maxwell F. Weir, son of the late Robert Weir, aged 38 years. The deceased formerly lived in this city for a number of years but moved to Toronto some six or seven years ago. He married Miss Boyler, daughter of Mr. George Boyler, near Downer's Corners who survives him. He also has four brothers living, namely, R. J. Weir of Peterboro, Messrs. Fred W., Alfred C., and Sydney B. Weir of Toronto. He was a prominent member of the Orange Order and of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland. The funeral will take place from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Boyler, on Monday afternoon, Dec. 29th, at 3 o'clock, and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

CHRISTMAS TREE AT ST. JOHN'S

The annual Christmas tree of St. John's Sunday School was fittingly and appropriately observed last evening by a large number of the pupils and congregation.

The program of the various and beautiful marches and Christmas carols presented by the smaller children was exceptionaly good and the happy throng enjoyed themselves to the utmost.

Near the close of the evening Canon Davidson addressed the gathering on the joys of Christmas. Mr. C. K. Jamison, superintendent of the Sunday School, presided.

WALTER GUY ASKS FOR $2000

A writ for $2,000 has been issued by G. N. Gordon, solicitor for Walter Guy, plaintiff, who claims $2,000 damages from Wm. Tucker, for the alleged alienations of the affections of his wife, May Guy, for criminal conversation with her, and for inducing and encouraging the said May Guy to leave her husband and live apart from him with defendant.

It is alleged that while her husband, Walter Guy, was serving a term in jail for vagrancy, the defendant commenced boarding at the plaintiff's house. Guy having completed his term was refused admittance to his home.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DEC. 27, 1913.

BEEF OR POTTED CHICKEN!

WE ONLY TOUCHED the "hide" of the subject the other day when we dealt in this column with the wanton slaughter of female calves on our farms. The reason which we gavo against this slaughter was scarcity of leather. But it will be obvious that the hide of a cow is not the most important part of its anatomy from the market's point of view. The scarcity of leather means the scarcity of beef, and vice versa. It is what is wrapped up in the hide that is the chief thing. Beef is becoming more scarce every year and if a law is carried into effect forbidding the slaughter of female calves it will do a great deal towards solving the problem of the shortage in home-fed beef, and incidentally reduce the cost of living.

One of the chief difficulties in raising calves is the milk-feeding which they need, and then the wintering of the animals is a tough problem, where hay or straw is scarce. In some districts the farmers have ceased to send their milk to the factory, sending only the cream to the city; this relieves them somewhat as the calves can then have the skimmed milk.

But the farmers are not solely responsible for this wholesale destruction of young cattle. Many of them raise their calves till they are old enough and then sell them to buyers who turn them into veal. It has been asserted that most "potted chicken" never had feathers upon it, but that it is an ingenious transubstantiation of young cow. If people insist upon "potted chicken," then they must have it, but the manufacturers must find some other animal as a basis for their deception, for we must have more home bred beef.

CONSUMPTIVE SANITARIA.

A CORRESPONDENT writing to The Globe says:—

"The medical teaching of the day, aided by the advertisements of consumptive sanitaria, is responsible for the unnecessary fuss and ebullition over the infectiousness of tuberculosis. The exaggerated dread and uneasiness in the public mind by coming in contact with consumptives are quite unjustifiable. If it were as dangerous as commonly believed, hardly any would escape."

All this sentimental gush in the form of "Tuberculosis Sunday" and panic-like appeals to the public on the problem of dealing with consumption has done much to brand the victim of this disease as a sort of leper, who ought to be banished from human society, or should, when he ventures abroad, call out: "Unclean! Unclean!"

If one believed all was said and written about the terror of the tubercular germ one would not eat a piece of meat until it was carefully examined under a microscope, or steeped in prussic acid. If we only realized the awful possibilities we encountered in drinking milk we would have hermetically sealed cream-jugs on our tables. There may be, and there is, truth in these warnings, but it is a question whether one would not sooner die of rapid consumption than live in a state of constant worry and dread trying to dodge these deadly ubiquitous bacilli!

VERSE AND WORSE.

"AS AN EXAMPLE of English prose at its best we have seldom read anything finer than the new Laureate's Christmas poem." Says the Montreal Herald.

The editor, we presume, was speaking ironically.

The poem in question is certainly more in the nature of a prose-poem and is none the less acceptable for that. The true test of a lyrical poem is not merely in the lilt of the lines or the music of the rhymes. There is a great amount of rythmical, not to say dancing, we had almost said "Tango" verse, knocking about these days. Some of it is fairly good stuff. For as Dr. Johnson said, a man cannot write five thousand lines of verse without hitting off a good one occasionally. Of this kind of poetry Mr. Alfred Noyes is perhaps the chief exponent to-day. Mr. Noyes has just published another volume of verse on the subject of war and the Balkan war in particular. It is concerned chiefly with the political situation and deals out good and trenchant advice to Europe and the nations generally. Mr. Noyes publishes an enormous amount of verse and if he were put to the test could probably fill the editorial page of any ordinary daily paper with real ringing, rousing stanzas on any subject under the sun. This is not to say that Mr. Noyes is not a poet. A few things of his are very fine and considering the quantity of his output, the quality is well sustained.

The Poet Laureate's work is of a different kind. His muse is not so voluminous, it is more of a gently flowing streamlet in a qpiet valley far from the madding crowd, while Mr. Noyes' muse is as a cataract, full of sound and foam—or froth.

Among the latest news of the literary world is the report that Thomas Hardy, the great novelist, is to be the next winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature. On page nine we reproduce some verses by this aged novelist who has of late years devoted himself entirely to this form of expression. The Noble Prize, if it goes to Mr. Hardy, will be in recognition of his contributions to fiction. It could hardly be the reward of his poetry, for with all his breadth and depth as a thinker, he fails in expression as a true poet. He is too heavy to ever rise above the earth. In the poem "To Meet or Otherwise," which we print, the verse-form is too light a frame-work upon which to build so heavy a theme. In the hands of a poet it may not have been so. Lyric poetry needs the light touch, and Mr. Hardy seems too overburdened with his thought to treat his subject lightly enough for lyrical poetry. "Nor God nor daemon can undo the done;
Unsight the seen."

That is rather Danteaque in expression and such a line is impossible save in blank verse. Mr. Hardy's rhymes are more than a little strained; "can" and "cimmerian" are difficult to couple together without halting, and no true lyric should halt. We do not complain so much about Mr. Hardy's obscurity, he is obscure, but if his verse was more musical we could repeat the lines o'er and o'er till we got the sense of them, but very few people would struggle through a Hardy lyric more than once, except as a duty due to a great novelist and thinker. So far as "The Meet or Otherwise," is concerned we prefer Christina Rossetti's

"If haply we may remember,
If haply we may forget.'

EDITORIAL NOTES.

CARDINAL RAMPOLLA'S WILL has been stolen. These church dignitaries seem to have a great deal of trouble with their wills; some of them scarcely have a will of their own.

THOSE WHO HAVE NOT yet received their Old Country Christmas mail may yet hope that they have not been forgotten by the folks at home. 7,092 sacks of mail were ou board the Majestic, which arrived in New York on Christmas Day. So that there may be many Yule-tide greetings coming to Canadians "via New York," and they will be none the less acceptable though they are a little late.

A MAN HAS BEEN released from Montreal jail after serving five years of fifteen years' sentence for a crime of which he is now proved to be innocent. There is no further account given than that he was presented with a new suit of clothes and set at liberty. He will no doubt feel glad to be free, and the new suit will be somewhat in the nature of compensation for the dull monotony and misery of five years' unjust punishment.

YET ANOTHER COMET has swum into the ken of the vigilant astronomer. This is Delevan's comet, "the latest stranger of the sky." It is said to be the sixth comet discovered this year. It is surrounded by nebulosity and has a faint tail following. A tail, as in the case of the cat tribe, seems to be a necessary appendage to a comet. But of course there are Manx cats and we suppose there are Manx comets also.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Christmas Tragedies.

London Advertiser.

All morning papers of Dec. 25th, will contain the headline, "Christmas Tragedy; Santa Claus' Whiskers Caught Fire."

The Bedbug.

Vancouver Province.

Bugologists state that the bedbug can live without food for 229 days. The statement may be correct as far as the days are concerned, but scores of reputable citizens can testify that it is a voracious and continuous feeder at nights.

Back to School.

The Standard.

Will Mr. Fielding re-enter political life? In the interests of his party it would be probably wiser not for him to do so. He is too much wedded to the policies which brought him and his party to grief. A position in an editorial chair may teach him what the real opinions of the country are, and by teaching his party these he would do it good.

Carving Civilians.

Mail and Empire.

A German army officer who cut a lame civilian over the head with his sabre, inflicting a wound three inches long, has been tried by court-martial and sentenced to 43 days' imprisonment. Since the sentence carries with it the loss of a commission, and since, until very lately, it was deemed one of the privileges of German officers to carve up impudent civilians, the sentence must properly be considered a severe one.

Whistling Worshippers.

Literary Monthly.

Hymn whistling is the latest inovation at the special men's services at a certain Methodist Episcopal Church in Philadelphia! "The effect," we are told, "was not impressive when the first hymn was whistled; but when 'Onward, Christian Soldiers!' was started a vigorous and pleasing rendering of this martial hymn was given. The whistling hymn was adopted because it makes a more popular appeal than singing; for all cannot sing, but all can whistle. That this new feature has proved popular was evidenced by the large number attending the services, and it is probable that it may be continued at the men's meetings."

In Prison.

A Golden Eagle.

I saw him, nobly poised, imprisoned there,
In a poor place, housed in a narrow cage;
That royal spirit, lord of the upper air,
With great wings folded, mute in sullen rage,
And all the lustre of the golden noons
And all the splendor of the scattered stars,
And the fair glory of unclouded moons,
Met in that lightning glance, behind the bars.
Those untamed eyes that answered to the sun,
Now glittering in the dimness, turned on me;
I shall remember till my race is run
The still, proud anguish of that voiceless plea.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE POWER AND LIGHT SITUATION

In the interests of general discussion of matters now before the people, we print the following letter:

To the Editor, The Review.

Dear Sir,—Permit me, Mr. Editor to express my appreciation for the frank and courteous reply of His Worship, Mayor Bradburn, to my open letter of Dec. 22nd.

The tangle or muddle of the whole Hydro-Electric scheme in which we find ourselves is only emphasized by the Mayor's explanations. He is evidently a firm believer that Hon. Adam Beck is a great magician who, by means of the Ontario Legislature, can extricate the ratepayers from all snarls and difficulties in which the council have or may put us. I am myself, a great admirer of Hon. Adam Beck, and a firm believer in his policy of municipal ownership, but Adam Beck is too busy a man to devote all his time in looking after the affairs of Peterborough. Over two years ago he came to our city and explained to us clearly all the necessary steps to take to acquire a municipal hydro Electric plant, but he flattered our council by presuming they were all business men who would take ordinary precautions in carrying through the plans he outlined.

The Mayor says that, at the time the act of 1913 was passed the Peterborough Light and Power Company owned only a distributing plant worth about $94,000. By acquiring this property then the Company's 30 years' franchise would have been cancelled. Who drew up the bill that became the Act of 1913? Did not our own City Solicitor under the careful supervision of our Mayor and council? Why then did not the Act expressly state that it was this property, then owned by the Company, that could be expropriated by a by-law, and thereupon the 30 years' franchise would be cancelled? It was this distributing plant only that the ratepayers had authorized the Mayor and council to expropriate but by a simply inexcusable blunder the Mayor and council asked for more power than was at all necessary and thereby they have themselves defeated the expressed mandate of the citizens.

The by-law is passed and the Company has been notified that all of their property in the city has been expropriated. Therefore the citizens of Peterborough at the present time are undoubtedly committed to a liability of approximately $600,000. The Mayor may think that this blunder has placed the city in a position of being able to expropriate so valuable an asset as the Auburn Dam and Power Plant. But it is more likely to turn out, Mr. Editor, that the owners (The Power Electric Co.) of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., have found a good opportunity to force the city to purchase a property from them that they do not want themselves. The Auburn dam, raceway and power house cost the original company for construction more than they ever estimated and if Peterborough takes it over we will have to pay a good figure above the construction costs. The Mayor admits that the Company is a strong one and its officers are shrewd business men, so it is only sticking our heads in the sands if we allow ourselves to believe for a moment that the Company have placed themselves in any such position as the Mayor is trying to persuade himself and the ratepayers.

Who are the members of the present Power Committee of the council, Mr. Editor? Are they not equally to blame with the Mayor for the blunder committed and the resulting present muddle? Each member of that committee owes an explanation to the ratepayers, and especially those members who are asking us to endorse them for office at the coming election.

Yours very truly,
W. H. COLLIER.

Peterborough, Dec. 27th, 1913.

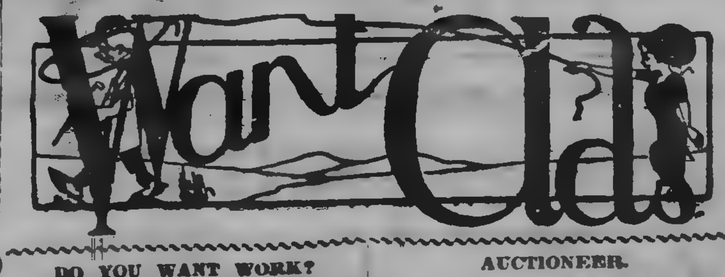
THE UNION BANK OF CANADA

Gains in net profits, in deposits, in reserve account, current loans and total assets characterise the 49th Annual Report of the Union Bank of Canada, whose annual meeting was held in Winnipeg on Dec. 17th in brief, the report is the best in the history of the Bank and shows that this well-known institution has been keeping abreast of the development which has taken place in the country. The net profits for the year amounted to $750,000 or $46,000 more than for 1912. The note circulation increased from $4,700,000 to $6,200,000, while total deposits made a gain of nearly $9,000,000, and now stand at $64,595,000. The bullion, Dominion notes and other quickly available assets also show large gains over the figures for the previous year, and amount to over 24 per cent. of the liabilities, while current loans and discounts have gained nearly $3,500,000, and now stand at $48,439,000. Total assets have gained from $69,400,000 to $80,770,000. The report bears evidence that careful and conservative management characterised the bank during the year and the showing made will prove gratifying alike to shareholders and management.

Schmidt Shamming, He Says.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—That Hans Schmidt, now on trial for the murder of Anna Aumuller, has been shamming insanity, was the burden of testimony given yesterday by four alienists appearing for the state.

Dr. Carlos F. Macdonald, the first expert to be called by the prosecution, gave it as his opinion that Schmidt "is a man of superior intelligence," and that he has shammed insanity much more cleverly than an ignorant person could have done."



DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service of all such.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By HAROLD MacGRATH

[Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.]

"No. I am here for the very purpose of saving you all from heartaches and misfortune and disillusion. And had I set to work earlier I should have accomplished all this without a single one of you knowing it. Now the matter will have to go on to its end."

"Can you tell me anything?"

"Not now. I trust you. Will you trust me?"

Fitzgerald hesitated for a space. "Yes."

"For that, thanks," and M. Ferraud put out a hand. "It is clean, Mr. Fitzgerald, for all that the skin is broken."

"Of that I have no doubt."

"Before we reach Corsica you will know."

And so temporarily that ended the matter. But as Fitzgerald went over to the chair just vacated by the secretary, he found that there was a double zest to life now. This would be far more exciting than dodging ice floes and freezing one's toes.

Laura told him the news. Their guests would arrive that evening in time for dinner.

It was Breitmann's habit to come down first. He would thrum a little on the piano or take down some old volume. Tonight it was Heine. He had not met any of the guests yet, which he considered a piece of good fortune. But God only knew what would happen when she saw him. He dreaded the moment, dreaded it with anguish. She was a woman, schooled in acting, but a time comes when the best acting is not sufficient. If only in some way he might have warned her; but no way had opened. She would find him ready, however, ready with his eyes, his lips, his nerves. What would the others think or say if she lost her presence of mind? His teeth snapped. He read on. The lamp threw the light on the scarred side of his face.

He heard some one enter, and his gaze stole over the top of his book. This person was a woman, and her eyes traveled from object to object with a curiosity tinged with that incertitude which attacks us all when we enter an unfamiliar room. She was dressed in black, showing the white arms and neck. Her hair was like ripe wheat after a rainstorm; oh, but he knew well the color of her eyes, blue as the Adriatic. She was a woman of perhaps thirty, matured, graceful, handsome. The sight of her excited a thrill in his veins, deny it how he would.

She scanned the long rows of books, the strange weapons, the heroic and sinister flags, the cases of butterflies. With each inspection she stepped nearer and nearer, till by reaching out his hand he might have touched her. Quietly he rose. It was a critical moment.

She was startled. She had thought she was alone.

"Pardon me," she said, in a low, musical voice; "I did not know that any one was here." And then she saw his face. Her own blanched and her hands went to her heart. "Karl?"

CHAPTER XII.

THE DRAMA BEGINS.

SHE swayed a little, but recovered as the pain of the shock was succeeded by numbness. That out of the dark of this room into the light of that lamp in this house so far removed from cities that it seemed not a part of the world there should step this man! Why had there been no hint of his presence? Why had not the clairvoyance of despair warped her? One of her hands rose and pressed over her eyes as if to sponge out this phantom. It was useless; it was no dream; he was still there, this man she had neither seen nor heard of for five years because her will was stronger than her desire, this man who had broken her heart as children break toys! And deep below all this present terror was the abiding truth that she still loved him and always would love him. The shame of this knowledge did more than all else to rouse and to nerve her.

"Karl?" It was like an echo.

"Yes." There was war in his voice and attitude and not without reason. He had wronged this woman, not with direction intention, it was true, but nevertheless he had wronged her, and her presence here could mean nothing less than that fate had selected this spot for the reckoning. She could topple down his carefully reared schemes with the same ease with which he had blown over hers. And to him these schemes were life to his breath and salt to his blood, everything. What was one woman? cynically. "Yes, it is I," in the tongue native to them both.

"And what do you here?"

"I am Admiral Killigrew's private secretary." He wet his lips. He was not so strong before this woman as he had expected to be. The glamor of the old days was faintly rekindled at the sight of her. And she was beautiful.

"Then, this is the house?" in a whisper.

"It is."

"You terrify me!"

"Hildegarde, this is your scheme," shrugging. "Tell them all you know; break me, ruin me. Here is a fair opportunity for revenge."

"God forbid!" she cried with a shiver. "Were you guilty of all crimes, I could only remember that once I loved you."

"You shame me," he replied frankly, but with infinite relief. "You have outdone me in magnanimity. Will you forgive me?"

"Oh, yes. Forgiveness is one of the few things you men can not rob us of." She spoke without bitterness, but her eyes were dim and her lips dropped. "What shall we do? They must not know that we have met."

"Cathewe knows," moodily.

"I had forgotten!"

"I leave all in your hands. Do what you will. If you break me—and God knows well that you can do it—it would be only an act of justice. I have been a scoundrel. I am man enough to admit of that."

She saw his face more clearly now. Time had marked it. There were new lines at the corners of his eyes and the cheek bones were more prominent. Perhaps he had suffered too. "You will always have the courage to do," she said, "right or wrong in a great manner."

"Am I wrong to seek"—

"Hush! I know. It is what you must thrust aside or break to reach it, Karl. The thing itself is not wrong, but you will go about it wrongly. You can not help that."

He did not reply. Perhaps she was right. Indeed, was she not herself an example of it? If there was one thing in his complex career that he regretted more than another it was the deception of this woman. He did not possess the usual vanity of the sex. There was nothing here to be proud of. His dream of conquest was not over the kingdom of women.

"Some one is coming," he said, listening.

"Leave it all to me."

"Ah"— with a hand toward her.

"Do not say it. I understand the thought. If only you loved me you would say!" the iron in her voice unmistakable.

He let his hand fall. He was sorry.

Presently the others made their entrance upon the scene, a singular anticlimax. The admiral rang for the cocktails. Introductions followed.

"Is it not strange?" said the singer to Laura. "I stole in here to look at the trophies, when I discovered Mr. Breitmann, whom I once knew in Munich."

"Mr. Cathewe," said the young hostess, "this is Mr. Breitmann, who is aiding father in the compilation of his book."

"Mr. Breitmann and I have met before," said Cathewe soberly.

The two men bowed. Cathewe never gave his hand to any but his intimates. But Laura, who was not aware of this ancient reserve, thought that both of them showed a lack of warmth. And Fitzgerald, who was watching all corners now, was sure that the past of his friend and Breitmann interlaced in some way.

"So, young man," said Mrs. Coldfield, a handsome motherly woman, "you have had the impudence to let five years pass without darkening my doors. What excuse have you?"

"I'm guilty of anything you say," Fitzgerald answered humbly. "What shall be my punishment?"

"You shall take Miss Laura in, and I shall sit at your left."

"For my sins it shall be as you say.

not, really. I have been so little in New York," he added.

"I forgive you simply because you have not made a failure of your mother's son. And you look like her too." It is one of the privileges of old persons to compare the young with this or that parent.

"You are flattering me. Dad used to say that I was as homely as a hedge fence."

"Now you're fishing, and I'm too old a fish to rise to such a cast."

"I heard you sing in Paris a few years ago," said M. Ferrand.

"Yes?" Hildegarde von Mitter wondered who this little man could be.

"And you sing no more?"

"No. The bird has flown. Only the woman remains." They were at the table now, and she absently plucked the flowers beside her plate.

"Ah, to sing as you did and then to disappear, to vanish! You had no right to do so. You belonged to the public," animatedly.

"The public is always selfish. It always demands more than any single person can give to it. Pardon?" she said as Cathewe leaned to speak to her. "I did not hear."

M. Ferraud nibbled his crisp celery.

"I asked what will you do," repeated Cathewe for her ear only.

"What do you mean?"

"Did you know that he was here?"

"I should not have been seated at this table had I known."

"Some day you are going to tell me all about it," he asserted, "and you are going to smile when you answer me."

"Thank you. I forgot. My dear friend, I am never going to tell you all about it. Why did you not come first?" her voice vibrating.

"You still love him."

"That is not kind," striving hard to keep the smile on her trembling lips. "Oh, I beg of you, do not make this friendship impossible. Do not rob me of the one man I trust."

Cathewe motioned aside the fish and reached for his sauterne. "I have loved you faithfully and loyally for seven years. I have tried to win you by all those roads a man may honorably traverse in quest of the one woman. For seven years and for something like three I have stayed away at your command. Will you believe it? Sometimes my hands ache for his throat— Smile; they are looking."

It was a crooked smile. "Why did I ever tell you?"

"Why did you ever tell me—only part? It is the other part I wish to know. Till I learn what that is I shall never leave you. You will find that there is a difference between love and infatuation."

"As I have never known infatuation I cannot tell the difference. Now, no more, unless you care to see me break down before them. For if you tell me that you have loved me seven years I have loved him eight," cruelly, for Cathewe was pressing her cruelly.

"Devil take him! What do you find in the man?"

"What do you find in me?" her eyes filled with anger.

"Forgive me, Hildegarde. I am blind and mad tonight. I did not expect to find him here either."

To be continued.

Mr. Simpson's Singing.

James Simpson, the Toronto labor leader, is a versatile man. His achievements in politics, civics, journalism, union labor and technical education, however, are trifling things compared to the fact that James is a singer.

James will not deny that he is proud of that tenor tone of his, and thereby hangs this tale.

Just recently Mr. Simpson attended a reunion of former members of Parliament Street Methodist Church. The east end church has had many noted members in its history, including Mayor Hocken and R. J. Fleming. Most of them were there on this occasion. Mr. Simpson had a jolly time and met several members of a class he used to teach in Sunday school some years ago.

But somebody asked him to sing. He sang.

A few minutes later he met a young woman who was once one of his class members.

"Glad to see you, Jimmy," she said (they all call him "Jimmy") "and I hope you will be elected, but I am afraid you have lost several perfectly good votes here to-night."

"How's that?" queried the astonished Mr. Simpson.

"Did you not sing a little while ago?"—Canadian Courier.

A Good Work.

Up to the present time fire departments have been used for extinguishing fires, but the fact was now becoming established that they could be used in the equally important work of fire prevention. A system of fire danger inspection work had been undertaken by the Montreal fire department, and as a consequence the number of alarms in the central portions of the city had been reduced by fifty per cent. during the past year.

Lots of Room.

Labrador has an area of 200,000 square miles, but the population is only 4,000.

Annual Lion Sermon.

Every year on October 16th there is preached at the Church of St. Catherine Cree, Leadenhall street, London, a sermon to commemorate the deliverance from a lion in the Arabian desert of Sir John Gayer, who was Lord Mayor in 1630. This year the preacher was the Bishop of Chekiang, Mid China, who is a descendant of Sir John Gayer, and there also took part in the service three clergymen named Gayer, who are direct descendants of the Lord Mayor. Every year the preacher has to relate the circumstances of the providential deliverance.

TRUE HOSPITALITY.

When the Artist Asked For Dry Bread He Found It.

AN artist making a sketching tour through Rhode Island chanced one day upon a picturesque old barn so alluring to his eye that he sat down on a stone wall and immediately set to work.

He soon became aware that he had two spectators in the persons of the farmer and his wife, who had come to watch him.

Presently the artist discovered that he had lost his rubber eraser, and, wishing to correct an error in the sketch, he went up to the farmer's wife and asked her if he might have a piece of dry bread. This, as is universally known, makes a good eraser.

The farmer's wife looked at him with an expression of pity not unmixed with surprise.

"Dry bread!" she repeated. "Well, I guess you won't have to put up with dry bread from me, young man. I've got sons of my own out in the world. You come right into the kitchen with me, and I'll give you a nice slice of fresh bread with butter on it. No, not a word," she continued, raising her hand to ward off his expostulations. "I don't care how you came to this state nor anything about it. All I know is you're hungry, and I've never yet allowed anybody to leave my house craving food."—Lippincott's.

Simple Enough.

"Here's an odd news note. A new Jersey trust company saved $75,000 last year by abolishing its legal department."

"That is odd. I wonder how it came to decide to do it."

"Simple enough. It decided to obey the law."—St. Louis Republic.

A Genius.

"All the master minds are not at the head of great industrial enterprises."

"No?"

"I've just been reading about a man who led a double life on a salary of $12 a week."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Why She Sang.

Ministerial Friend (on a visit)—I wonder what makes your mamma so happy today? She is singing all over the house.

Little Mary—I dess she's thought of somefin' to scold papa about when he tums home.—Harper's Magazine.

He Expected Too Much.

He—Don't you remember me? I rescued you from drowning at Narragansett last year.

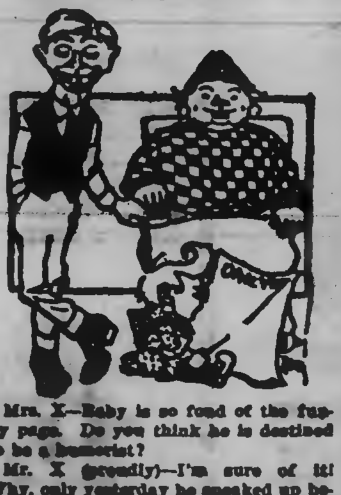
She (sweetly)—How stupid of me. But, of course, one cannot remember all the young men who rescue one.—Life.

Happy Man.

"What are you thinking of that pleases you so, Henry?"

"I just happened to remember that it is fully ten years since I've heard anybody recite 'The Charge of the Light Brigade.'"—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Studying For It.



Mrs. X—Baby is so fond of the funny page. Do you think he is destined to be a humorist?

THOUGHT IT WOULD KILL HIM

Terrible Torture From Chronic Indigestion, Short Treatment With "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured The Whole Trouble.

C. T. HILL, Esq.

Chatham, Ont., April 3rd, 1913

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. I treated with a prominent physician here for some time, but I did not get any better so I went in to see him one day and said "Doctor, what do I owe you? I am not getting any better and am going to quit you." I paid him his bill and he remarked to me, "Charlie, you have a case of chronic Indigestion that will be hard to cure."

I left his office and as I stepped out on the street my eye caught a bill board advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives"—that big "Fat Man and Thin Man" and I said to myself, "If Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it's good enough for me." I walked directly over to Park's Drug Store and I bought a box of "Fruit-a-tives." After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself greatly improved. I continued taking them for a short time longer and cured myself entirely. My case was no light one either, for many times when I was on the street, I was compelled to go into some store or business place until the acute spasms wore away. Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear it would get around my heart and kill me. To-day, I have no such fears. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles." C. T. HILL.

Perhaps your case is exactly like Mr. Hill's. If so, do exactly as he did—take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. "Fruit-a-tives" will prevent the formation of gas in the stomach by making digestion complete. It will insure the food being promptly digested by providing an aboundance of gastric juice in the stomach. It keeps the stomach sweet and clean, not only by helping the digestion but also by regulating Kidneys and Bowels and toning up the system.

If you suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Belching, Gas on the Stomach, Heart Pains after Eating, take "Fruit-a-tives." 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

THE 1914 HUPMOBILE

THE BEST CAR OF ITS CLASS IN THE WORLD

The Car of the Canadian Family

Why do we call the HUPMOBILE the best car of its class in the world? Because it is universally acknowledged, the HUPMOBILE has no competition in its price class.

You may think this a daring statement to make, but we are fully prepared to prove this to your satisfaction.

ONE ARGUMENT

"Is this not logical? In the first place we would not make an assertion we could not prove. Secondly, there are many points of superiority and things this car can do that we haven't space to mention.

"The Hupmobile is indeed a remarkable car. It compares with more expensive cars as a small diamond to the larger one—'just as good but not so much of it.' This is proven by the splendid work it has done in all parts of the world, and the universal satisfaction it has given to owners.

You can get quantity in an automobile for probably less money than you can get Hupmobile quality for, but remember:—When you are buying the Hupmobile you are buying a car in which quality is the predominating feature. ..It will give you faithful service year after year with a minimum of upkeep expense, you will come to look upon it with as much affection and pride as you would an old and tested friend, as indeed it is.

JOIN THE HUPMOBILE FAMILY and get the utmost that money can buy in motor car service and satisfaction."

ANOTHER ARGUMENT

Mr. Blank, if you were thinking of buying bank stock would you prefer to buy stock that was dropping in price, or stock that was increasing in value? You would buy the stock that was increasing, because it would be a guaranty to you that it was worth more than it previously sold for. Stocks increase as their earning powers increase.

The price of this machine with its many improvements has increased because the cost of manufacturing has increased; but its value to you has been nearly doubled. With added equipment and mechanical refinements we have only increased its cost to you a few dollars. This machine is a better investment for you to-day than some of the machines now on the market, selling for $1,800 or more, because it will give you a better return for your money.

If the price of this machine had gone down you might be excused for thinking it was not worth what we ask for it, but the fact that the price has been increased is the best guarantee that the Hupmobile is worth more than we ask for it.

Hupmobile "32" H.P. Six-Passenger Touring

Fully equipped with electric horn, rain vision windshield, silk mohair top with envelope, Hupmobile Jiffy curtains, speedometer, cocoa mat in tonneau, two folding and revolving occasional seats and tonneau foot rest, rear shock absorber, Prest-O-Lite tank, gas headlights, oil side and tail lamps, tools. Tires 33 x 4, demountable rims, one extra rim and tire carrier. Trimmings black and nickel. Body color black, running gear scarlet lake with black stripe on wheels—$1480 f. o. b. Windsor.

With additional equipment of Westinghouse two-unit electric starting and lighting system and independent magneto ignition, 16 candle power headlights, adjustable for focus. Combination electric and oil side and tail lamps, 100 ampere hour storage battery, over size tires, 33 x 4 inch, demountable rims, one extra rim and tire carrier (as illustrated)—$1630 f. o. b. Windsor.

The upkeep expense of the Automobile has prevented many a man from investing in a Car in the past, but do not let that influence you for the HUPMOBILE has made that a minor consideration.

Additional specifications of the 1914 HUPMOBILE ARE:—Westinghouse 2-unit starting and lighting system, one-unit absolutely independent from the other in case of failure of one unit the other is not affected. Right-hand drive with centre control.

Unit power plant, viz:—Motor, clutch and transmission in one housing, thus preserving perfect alignment of all working parts, which make for greatest efficiency reducing frictional losses to a minimum.

Four cylinder en bloc motor of the L head type. 3¼ inch. bore, 5½ inch stroke valves enclosed, and all on one side—camshaft and lighting generator driven by silent Coventry chain. This small bore long stroke motor in connection with the low hung chassis and streamline bond makes possible a mileage of 18 to 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

The remarkable all-around efficiency of this car has created the reputation we boast of. "The Best Car of its class in the World."

LACK OF WATER BRINGS ABOUT GRAVE DANGER

Mayor Lavaliee Has Issued Warning to the Citizens to Guard Against Fire and Absolute Lack of Water —Notice Sent Out to Drink Boiled Snow— Hot Taps May Explode, Says Bulletin.

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.—The entire city is now affected by the break in the intake pipe and the gravity of the situation is fully recognized by the authorities. Statements have been issued by Mayor Lavallee and Fire Chief Tremblay. The mayor, in his official statement issued yesterday afternoon says:

"We are threatened by a calamity by this interruption in our water, unless the general public stands guard against danger of fire and absolute lack of water supply.

"The trouble may last four or five days, I am told.

"All manufacturing plants should close down at once to conserve what we have on hand.

"Particularly I want to warn the public against the use of water from the hot taps. There is serious danger of explosions if they do. Heat the water on the stove."

The mayor added that the city was, and would continue to, do all it could to repair the break.

The manufacturing and down-town sections were without water yesterday, owing to the break in the main leading from the intake pipe from the St. Lawrence at Verdun. While the water department of the city has made every effort to repair the break, it is known that a water famine will exist for several days in certain portions of the city.

The average consumption of water in the effected districts is sixty million gallons a day, and the city has only been able to make arrangements for 26,000,000 gallons a day.

The department early issued notice to people to use boiled snow for drinking purposes.

The hospitals and the factories were compelled to buy Laurentian water by the ton from companies handling it.

Most of the bakers are without water, and will get their supply of bread from Toronto and other cities.

A reserve of two million gallons is being held in a reservoir in case of fire, though it is recognized that a big conflagration would easily account for this supply and leave the city in bad shape to cope with it.

The districts affected have a population of 200,000.

Water carts are making rounds, supplying the hospitals, hotels, restaurants and boarding-houses, and supply is being given citizens at the fire hydrants on certain streets, while all of the city snow is being gathered and melted for drinking and washing purposes.

The greatest danger in the circumstances is from fire. All first call alarms are being attended by the amount of apparatus which usually turns out on the second call, and at a small fire last night about a block from the Montreal General Hospital the firemen extinguished the blaze with hand extinguishers.

WELL KNOWN EVANGELIST AT GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH

The Gilmour Baptist Church, Rev. R. J. McLaren, pastor, has secured Evangelist Wilson A. Pugsley, a well-known American Evangelist, to conduct a 15-day's campaign. Mr. Pugsley was associated with one of the strongest evangelists in America, as Bible Instructor, "Ambridge, Pa., Press," says "It is a rare treat to have so thorough a Bible student to aid in conducting this evangelistic movement." Ukiah, Cal., Press says "Rev. Pugsley won the hearts of the people with his scholarly lectures, and he has proven himself to be a master in personal work."

Mr. Pugsley comes with a large experience as a business man, commercial traveller, pastor, teacher, and evangelist, so you cannot afford to miss hearing him. Plan to attend every service. Only 15 days.

New song books will be used, and a strong chorus will lead the singing. Opening service, Sunday, Jan. 14th, 1914, 11 a.m., and every evening, Saturday excepted.

JAPANESE FRIGHTENED

Those in Mexico Are Afraid of Violence From Rebels

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The situation of foreigners in Mexico who have incurred the ill-will of the rebels is again giving some concern to State Department officials. Yesterday the Japanese ambassador called upon acting Secretary Moore to request that the United States Government do what it can to protect the Japanese in El Paso, and in other border points.

The apprehension that these Japanese may be made to feel the weight of resentment by the constitutionalists because the federals are receiving supplies of arms and ammunition from Japan, although it has already been appointed that these goods are being delivered under contracts made by Japanese merchants last April.

Acting Secretary Moore promised to instruct the American consuls in the rebel country to extend the same care to Japanese as they would to American citizens.

Rebels Received With Honors.

CULIACAN, Mexico, Dec. 27.—Constitutionalists officials of Sinaloa were accorded official honors when they visited the United States cruiser Pittsburg at San Blas, according to details of the visit related yesterday when the party returned here.

The insurgent state officials had visited the Pittsburg upon request of Rear Admiral Cowles, whom they had entertained at the state capital at Culiacan. When Gov. Riveros and Gen. Itube boarded the Pittsburg they were received with a salute of 16 guns. The Mexican tricolor floated with the stars and stripes over the American ship of war. The visitors were entertained at luncheon and inspected the ship and crew.

Schemes for the construction of a 3,000-mile railway through Central Africa, at a cost roughly estimated at $50,000,000, have been revived by the termination of the war between Italy and Turkey.

PARTY FORMED BY BRIAND

Former French Premier Launches in Opposition to Government.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The "Briandist party," a new political organization, was formed yesterday by 105 Republican Senators and members of the Chamber of Deputies. As its name indicates, the party is headed by Aristide Briand, former Premier. It includes among its prominent members J. Louis Barthou, Stephen Pichon, Alexandre Millerand, Jean Dupuy and L. L. Klotz, all of whom have served as Cabinet Ministers. The party is expected to draw supporters from all sections of the left who refuse to obey the newly-organized Radical party.

The object of the Briandists, as stated by its organizers, is to put the good of France as a whole before the considerations of local politics. In the words of M. Briand, the new organization cherishes no hostility of any Republican and has no intention to attempt the overthrow either of the Ministry or the Radical party, with whom, he says, it differs not so much in program as in method.

MISSED BRIDGE; TWO INJURED

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 27—Missing the approach to the bridge crossing the river at Fort Saskatchewan, three Edmonton men in an automobile crashed over the embankment into the river yesterday. Two were very badly hurt and it is feared their backs are broken. The third man saved himself from serious injury by jumping clear of the machine.

The two seriously injured are J. H. Collison and John Goodfellow.

BILLY SUNDAY STIRS PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 27.—Pittsburg is stirred from centre to circumference over the coming of "Billy" Sunday, who is scheduled to open one of his characteristic evangelistic campaigns in this city tomorow morning. Pittsburg is the largest city that the noted evangelist has ever invaded and he has made his plans in proportion. A monster tabernacle has been erected in the heart of the city and a mammoth chorus has been trained to lead the singing. Three hundred ushers have been trained in their duties and one hundred dishpans of largest size are in readiness for use in taking up the collection. While the voices of 10,000 persons have been raised in mighty prayer in preparation for the opening of the campaign, an equal or larger number of persons have been active in opposing it. The opposition, which includes a number of ministers and many prominent church workers, went so far as to seek an injunction to restrain the building of the tabernacle.

Let these Great Artists Select Your Piano

THE most significant chapter in the history of Canadian pianoforte construction records the brilliant achievements of this piano. ¶ Regarded from its inception as one of the world's great pianos, the pre-eminence of the New Scale Williams Piano has been confirmed by the almost unanimous endorsement of the renowned vocalists, violinists and pianists who have visited Canada. ¶ The following quotations are from a fascinating collection of autographed letters which will be sent you on request for book 3B:

"Equal to any instrument I have seen."

"Remarkable qualities quite out of the ordinary."

"A concert instrument of the highest class."

"Rich, even tone and sympathetic quality of great value."

"The exquisite, liquid tone was an inspiration."

"The sweet, round, mellow tone make it a perfect instrument"

"I congratulate you on giving Canada a piano of such great merit."

"The piano possesses brilliancy and purity of tone quality."

LOFTY OFFICE FOR WOMAN

Prison Superintendent May Become Commission of Correction

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—This city, for the first time in its history, is to have a woman at the head of one of its most important departments, according to those in close touch with the plans of Mayor-elect J. P. Mitchel, for filling the many city offices, which will be at his disposal on Jan. 1. The woman, it was understood yesterday, is Dr. Katherine B. Davis, superintendent of the Bedford Reformatory for Girls, and the office that of commissioner of correction, now held by Patrick A. Whitney. The salary of the office is $7,500, and all the complex and extensive correctional work of the city is under the jurisdiction of the incumbent.

Women suffragists were elated when they heard the news of the probable appointment of Dr. Davis. She has won high repute by her methods of administering the affairs of the Bedford institution.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27. — The unemployed were given permission yesterday by the board of supervisors to organize their own culinary committee.

The men complained that they were kept too long in line and supplied with badly prepared and insufficient food by the co-operative employment bureau and a charity which has been caring for them.

The co-operative bureau would be rid of work which it is inadequately prepared to see through, and Secretary Bogart complained that the Y.M.C.A. and churches that had promised to aid were not living up to their pledges.

MINERS REFUSE MONEY; THEY LOOK TOWARD UNION

Committee Which Collected $25,000 For the Bereaved Strikers Cannot Get Anybody to Accept Aid—Remarkable State of Affairs Ascribed to Belief That Member of Citizens' Alliance Started Panic.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 27.—Inability to give away one cent of the $25,000 collected for relief of the families stricken by the Christmas Eve catastrophe, in which seventy-two persons were killed, yesterday confronted the committee which gathered the funds.

Every bereaved household that was approached told the men and women in charge of the distribution that they had been promised adequate aid by the Western Federation of Miners, and nowhere was there any assistance wanted.

Members of the relief committee selected at Thursday's mass meeting ascribe this unprecedented condition to the rumor that the man who started the panic among the striking copper miners' children wore the emblem of the citizens' alliance, an organization opposed to the continuance of the strike. To combat this sentiment they obtained from Anthony Lucas, prosecuting attorney of Houghton County, a statement that he was satisfied from the progress of his investigations that the man who raised the cry wore no insignia of any kind.

In most instances the offers of relief were refused without show of any feeling other than confidence that the union would be able to take care of all wants. In one case two women were ejected from a home where two children lay dead. Mrs. John Vertin and Mrs. Marcus Sterk met this rebuff, and after being shown the door gave up their mission and returned to report to headquarters.

Despite the evident determination of the stricken families not to accept non-union aid, the committee was not without hope of overcoming the prejudices, and held another meeting last night to consider various plans for getting rid of the money in its hands.

Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, was put on a train and sent out of the copper strike district last night. The deportation was the direct result of refusal of families stricken by the Christmas Eve disaster here to accept relief from a committee, the majority of whose members belonged to the citizens' alliance, an organization combatting the five months' strike of the federation.

TWELVE LIVES LOST SO FAR IN ATLANTIC GALE

Two Barges Are Sunk Off New Jersey and Crew Are Given up For Lost—Two Men Are Drowned in East River, New York—Blizzard Causes Havoc in Lower Lakes District.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Two men drowned in the East River and ten men—the crews of two barges wrecked on the New Jersey coast—given up as lost, is the cost in human lives of the storm which swept over this city and vicinity early yesterday morning.

At Seabright, N.J., a fashionable summer resort 20 miles south of here, most of the houses have either been wrecked or are under water. Several hotels and many fine residences were among those undermined and badly damaged. Seventy families are homeless.

The damage to property is estimated at $1,000,000, most of it borne by Seabright and other points along the northern section of the New Jersey coast. Most of the property losses are due to bulkheads giving way under the onslaught of waves lashed into fury by a gale, which at one time reached a velocity of 90 miles per hour.

The two three-masted barges, whose crews have been given up as lost were in tow of the sea-going tug Edgar F. Luckenbach. While the storm was at its worst, the barges broke away and then drifted in shore midway between life-saving stations 15 and 16 miles south of Seaside Park, N.J. At 9.30 yesterday morning only one of the masts of the barges was visible, and on it the form of a man. A little later the mast disappeared.

Heroic efforts on the part of the life-saving crews have so far failed to reveal a single survivor of the wreck. The tug was reported safe in this port late last night. The two men drowned here were longshoremen whose boat was caught in the storm and swamped.

All doubt as to the fate of the crews of the wrecked barges was removed late last night when the revenue cutters Seneca and Onondaga, which were rushed to the scene early yesterday reported that no trace of the men had been found. Life-savers on shore had not been able to reach the wrecks and they declared it was out of the question that any of those on board could have lived in such a sea as prevailed all day.

Much damage had been done the pound fishing industry along the New Jersey coast for some distance south of Sandy Hook. The estimated loss to the various plants is $100,000. They supply a considerable proportion of the fish consumed in New York, Philadelphia and other eastern cities and surrounding territory.

Atlantic City Hard Hit.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Dec. 27.—Bulkheads were smashed, tons of lumber were washed up on the beach and other damage of a minor character was caused by a storm which raged here Thursday night and yesterday. The five miles of meadows between this city and the mainland resembled a turbulent sea all day. The tide was three feet above normal.

Hail, snow and rain fell, thunder pealed and lightning flashed during the storm's progress, and yesterday sea foam was piled like snow in drifts along the waterfront.

Waves Came Into Grill.

OCEAN PARK, Cal., Dec. 27.—Twenty-foot breakers tumbling in on the crest of the season's highest tide, broke over bulkheads guarding the strand yesterday and nearly drowned between 30 and 40 men and women who were breakfasting in the basement grill of a fashionable hotel. The combers swept over all barriers, smashing in the windows, and fell upon the guests at the tables. Waiters and guests got out before the second wave dashed in, but a few minutes later there was several feet of water in the grill.

Blizzard Ties Up Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 27.—A blizzard which raged all night and continued with less violence yesterday, paralyzed street traffic in this city. Reports from the country say roads are impassable on account of the drifted snow.

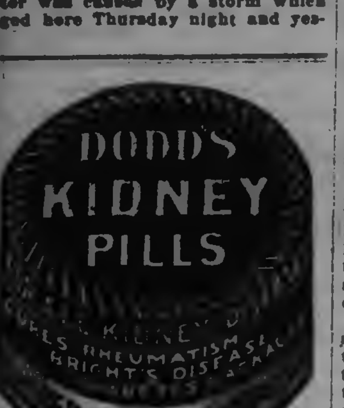
Spent Night In Cars.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 27.—Breaks Thursday night to the high-tension line which provides power to the Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway tied up the entire system of the railway for over fourteen hours—in fact, complete service was not resumed until yesterday afternoon. Several hundred Christmas travelers were inconvenienced, and many were obliged to spend the night in stalled cars.

The cause of the breaks is given as the heavy stress placed upon it by a high gale of wind on the sleet-covered wires.

Two Frozen To Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—Death and considerable property damage resulted from storms which raged throughout eastern Pennsylvania on Thursday night and yesterday. Michael Clark, an inmate at the Schuylkill County alms house, and Dennis McFadden, a farmer, were found frozen to death in snow drifts in the vicinity of Pottsville.



WANT HEBREW

Zionist Against German as Language of Palestine School.

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.—At the Zionist convention yesterday by a standing vote a resolution strongly protesting against the action of the Jewish technical school of Haifa, Palestine, in adopting German as the teaching language, and heartily sympathizing with two of the Berlin officials of the board of that institution and practically the whole teaching staff of every Jewish school in Palestine, who had resigned their positions in protest. Over $1,000 was voluntarily subscribed to assist in the upkeep of these men until such time as Hebrew shall have been adopted as the teaching language of the school, and they can return to their positions on the staff.

The Rev. Meldola de Sola, who presented the resolution, pointed out that already voiced by Zionists throughout the world against the introduction of any foreign language to a Jewish school in Palestine.

FALLING OFF IN THE DEMAND

Buying at Market Not so Brisk This Morning.

The market this morning was a trifle smaller than the market before Christmas, but no doubt a lighter demand and cold weather were the chief causes. From all directions comes the story of excellent sleighing which is greatly welcomed.

The outside market was exceedingly small, being attended by about ten sleighs. Dressed pork sold for $14.00 and $15.00 per cwt., while beef was $12.00. Apples were scarce and the few who had them asked $1.25 and $1.35 per bag. The first load of straw on the local was rye straw and sold for $8.00. The Review scribe asked how plentiful straw was and learned that it is not to be had with the exception of a small quantity of rye straw. For this harness makers are offering big money.

The inside market prices were about the same as they have been for the past three weeks.

Butter was 28 and 30, eggs 40, geese $1.50 to $1.80, turkeys $2.00, $2.75, and chickens 90 to $1.00 per pair.

Leeds Strike a Fiasco.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The strike of the municipal workers in Leeds has ended in a farce. Despite the wishes of the leaders the men have returned to work on the city's terms. The strike lasted a fortnight, but there was no public sympathy with the strikers. Indeed, many citizens of all walks in life acted as strike breakers, ran street cars, drove garbage carts and did other menial acts in order to defeat the strikers.

Northern Towns Want Radial.

PENETANGUISHENE, Ont., Dec. 27.—The Mayor and Council of Penetanguishene are taking up the matter of procuring electric railway connection with the C.P.R. at Port McNicol, and are in correspondence with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission with a view to procuring estimates of cost and arranging details.

GUN POWDER AS BAGGAGE

Man Who Shipped Explosive Let Off With Warning

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 27.—That twelve pounds of gunpowder were shipped in a trunk as baggage from North Bay along with several steel tools, developed in the police court yesterday when George Trowbridge pleaded guilty to making the shipment without having notified the G.T.R. He professed ignorance of the law.

The trunk was leaking when it arrived at St. Catharines station, and after it had been moved a baggageman who dropped a match upon the platform where some of the loose powder had fallen had his face burned when the explosive became ignited.

Trowbridge was allowed to go on suspended sentence after a severe lecture by Magistrate Campbell.

Drowned In Paint Bucket.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Drowned in a bucket of paint, George W. Riggs, prominent insurance broker, was found dead in the bathroom of his home yesterday. Riggs mounted a ladder to paint the bathroom ceiling. It is supposed that he was overcome by the fumes of benzine and swooned. He was found lying in the bathtub, his head in the paint bucket.

Czarevitch Again Hurt.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—A telegram from St. Petersburg, published here, states that the Czarevitch has met with another mishap. He collided with a door and seriously injured his maimed leg. The boy's mother swooned. Prof. Fedoreff was summoned.

This report has not been confirmed.

Safety In Mines.

Expressing the opinion that explosions in mines can be prevented, the Clifton Miners' Committee of the Nottinghamshire Miners' Association suggests that the Government should bring in a bill to make stone dusting compulsory, and to secure three shafts instead of two for every mine. There should be one downcast shaft and two upcast shafts, making the air current twice as much as it is at the present day, thereby clearing away all foul gases and so preventing any explosions.

To sink this extra shaft for each mine would, they say, entail extra expense, but it could be met by the landlords returning to the mineowners a year's minimum rents and the state finding the extra expense to sink these shafts.

Mrs. Lloyd George's Motto.

An excellent motto was voiced by Mrs. Lloyd George when opening a bazaar at Clapham a few days ago. "Be not afraid of anyone or anything," she said, "but go forward. However pleasant it may be to swim with the stream, muscles and sinews are only developed by swimming against it." Mrs. Lloyd George has been particularly active of late in the political world. Indeed, the Chancellor of the Exchequer recently confessed that the practical assistance of his wife in his daily work has proved of the utmost value to him.

Hadn't Quite Finished.

Jim was a new porter in the hotel; and he was putting in his first night at his new and responsible position. It was 5 in the morning, and so far Jim had done all he was told and was getting on splendidly.

"Call 17 and 4," commanded the night clerk as he looked over his call sheet. Jim obeyed. After he had been gone for a considerable time the clerk went up to see if he had called the rooms designated.

"Well," sighed the new porter, whom he found on the third floor, "I've got seventeen of 'em up, but I haven't started on the other four yet."—National Food Magazine.

And Then—

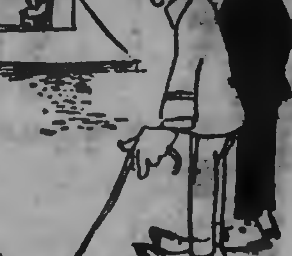
"Bacon," declaimed the literary poet, "wrote his stuff in Latin because he wanted it in a permanent language, and he had no faith in the life of English. Dryden translated much of his own poetry into Latin, and so Milton wrote Greek poetry for the same reason. I wonder"—

"Sure!" cried the editor enthusiastically. "You do that. Translate all your poetry into some dead language, and then"—

"Yes—and then?"

"Then take it out and bury it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Knew His Business.



"Yes, he is the craftiest upholsterer in town."

"In what way?"

"Why, he reads all the marriage notices in the papers and then goes around to the bride's parents and asks them if they want the parlor sofa upholstered."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Disastrous Fire In Detroit Causes Loss of $250,000.

DETROIT, Dec. 27.—A spectacular fire, starting from a cause undetermined, swept through the main depot of the Michigan Central Railway Co., here yesterday afternoon. The blaze which started in one of the office rooms in an upper storey, gained great headway before an employe discovered it, and although several hundred persons were in the building at the time, only one, a male employe, was injured. His condition, however, is not serious.

After three hours of hard fighting, firemen had the conflagration apparently under control. The damage to the depot proper was estimated at $150,000. Railway records, freight and express were also consumed, and officials of the road said the total loss might be a quarter of a million dollars.

Mona Lisa Many Times Offered.

ROME, Dec. 27.—Vincenzo Perugia, in whose possession the police of Florence found the famous painting, "Mona Lisa," which mysteriously disappeared three years ago from the Louvre in Paris, was examined yesterday by the magistrate who is investigating the case. The prisoner said he had tried to sell the "Mona Lisa" to a representative of the late J. Pierpont Morgan and had also offered the portrait to dealers in London, Paris and Naples.

Perugia's statements amazed the court because, assuming his confession to be true, none of the dealers notified the police.

Clasped Hands and Fought.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 27.—Word reached here yesterday from Pikeville, Ky., that Solomon Jackson and Tate Souders, of that city, fought a peculiar duel there Thursday, in which both were killed. The men had trouble over a lawsuit and it was suggested that they clasp their left hands and with a pistol in the right hand of each, "shoot it out." Standing hand in hand they killed each other.

Fifteen Thousand on Plate.

HAILEYBURY, Dec. 27. — The Christmas spirit had its effect on Dr. R. E. Allan of Leon, Mexico, when at the special services held on Christmas morning in the local Baptist Church, he deposited a marked check for $15,000 on the collection plate. When the elders first saw the offering they thought it was possibly a mistake, but a note attached stated that the money was to be used for a new church and parsonage. The gift solves the question for the congregation of a new church, and arrangements will be made to commence building operations in the spring.

Lake Erie Wants a Loan.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—The Lake Erie & Northern Railway Co. is seeking power to increase its issue of securities from $30,000 to $45,000 per mile, and power to borrow money and issue securities for the acquisition, construction and extension or development of any properties, assets or works other than the railway.

A lease of the rolling stock of the Imperial Rolling Stock Co., Ltd., to the Canadian Northern Railway, date Dec. 1, has been deposited in the office of the Secretary of State.

Two Firemen In Irons.

DELAWARE BREAKWATER, Del., Dec. 27.—The assistance of a revenue cutter has been asked to quell a disturbance among the crew of the British steamer Baron Delmeny, which arrived here yesterday with two firemen in irons and four others so badly cut that their recovery is doubtful. The trouble started among the Chinese firemen, but from what cause it could not be ascertained. Captain Gordon declares that knives had been smuggled aboard, and that he will not proceed to sea until his riotous crew is replaced. He has communicated with the British consul in Philadelphia.

Will Be Home Soon.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Sir James Whitney is on the high road to recovery. So rapid has been his improvement in the last two days that word has come simultaneously to the Cabinet and to his own home that he will be in Toronto very shortly.

"We have received very good news indeed," said Lady Whitney to the press last evening. "Sir James is very much better and we expect him home soon."

Hon. J. J. Foy stated that he had received the most welcome word yet. He was given to expect that the Premier would spend New Year's Day in this city.

And Now a Mink Farm.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 27. — Negotiations are under way for the opening of a mink farm on the Cole Harbor road and already concrete dens have been built for the purpose. It is said that George Foster is behind the enterprise and has a company of Halifax men interested.

Nothing Daunts Larkin.

DUBLIN, Dec. 27.—James Larkin, the labor leader, it is said will start for the United States next week. Larkin, however, declines to say whether he is going or not. When it was suggested yesterday to Larkin that the American authorities might exclude him, he said: "If I wanted to enter the United States, all the Governments you ever heard of could not keep me out."

An Apology.

An excited military-looking gentleman entered the editorial sanctum one afternoon, exclaiming: "That notice of my death is false, sir. I will horsewhip you within an inch of your life, sir, if you don't apologise in your next issue."

The editor inserted the following next day: "We extremely regret to announce that the paragraph in our last issue which stated that Major Blazer was dead is without foundation."

Two Hurt In Collision.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 27.—An engineer's disregard of his train orders and his taking a chance of making the next station in safety was the cause of a head-on collision between a G.T.R. engine that was running light and a freight train at Cainsville, east of here, yesterday morning. Engineer Smith of Sarnia and a brakeman were seriously injured. The light engine had orders to wait at Cainsville to let the freight pass, but instead of waiting started out, and just east of the station the engine came head-on into the freight on the curve. Both locomotives were wrecked.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE NORTH WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practicing my profession here for seven years.

My policy briefly is this: An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the City's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for alderman in the North Ward.

Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

ICE AT BROCK ST. RINK; HOCKEY PLAYERS TO-NIGHT

Jack Thorndyke Back on the Job for the Season

The long expected ice in Brock Street ring has arrived. The cold weather of this last few days had the desired effect and as a result of it and all night's work by Jack Thorndyke, there is about an inch of ice on the boards this morning. No doubt the many patrons of the ring will be more than pleased to learn that Mr. Thorndyke is back on the job again. Brock Street rink will be more than pleased to ance if the said John wasn't on hand. His ability as an icemaker is by no means limited, and the patrons as long as Mr. Thorndyke stays, is assured of the best possible ice and accommodation that can be procured.

The ice this year was placed on top of the boards and the O. H. A. teams will practice tonight. If the same brand of weather prevails, there will be skating on Monday night.

The Juniors and Intermediates will practise at seven o'clock.

EXAMINING FILMS.

London Girl Does Forty Million Feet of "Movey" Ribbons a Year.

A very important and necessary person on the staff of film manufacturers is the inspector or examiner of films. Fifteen, twenty, or twenty-five copies of each cinematograph production are made and circulated among as many halls, remaining at each for three days. And for this brief period the proprietor of the hall has to pay a high fee. In the course of six weeks these score of films will visit some 200 halls, and after this they are released at progressively lower figure, and resume their travels for many weeks more.

And it is the duty of the film examiner to inspect the films as they are sent back by the exhibitors and remedy any faults which may have resulted from wear and tear. With careful handling a film will last some considerable time, but it is necessary that it should be inspected on each occasion before being sent out.

Women make the best inspectors, according to a leading film manufacturer, on account of their delicacy of touch. He informed the writer that one of the cleverest is Miss Marie Herbst, who examines something like 40,000,000 feet of film photograph plays every year. For the past four years she has been employed by a leading firm of film manufacturers, her duties being to rewind every film brought in by exhibitors, and inspect it before it is sent out again. And this examination is carried out by the use of the thumb and forefinger, which are so sensitive that they quickly telegraph to her the tiniest crack in a film as it is being quickly rewound from one reel to another. The rewinding process is carried out so quickly that it is impossible for the eye to detect all the minor faults. These, however, are immediately felt by an expert examiner as the film slips through the fingers.

Taking the film between th thumb and finger of her left hand, Miss Herbst rewinds with her right. Seemingly she sends the film through too fast to note any defects, but she seldom misses the tiniest crack. When one is found the rewinding machine is stopped, the offending piece clipped out, and the film pasted together again. Considerable care, of course, has to be taken in cutting out part of the film, in order that the continuity of the pictures may not be spoilt.

Turpin and Black Bess.

Dick Turpin began life as a pilfering butcher's apprentice, proceeded to the robbery of lonely farm houses and the torture or murder of their inmates, then took to the road, and was finally hanged for horse-stealing. He was real enough, and sordid enough; but Black Bess and the whole of the "Ride to York" belong to the history of John Nevison, known as "Nicks," or "Swift Nick."

Swift Nick owed his name, and much of his success, to the possession of a magnificent bay mare of extraordinary beauty, speed, and endurance. Having perpetrated a hold-up at Gad's Hill very early one morning, and having reason to think he would be suspected, Swift Nick resolved to establish an apparent alibi. At dawn, as the clocks struck four, he started out, and, pausing only to bait his horse at Gravesend, where they crossed the ferry, and thrice more at Chelmsford, Cambridge, and Huntingdon to rest her, he kept straight on to York, where at a quarter to eight that evening he strolled casually into the Bowling Green Inn. He had covered, roughly speaking, 190 miles in fifteen hours. Swift Nick, too, came at last to the gallows, writes Mr. Stockley Blanchard, in his "Knights of the Road." He and his like were a callous, commonplace, rascally crew.

Steel Plates Attracted Fish.

A remarkable story was told by the crew of the British freighter Rochelle, which reached port recently four days late. According to several of the men, the delay was due principally to electric fish, otherwise known as torpedo fish, which were attracted by the steel plates of the vessel and fastened themselves by hundreds against her bottom and sides.

DENATURED NATURE.

Since the odorless onion has landed
And the cactus is shorn of its spine
And fruits without seeds may be handed
To those who are waiting to dine
We'll hope for a scheme of creation
Producing conditions sublime
In live stock and in vegetation
If we'll just give the scientists time

The course of revised evolution
The mule that is kickless may reach
And the cashless campaign contribution
And maybe the languageless speech.
The headacheless cup they may offer
Assisting our spirits to climb.
There's no telling what they may proffer
If we'll just give our scientists time.

Competing Consumers.

"So it is," replied Mr. Cumrox, "only instead of competing to sell things the idea now is to corner 'em up and get people competing for a chance to buy."—Washington Star.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

FLORENCE HINKLE CONCERT

Mr. R. Gliddon is in receipt of the following letter from Dr. A. S. Vogt, conductor of the Mendelssohn choir, Toronto:

Toronto, Dec. 26, 1913.

Dear Mr. Gliddon,

I am much pleased to learn that you are having Miss Hinkle with you at your forthcoming concert in Peterboro. She is one of the most satisfactory and brilliant artists before the public at the present time. Our opinion of her may be judged from the fact that she has now been engaged by the Mendelssohn Choir, for its Toronto concerts for the fourth consecutive season, besides having appeared with our society in it's most recent Buffalo, New York and Boston concerts.

I trust that the people of Peterboro may give this sterling artist the fine reception which her splendid art entitles her to.

Wishing you every success, I am,
Very truly yours,
A. E. VOGT.

Ernie Marks' Co.

The Ernie Marks Company made another hit last evening with the presenting of that popular drama "Where the Shamrock Grows." The entire cast evinced talent and ability as found in the large road companies.

ST, ANDREW'S MUSIC

The music rendered at St. Andrew's Churst last Sunday, will be repeated tomorrow,

INNER SHRINE FOR THE GRAND

"The Inner Shrine" dramatized from Basil King's novel of the same title by Channing Pollock, will be the eventful offering at the Grand Opera House on Caturday, January 4th.

To accurately cast this latest and greatest dramatic success "The Inner Shrine" for its tour, has been a heavy responsibility. The clean-cut and pronounced characters in the story must have their realistic counterparts on the stage. Those world-wide book favorites, Diane Eveleth, the ideal American woman; Derek Pruyn, the doubtful yet persistent and ardent lover; the Marquis de Bienville, who has never been surpassed as a stage villain, with Marion Grimston, his scheming and treacherous fiancee; Dorothea Pruyn and Carll Wappinger, two young lovers, who work their way on to the stage and into the hearts of all with their pretty, but unique love scenes, have been cast with great care. Every character in the book has been fit into the stage picture with realistic accuracy, and a real treat is in store for lovers of clean-cut drama when "The Inner Shrine" fills its booking on the above date.

WITH THE VERSATILES

MISS HARRIE FAWN.

LAST LAP OF A WORLD-WIDE TOUR

"The Versatiles," who appear at "The Grand" New Year's Day, Matinee and Night, are on the last lap of their world-wide tour of the British Colonies, being due in England at the end of February, when they open their London Season. This combination of all English artists have appeared in nearly every country where flies the Union Jack and their unequalled success has been achieved as much by their ability to adapt themselves to the conditions of the country as by their individual and concerted artistry. The "Canadian Express," which the Versatiles are offering for two performances only, has been voted by Canadian and American audiences, to be one of the cleverest concoctions of wit and humor ever presented to the playgoers of this Dominion. The Canadian Express was simply manufactured for laughter, and judging by the unusual amount of merriment from rise to fall of the curtain, it has fulfilled its mission.

NO TRACE OF THE BOX

Receptacle of Rampolla's Papers Was Jealously Guarded

ROME, Dec. 27.—All the evidence thus far adduced concerning the black box which was taken from the room of Cardinal Rampolla the day he died, tends to show the cardinal was fearful that it would be tampered with. The box, which is believed by some persons to have contained the last will and testament and other papers of Cardinal Rampolla, was placed under his pillow by the cardinal the day he was forced to take to his bed with the seizure which shortly afterwards caused his death.

Soon after the cardinal passed away, and while the body was being moved from the bed to be prepared for the coffin, the black box fell to the floor, some person picked it up and laid it on the cardinal's writing desk. Since that time all is a mystery concerning the box. No one can be found who has seen it. Whether it disappeared before, during, or after the streams of people were admitted to the death chamber to view the body, is not known.

KEEP GOOD MEN OUT

Lloyd George Deplores Modern Political Campaign Methods

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Mr. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer speaking at a social gathering at Criccieth, his Welsh home, on the lot of ministers and their duties in the face of difficulties, said in part "Some people talk enviously about the minister's lot as if it were basking eternally in comforting sunshine. I can assure you that there is not much basking, but a good many burdens, not speaking of those who have attained to high position through family or other influence, but of those who had attained it by exertion and strength.

"I am told that in America these methods of attack are keeping sensitive men out of public life, although their services would have been invaluable to the state. I know many high-minded men in this country who have shrunk from such an ordeal, but somebody must face it, nay, more, it is the obvious path of duty for any man it is not right to shirk it.

"In spite of attacks on politicians individually, and as a class, every sensible person knows that they are an essential part of the machinery of good government in every democratic state. Politicians are essential to bridle the excesses of selfish strength; they are the priests of humanity."

WEDDING BELLS

BARR—BEECH

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the residence of W. J. Gilchrist, on Tuesday, Dec. 23rd, when Mr. Oliver Barr, of Galway, was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Beech, of Kinmount.

The ceremony was performed by W. J. Gilchrist, local evangelist.

Mr. and Mrs. Barr will reside in Galway.

HOPCROFT—JAMES.

At the Mark street church Christmas afternoon, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Cragg, united in marriage, Mr. Chas. J. M. Hopcroft, of this city, and Miss Annie Elizabeth Edwards, eldest daughter of Mr. Jas. Edwards, East City.

The groom was supported by Mr. W. H. Jones, of Toronto, and Miss Martha Edwards was bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopcroft will reside on James street, East City.

SEDGER-BYRNE

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Christmas morning at seven o'clock in George Street Methodist Church, when Rev. R. G. Peever united in the bonds of matrimony, Miss Helen Jean Byrne, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Byrne, George Street, to Mr. A. H. Sedgen, of this city, but formerly of Stratford. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few intimate friends.

The bride, who was given away by her mother, was charmingly dressed in a navy blue tailored suit and wore a black velvet hat and a corsage of white roses. They were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Sedgen left via C. P. R. 8:45, for Toronto, where they were entertained to a reception by the bride's cousin, Mrs. Shunk, Dundas Street. Later in the day they left for Stratford and will return to reside in this city.

SORRY TO LOSE THEIR TEACHER

Miss Mahoney Will be Missed From Douro School.

A very pleasant evening was spent at S.S. No. 5, Douro, on Monday, the 22nd, by the parents and friends of the children.

A very entertaining program was rendered by the pupils and was interspersed with gramaphone selections, which were greatly enjoyed by all present. A Xmas tree and a visit from an ideal Santa Claus were a source of delight to the children During the Program the teacher, Miss Loreto Mahony, who had previously tendered her resignation, was requested to take the platform and was presented with a handsome mantel clock, a piece of silver and a piece of china.

The presentation was made by Marie and Katherine McMurray, and the following address was read by Fred Crowe:

WIFE UNABLE TO APPEAR IN COURT

Louis Bourbonasis charged with assaulting his wife, by attempting to cut her throat with a razor, was again remanded yesterday by Magistrate Dumble, owing to the Crown being unable to proceed with the case, because the wife is not in a condition to give evidence.

G. N. Gordon is defending the prisoner.

Although the woman's hands were badly cut with the razor during the struggle when her husband it is alleged, tried to cut her throat, she is doing as well as can be expected. The children are at St. Vincent's Orphanage.

ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE WAS LAST OF THE GIANTS

Intellectual Leader of the First Half of the Nineteenth Century Made an Immense Contribution to the Sum of Human Knowledge — Found Natural Selection While Collecting In Malay Archipelago.

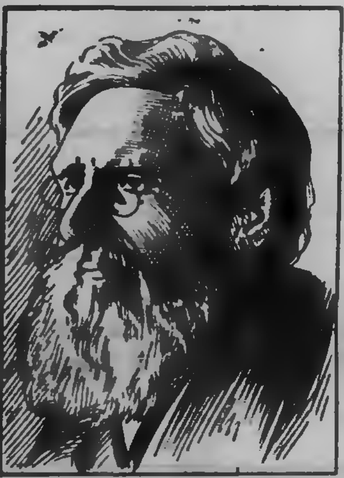
The closing years of the nineteeth century saw the ascendency of the financial giants. All over the world the development of the natural resources, the production of material wealth, vast combinations and accumulations of capital dominating industry and commerce were the achievements of the big men of the era.

The first half of the nineteenth century was the age of intellectual giants. Our own brilliant Emerson and his ilk were matched across the waters by Darwin and his contemporaries.

The last of the intellectual giants is gone—Alfred Russel Wallace, who shares with Darwin the honor of the discovery and formulation of the theory of evolution. Darwin is credited with postulating the theory: Wallace simultaneously and independently promulgated the same thought. No single discovery in the world of science in the past century equals that of the theory of evolution.

It was while collecting specimens and studying natural history in the Malay Archipelago in the '50's that Wallace followed a line of study which caused him to state the same principle of natural selection that Darwin stated in England about the same time. It was a remarkable example of two giant intellects following the identical line of thought to the same conclusion.

Another equally striking instance of the two minds working together occurred in 1858, when Mr. Wallace, muffled in blankets in a siege of ague and fever in the distant archipelago, suddenly thought out the theory of the survival of the fittest, which is one of the bases of the Darwinian philosophy. He wrote out the theory while still in the grip of the tropical fever and posted it to Darwin.



ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE.

"I never saw a more striking coincidence," wrote Darwin the day after he received the paper. "If Wallace had my manuscript sketch written out in 1842 he couldn't have made a better short abstract." Darwin was in a delicate position, as he wanted to do justice to Wallace and yet not slight himself. He finally put an abstract of his work and Wallace's letter into the hands of Sir Charles Lyell, and they were published together.

From the same Highland clan of which Burns wrote "Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled," came this intellectual giant of the nineteenth century. Born Jan. 8, 1823, at Usk, in Monmouthshire, Alfred Russel Wallace brought to the conflicts of brains the same combativeness his much-song progenitor brought to the field of arms. His pen was every ready for a joust on almost any topic. Vaccination, whose compulsion he opposed, Socialism, spiritualism, medical or ethical problems—they were all the same to him. He had his own independent ideas about them which he was ready to defend to the last drop of ink.

His immediately family was neither wealthy nor important. He had to scramble for his own living after he was fourteen. The beginning of his travels was with his brother, who was a land surveyor. With characteristic independence and initiative he later conceived the idea of penetrating the region of the Amazon in a scientific exploration, then a new thing. Into the unknown wilds of South America he plunged with Henry Walter Bates, a learned entomologist, and there they were lost from 1848 to 1852. The resulting book, "Travels on the Amazon and Rio Negro, brought Wallace instant fame.

Now a trained naturalist, through his own efforts, he fared forth to the Malay archipelago, where he spent what he calls the best and most productive twelve years of his life in scientific research. The works he published then resulted in giving him a permanent place on the roll of scientists.

Only a few weeks ago he issued a strong argument against the idea of eugenics, as proposed by latter day social students as means of bettering the race.

The honors of the scientific societies of the world were heaped upon him.

It may have been the mysticism of the Scot, but Wallace could not bring himself to believe that the mind of man was not subject to something higher and greater than mere mechanical and chemical forces. Said Wallace: "People sometimes say to me: 'That is not science. You talk of supernatural action.' But it is not supernatural at all. Everything that happens is nature."

Science Accepts the Divining Rod.

The first congress for establishing the scientific value of the divining rod, which met in Berlin recently, closed by placing on record its opinion that it was a scientific fact that a forked willow or hazel stick, or even an iron or steel rod, in the hands of certain persons, would indicate subterranean water sources and coal, potash and other mineral beds.

The congress decided that, in view of the mass of evidence secured during two days of successful practical experiments in the vicinity of the place where the meeting was held and elsewhere, under conditions which precluded any fraud, science could no longer deny the results that have been achieved.

Steps were taken at the closing session to organize an international society of men in all countries for the scientific study of the divining rod.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Eyes In Sickness.

The eye has a habit of registering the health. Thus a lack of luster, heavy lidded expression is generally the result of excessive fatigue or ill health; a dilated pupil usually means fever; a yellowish tint to the white of the eye bespeaks biliousness, while an extreme bluishness of the white is often an indication of impure blood or a scrofulous tendency.

There is no greater mistake than to try to brighten dull eyes with drugs or drops. Eyesight is too important to be tampered with, and even the common practice of putting a drop or two of cologne in the eyes to make them brilliant is injurious.

FOOD AND FUEL ARMIES.

What the Increasing Population of the World May Force.

According to Professor H. N. Dickson of the University college, Edinburgh, the world is beginning to feel the pinch of fuel and food. The professor told the scientists gathered at Birmingham to attend the annual meeting of the British Association For the Advancement of Science that the human race was in the position of a family which had occupied the same farm for centuries and had so increased in numbers as to outgrow the productiveness of the place, making a removal to other land necessary. Only in the case of the human family there is no means of migrating to another planet.

Wheat acreage, this learned geographer tells us, is not keeping pace with the increase of population, and "the crisis will be upon us before the end of the century." The supply of coal will last less than three centuries. The only course open to us, he says, is a stock taking of our resources and a redistribution of population, with an emphasis on the raising of food.

While Professor Dickson does not say so, his idea seems to be that as a nation tells off so many men to serve in its army of defense, so the world of the future will have to tell off so many men to serve as food raisers. Eventually we shall find that country planning will become as important as town planning—which seems to be reasonable enough.—Exchange.

Radium and Mesothorium.

A short time ago we were told authoritatively that radium has no value in the treatment of cancer. Now we learn that the German authorities are buying the whole available supply for this very purpose, and German medical practice is of the severely conservative kind. Over a million dollars has been voted by various German municipalities for the purchase of radium, and this is about the value of the whole existing supply. It seems that there is another product similar to radium and with the same medical value. It is called mesothorium, and its price is only $50,000 per gram. It is said that the Austrian government has a practical monopoly of both radium and mesothorium.

Handling a Husband.

There is a happy mean in everything. It is said that a shrewd old woman heard her married daughter say: "If my husband doesn't do such and such a thing, he'll find himself in hot water."

"My child," said the woman, "a man is like an egg. Kept in hot water a little while he may boil soft, but keep him there long and he hardens."

A Coincidence.

"I'm afraid, George," said his fiancee, "that you are going from bad to worse."

"Quite a coincidence," muttered George. "That's what Clara said when I threw her over for you."

To Meet or Otherwise

By Thomas Hardy

I.

WHETHER to sail and see thee, girl of my dreams,
Or whether to stay
And see thee not! How vast the difference seems
Of Yea from Nay
Just now! Yet this same sun shall slant its beams
At no far day
On our two mounds, and then what will the difference weigh?

II.

Yet I will see thee, maiden dear, and make
The most I can
Of what remains to us amid this brake
Cimmerian
Through which we grope, and from whose thorns we ache,
While still we scan
Round our frail faltering progress for some path or plan.

III.

By briefest meeting something sure is won;
It will have been;
Nor god nor daemon can undo the done;
Unsight the seen,
Make muted music be as unbegun,
Though things terrene
Groan in their bondage till oblivion supervene.

IV.

So, to the one long-sweeping symphony
From times remote
Till now, of human tenderness, shall we Supply one note,
Small and untraced; yet that will ever be Somewhere afloat
Amid the spheres, as part of sick Life's antidote.

This poem, forwarded to this paper by the London Sphere, is the latest work of the eminent English man of letters who has been awarded the Nobel prize for literature.

CHAS. PALMER'S NAME ONE TO CONJURE WITH

When Charlie Palmer, a strapping young Englishman of family, wealth, and position, was graduated from Oxford University, no doubt he dreamed of achievement, but it is safe to say that he had no idea of winning renown, wealth, and success by toting giant powder up a steep mountain trail.

This is how it happened, and you can tell for yourself whether Palmer is entitled to receive from the hardy miners and prospectors of the northwest the warmth of good fellowship that he does. Palmer was on the Pacific coast when the news of a new gold camp swept him, with others, northward toward Alaska. They followed Portland channel, which is the boundary between Alaska and British Columbia, to its head, and he and some others, including experienced miners and mine superintendents, came into possession of some claims which "looked good" to them.

The pay streak was high on the side of a precipitous mountain. When they got squared away at their job of developing what they had staked there was work which naturally fell to the hands of each of his associates. But for Palmer, who knew nothing about the fine points of prospecting, stoping, drifting, or sinking, there seemed to be nothing he could do unless he should turn cook. But that was because of his education.

The fact that he had a degree from Oxford blinded the eyes of all but Palmer to the obvious fact that if they were going to open up the claims they would need to have giant powder and food to do it. He looked too much like the debonair idler to be assigned to the drudging task, the herculean task of lugging powder up to the others who knew better how to do the actual work of drifting.

Twice and sometimes three times every day, until the veins were opened up and a prospect proved to be a rich certainty, he made the trip from the Bear River Valley up a winding, steep, and rough trail through the timber, over boulders, brush, and foot-log bridging roaring torrents to the first shaft, 2,400 feet above the valley, carrying packs that weighed from 80 to 120 pounds.

Day after day, and week after week, gradually increasing his loads, Palmer acted as a human dray, and development work at the summit went on without interruption. It was a close race for the four men of that "outfit" between their available cash and the grub it would buy, and the day when the vein, exposed in a gully, should be reached and cut. The mine proved to be one of the big ones of the British Columbia coast, and somewhere is one Charles Palmer, Esq., who has the money and the leisure to follow the tastes and the whims which were cultivated by his Oxford education. And to this day it is likely that he would do the trick over again, if the need should arise in the prosecution of the enterprise to which he had lent his hand and heart. He was in the game to win, and by his grit and sinew he and his partners did win.

Talk to the old-time prospector of the Portland channel district in camp or in their rendezvous in Stewart, and they will tell you that Palmer was a real man, an upstanding young giant, and the sort that any one could tie to. Yet Palmer's job was a monotonously toilsome one, not at all the kind that he had qualified for the classes at Oxford. He did the hardest thing there was to do in winning success in a region of mountains more precipitous and more full of peril to prospectors than any one encountered in the earlier camps of the Coeur d'Alene, the Kootenay, or the Cariboo. The packing over Chilkoot pass, which for so many years was accepted as the greatest test of human strength and endurance, was but child's play compared to the task which Palmer undertook and finished.

TO THE RATEPAYERS
— OF —
Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

There is one thing on which the Council and people should stand together. That is our Hydro-Electric and Municipal Power and Light policy. In their own interests the electors should assist in electing men who will see that policy through. A good beginning has been made. See that it is completed.

I am in with that policy as a citizen and will be—if elected—as an alderman, and shall be glad to receive your vote to place me in Council.

Yours respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

To the Electors of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer, I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City, it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years' experience as alderman, I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think, is proof that if elected, will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to, can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary, will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready-made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extention and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past, will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,
J. B. McWILLIAMS.

To the Electors of the West Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers and other interests in the ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavoring to consider all questions in a fair and businesslike manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With season's best wishes, I am,
Your Obedient Servant,

THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR FOR 1914.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate, for

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of municipal ownership and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

A Nova Scotian justice of the peace was once called on to draw a marriage settlement after the English fashion. Accordingly, he conveyed the property to trustees in trust to pay the income to Alice—the wife, for her life, and then to divide the property between such children as she might have by John—the husband, all of which was usual and correct, says Chief Justice Townshend, who tells the story, if he had not added the words: "His heirs, executors, administrators or assigns."

MRS. MEYNELL POPULAR

SHE STOOD SECOND IN POLL FOR POET LAUREATESHIP.

Britain's Sweetest-Voiced Poetess Surprised Everybody by Coming Next to Kipling as the Favorite Verse Writer of the Country—Has Written Five Volumes in All of Exquisite Lyrics.

During the summer, an English journal opened its columns to the public so as to ascertain whom they really wanted as Poet Laureate. Considering the circulation of the journal, not many were surprised when Rudyard Kipling came first with some 22,620 votes. Few wondered when Dr. Bridges, the destined victor, came eighth with only 710. But the astonishment of all was that Mrs. Meynell stood second upon the list—Alice Meynell, who had made no bid at any time for "The loud shouts of the crowd," who had spoken always with delicate subtlety and reticence, a "poet's poet" from first to last, quietly coming into her own with this popular vote of 5,598 ballots.

Mrs. Meynell has written many poems in her day, perhaps the most universally quoted being the poignant sonnet, "Renouncement." Less known, but in similar vein, is "After the Parting":

Farewell has long been said: I have foregone thee;
I never name thee even.
But how shall I learn virtues and yet
　shun thee?
For thou art so near heaven
That heavenward meditations pause upon thee.

Thou dost beset the path to every shrine;
My trembling thoughts discern
Thy goodness in the good for which I pine;
And if I turn from but one sin I turn
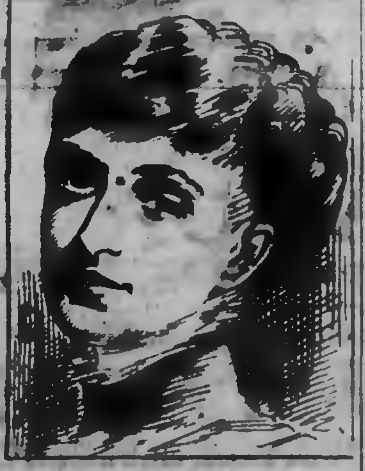
Unto a smile of thine.



ALICE MEYNELL.

How shall I thrust thee apart,
Since all my growth tends to the night and day—
To thee faith, hope and art?
Swift are the currents setting all
　one way;
They draw my life, my life, out of my heart.

This heart shaking little lyric is one of Mrs. Meynell's own favorites among her early work, and is vindication enough against those who complain of the aloofness of her poetry.

It is the aloofness merely of one who sees with far and deep vision, the aloofness of the watch towers of the world. It is the aloofness of one who has known the wound and its eventual healing. There is no lack of sympathy with the storm and stress of life in Alice Meynell. The modern mother, "giver of life, death, peace, distress," craving of her children "not so much thanks as forgiveness," is there, the modern poet, whose immortal fancies travel consciously

Down through long links of death and birth,
From the past poets of the earth.

Of modern Womanhood Mrs. Meynell has voiced always the noblest cry, the cry of high achievement and higher aspiration, clear as a Valkyrie, yet never strident, tremulous with the pain of earth, but never in any weak moment querulous. Toward love her attitude has been one of sublimated passion, at once ready to give, as to forego, all. She came audaciously near mingling sainthood and marriage in one poem when Cath- [illegible] to rebuke a certain modern Strephon, who said that a woman must lean or she should not have his chivalry."

She has written some five volumes of these little studies—"The Rythm of Life," "The Color of Life," "The Children," "The Spirit of Place," etc. —all marked with her own distinction of touch and with a discriminating insight most rare in these days of loose and easy thinking. George Meredith said of them: "They leave a sense of stilled singing in the mind. Her manner presents to me the image of one accustomed to walk in holy places and keep the eye of a fresh mind on our tangled world."

Apropos of George Meredith, no sketch of Alice Meynell could be complete without a word upon her absolute "genius for friendship." To her side it brought and held with more than hooks of steel, three of the historic literary men of the late nineteenth century: Meredith himself, Coventry Patmore and then Francis Thompson.

Mrs. Meynell's understanding sympathy cheered all the last years of Patmore's life. Through her the imperious old poet and philosopher was persuaded to sit for the great portrait by John S. Sargent, now in the National Portrait Gallery, London.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

Dangerously [illegible] that [illegible] Kidney Trouble [illegible], of Sudbury, Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, [illegible] suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself [illegible]. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes effected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessing of good health, which is due to this [illegible]."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. [illegible] a box at your druggist's. 16

Curious Pets.

During a visit to the outer Florida reef, away out on the very last sand bank that can, by courtesy, be called an island, I made the acquaintance of an old Indian fisherman, who had some of the most interesting pets it was ever my good fortune to see.

One was a large, red clawed hermit crab, that had taken up its home in an old fashioned, silver ornamented pipe, and at all hours of the day and night the clanking of the pipe could be heard, sometimes on the table, again on the wall, and often it would roll off and fall with a crash upon the floor, and then there would be a silence for awhile, until, perhaps, the hermit recovered from its surprise and astonishment.

The hermit was thoroughly a house pet, and no sooner did he venture beyond the door than he was in danger of being snapped up by two other pets —one a man-of-war hawk and the other a gray pelican.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Justified.

Mrs. Exe—How could you lie so to Mr. Dauber about that absurd picture he has at the exhibition? You told him his picture was worth the price of admission alone.

Exe—Well, Great Scott! The frame is worth more than 50 cents, isn't it?—Boston Transcript.

He—No: the only time I ever knew of his going out with her was once when the gas exploded.—Pick Me Up.

ST. KILDA SCARES.

Fake Stories of Destitution Often Emanate From Tiny Island.

An islet in the Atlantic—tiny, remote and gale swept—the very loneliest of the lonely group known as the Hebrides, off the west coast of Scotland, where the isolated inhabitants drop their letters into the sea, where greed and ingratitude flourish, and the women are the workers and the men are the shirkers. Such is the island of Saint Kilda, whose 70 inhabitants annually make it their business to scare a sympathetic British public by tales of mysterious woes and troubles, which they contrive, generally successfully, to send through to the mainland.

Usually the periodical scares have taken the form of starvation and poverty, but the latest story from the distressful isle, which only became known a week or two ago, was that the poor Saint Kildans had contracted the influenza.

So, in spite of previous cries of wolf, the Scottish office in London rightly got busy and induced the Admiralty to despatch immediately the cruiser Active with a special doctor and nurses and the necessaries for relief. When the cruiser got there the relief party found that the islanders had been very, very ill, but had recovered.

The peculiar part of this last appeal lies in the epidemic having risen so suddenly. The purser of the steamship Lochmaddy, which left Saint Kilda on the 13th of June, had made no mention of any illness on the island. Neither has the Rev. D. T. Mackay, who, when he landed later to conduct a communion service, was asked by the islanders to postpone his service on the score of urgent business. It was very soon after these two visits that the news came of the outbreak.

A few years ago the islanders were presented with a boat by charitable people in the south of England. Later it was found that the boat had been chopped up and used for firewood, the reason given being that the boat did not exactly suit their purpose. So they burned it in order that their kind friends might give them another and better one.

In 1902 King Edward sent a special message through Dr. Forshaw to the islanders. Dr. Forshaw took with him pounds of tobacco and sweets, coronation medals and mugs, beautiful artistic photographs of Their Majesties in their coronation robes, numberless bound volumes and magazines.

The Saint Kildans showed their appreciation of the gifts in the most peculiar manner. They disdainfully crushed up the coronation photographs, which cost half a guinea each, and eagerly grabbed at the tobacco and sweets. The coronation medals, which cost half a crown each, were afterward sold to visitors to the island for a penny. The books and magazines were thrown into the sea.

In May, of last year, there came another story of starvation, and a daily paper organized a relief expedition to Saint Kilda. They were supposed to be starving, but the Macleod of Macleod, the owner of the island, wrote to The London Times that only tea and sugar had run out.

The press was full of the woes of Saint Kildans, although the islanders not only had meal, potatoes and flour, but also 1,100 sheep and cattle.

The sea was full of fish to be had for the catching, while swarms of sea birds, good to eat, whitened the cliffs and countless numbers of eggs could be fresh gathered.

Since the habit of scaring has become common to Saint Kilda, ships touch the lonely isle just a little more frequently, but formerly it was isolated from the outside world for periods of six, seven, eight, nine and even ten months.

The Black Watch.

The splendid deeds performed by the old Black Watch in our many wars of the past cause one to hail with interest any information bearing on this distinguished regiment. It is therefore with feelings of satisfaction that we learn that records in manuscript of the independent companies of Highlanders which were raised between 1735-39 have been discovered among the thousand or more military manuscripts in the library of the Royal United Service Institution. This record is said to be carried on to 1819, and will enable the regimental historian to fill up a gap in the archives about which but little is known. The independent companies above mentioned were formed into a battalion in 1739, which was numbered the 43rd Regiment and retained the title Black Watch. It is to be hoped that this interesting document, which is now in the custody of the 1st battalion, will be published as early as possible, and the public thus given an opportunity of learning the earlier deeds of this gallant corps. — The Broad Arrow.

The Story of Van Speyck.

In "Holland of the Dutch" Demetrius Boulger retells as one of Holland's heroic episodes the story of Van Speyck.

"It was during the Belgian revolution, when General Chasse held possession of the citadel of Antwerp and a Dutch squadron held the Scheldt and secured his communications with Holland. In February, 1831, during a heavy gale a Dutch gunboat went adrift and grounded near the river bank. The Belgians determined to secure what seemed an easy prize and boarded the boat. The young commander, Lieutenant Van Speyck, had only thirty-one men under him. There were several hundred Belgians, and resistance was really out of the question, but he refused to haul down his flag. He opened the door of his magazine, and as the assailants rushed to seize him he fired his pistol into the powder, and the ship was blown to pieces with nearly every one on board."

JET, with its snappy, dark tones and glancing lights, is a fashionable detail in midwinter garb. One sees it on hats where it perhaps makes a spiked [illegible], encircling the [illegible] of a drooping brimmed hat of the picture type, or forms cabochon ornaments that have swinging tassels or fringes attached. Again it is to be noted [illegible] embroidery, on chiffon or lace corsages. Necklaces of it, long or short, are twisted about the neck forming a long [illegible] strand, [illegible] velvet or [illegible] Chantilly lace [illegible]. Slippers have [illegible] or buckles of it. [illegible] onyx pins and [illegible] even when it is not for mourning wear.

[illegible] and the old jet styles [illegible] of to-day [illegible] texture. [illegible] a whole gown of jet [illegible] it is [illegible] with other metals, [illegible] combination in [illegible]. In the [illegible] of [illegible] passementerie [illegible] used in collars, revers, vests, girdles and fringes, were the favorite ways of doing jet. When entire dresses were made of it they were generally of [illegible] scales [illegible] applied by hand embroideries [illegible] which to its [illegible].

A gown that [illegible] especially suited [illegible] has this note of pearls in the jet embroidery. [illegible] foundation skirt of black satin [illegible] undercorsage of [illegible] is posed [illegible] skirt [illegible] embroidered with jet and pearl beads. The corsage of this tunic is of black Chantilly, also jet and pearl embroidered, and [illegible] the tulle skirt are edged with strands of very large cut jet beads. Two strands of pearls encircle the waist, tie in a bow in front and fall in tasselled ends. The Chantilly descends over the tunic skirt, shaping into a point from which falls a large ornament of jet.

With a décolleté that discloses the whole curve of the shoulder and an illusion of sleevelessness that is the result of the very transparent tulle sleeves, another model is of jetted tulle in a modern overlapping leaf design. It is posed over a foundation dress of black satin, which shows a little near the hem and is bordered with a narrow jet band. The décolleté is edged with large jet beads, the filmy sleeve edges also. A cut jet belt encircles the high waist line. The only ornamentation is furnished by the note of white—a long strand of pearls wound twice about the neck, the pearl pendant pin and the pearl rings. A black and white paradise plume carries out this contrast in the hairdressing.

Shown in two views is an evening dress that has also this touch of white. It is built after the fashion now in vogue—a transparent corsage and a satin skirt. Over this black satin skirt is hung a jetted tulle yoke, pointed back and front. From this, in girandole fashion, hang festoons of large cut jet beads. The skirt is slashed, revealing a Chantilly lace petticoat. Where the train is caught back there is a pointed motif of jetted net resembling the tunic. Black Chantilly over pale pink chiffon composes the corsage; the touch of white is introduced in the white lace that shows below the high cut jet Empire belt. Sleeves of "angel" cut are weighted with jet ornaments.

In another gown of black charmeuse the skirt is edged with a band of jet. It is slashed in front; above the slash it is caught up in a slight drapery with a jet ornament. A charmingly original overtunic made of lattice work and festoons of jet beads is crossed by an artistically wound sash of the charmeuse, into which one brilliant color note—a red velvet rose—is placed. The shoulders are dimly discerned through white chiffon that glistens with rhinestones. Soft white tulle folds into the square décolleté made by the bretelles and sash.

Jet strands cross very transparent [illegible] shoulder ruffles, that apparently hold o[illegible]

a daringly low cut dress that has an edging of the large cut jet beads. This exceedingly new lines. This gown is of open effect is an answering note to the jetted tulle and has a curious apron front, odd shoulder bretelles. Under this apron couple of tulle ruffles and several b placed. The astonishingly undraped back is relieved somewhat, on closer view, by the extension band of white lace. Here the pearl necklace is also used to accentuate the contrast of black and white.

Tinsel Trimmings the Vogue.

GOLD and silver tissue is one of the new striking of the winter's fashion details. In past seasons tinsel has generally been confined to a gold or silver

Such gowns naturally call for gold or silver shoes. These were very noticeable at the horse show and opera opening nights. Stockings matched, of course; the slippers were either of kid or of woven gold or silver tissue, decorated with small bows of the material or brilliant buckle slides, or beaded.

The latest fashion in modish hats is those of gold lace. They go charmingly with elaborate afternoon and evening clothes that are touched up by these new metal trimmings. These hats are in all the new forms, winged bonnets, drooping brimmed "cloche" shapes, small hats with narrow brims rolled at one side and toques with rolled back brims that touch the crown sides.

They are made up absolutely transparently. Wire frames of gold or silver are covered with a layer of tulle or chiffon and the metal lace is stretched over the tinsel frame. The edges are often finished with a band of skunk or ermine fur, or fur is used to band the crowns. A long single tip of the fur color is often posed like an aigrette, or flowers of satin or chenille run vine-like over the brim.

One very pretty hat of this kind, a modified poke shape, had its gold lace crown and brim covered with a layer of black tulle, which softened the glint of the metal. Two circular ruffles, edged with narrowest gold braid, covered the brim. A wreath of flowers, old fashioned red and blue roses and bachelor buttons, alternated with gold leaves, encircled the crown and a handful of narrow black velvet ribbon loops hung from the wreath over one ear. A hat shape with very drooping brim was made of a heavy macramé crocheted gold lace. The brim edge had a narrow overlapping of skunk fur, and an old fashioned flower wreath of red and white roses trailed over the brim, sparsely in some

The extraordinary [illegible] fabrics makes the softest [illegible] ble, even though the dresses [illegible] with tunics, flounces and drape[illegible]

All the interest and the cha[illegible] to speak, of the present day toilette [illegible] to be in the skirt, as the corsages are [illegible] made more and more simple and [illegible] colleté.

The corsage, indeed, is nearly alwa[illegible] built on the same plan—a crossover fichu movement opening over a tulle guimpe, the kimono armhole with the lower sleeve also in tulle. A wide ceinture is tied at the back with a voluminous bow.

Sometimes the tulle is either replaced or adorned with costly lace and sometimes with narrow bands of fur outlining the neck opening.

As for the skirt, it is carried out in a thousand different and bewildering fashions. It may have flounces either very high or very low, or on the bias forming a spiral, or in a point making a retreating line at the back. Instead of flounces there may be a tunic movement of infinite variety or else skilfully combined draperies.

In any case, the object is to obtain a line giving width below the hips while keeping to the typical narrowness at the bottom of the skirt, which gives an affected and "précieuse" appearance to the walk which some people think is not without charm. It certainly allows the smart woman to show off her well shod feet and her ankles delicately covered with transparent silk stockings to match her costume.

It must be noted that old gold silk stockings worn with old gold shoes are the "dernier chic" of the season. This fashion goes admirably with the dresses of the same shade, which are becoming more and more popular every day.

A Great Medical Triumph.

The report that Dr. Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research has at last discovered the germ of rabies is of worldwide interest. It marks one more triumph of the remarkable institution founded by the generosity of a great American captain of industry. Professor Metchnikoff calls the discovery another milestone of bacteriological history. If the Japanese pathologist has solved the problem that has long baffled scientists his name will live in history. The horrible sufferings of the victims of rabies make this one of the most dreadful of all diseases.—Leslie's.

CHAOS IN BOUNDARIES.

Frontiers in South America Are an Uncertain Quantity.

The frontiers of Bolivia, like those of most South American countries, are very uncertain, and a map of South America made in Bolivia includes a vast portion of the level lands east of the Andes called the Chaco. A map of South America made by the Argentine Republic shows Bolivia as an entirely different country, with no Chaco within its boundary. Then a map of South America made in Peru includes a vast hinterland in Amazonia, while one made in Brazil shows the Brazilian frontier away over in the territory marked Peru on the Peruvian map, while the map makers of Ecuador and Colombia show an entirely different disposition of the lands at the headwaters of the Amazon from that described by the Brazilian and Peruvian map makers.

There is, however, a commission composed of Brazilians and Peruvians who are at the headwaters of the Amazon delimiting the frontiers of Peru and Brazil and incidentally rectifying the claims of Ecuador and Colombia. Meanwhile Bolivian soldiers are fighting Argentine soldiers on the Chaco, and so the question stands. In 1902 King Edward VII. delimited the frontiers of Chile and Argentina, but the Chileans thought he gave the Argentines too much, so they allow the adventurers and bad men of Chile to go into this disputed territory, and they swoop down from the hills and capture the cattle upon the Argentine plains just as the highlanders used to do in Scotland.—Peter MacQueen in National Magazine.

there on that May morning, a le more than fifty-eight years ago, that earliest of Upper Canadian trains set out on its first trip. There were plenty of passengers, and they were given a hearty send-off by a crowd that filled the station, and the vacant space adjacent to the terminal. There was no ticket office in the station, and so tickets were sold on board the train by the conductor, John Harvie, in later years an alderman of Toronto. At every station along the line crowds had gathered to see the novel sight and cheer the success that had attended "Mad Capreol's" scheme. Two hours after leaving Toronto, the train was at Aurora, twenty-nine and a half miles from the starting point.

The first passenger time-table of this earliest of Ontario steam railways was in handwriting, done in the neat, running commercial hand of the time. The first column contained the names of the stations along the line, which, including the two terminals, Toronto and Bradford, numbered sixteen. Of those that were on that time-table and are on the time-table in effect to-day, were Newmarket, Holland Landing and Richmond Hill. In the second column was the time of departure from each station, then the length of the stop, and lastly the distance between stations.

Leacock's Repartee.

Prof. Stephen Leacock was once criticising the following lines from Campbell's "Ye Mariners of England."

> The meteor flag of England
> Shall yet terrific burn;
> Till danger's troubled night depart,
> And the star of peace return.

"The star of peace," he pointed out, could not "return" after night "departed," for stars do not shine during the day.

"If you were struck hard enough between the eyes you would see stars any old time," suggested the witty member of the class.

"That is quite true," replied the professor, "but it would not be a 'star of peace'."

A Clever Retort.

During the last general elections Rev. J. J. McGaskill vigorously upheld the Reciprocity Pact in the Province of New Brunswick. At a meeting in Queen's County he was discussing the effect of the agreement on the price of various commodities.

"What about hay?" shouted an opponent.

"I'm discussing human food now," retorted the speaker, "but I'll come to your specialty in a moment."

To Abolish Middlemen.

The city of Calgary is considering a method of the public storage of foods in order to prevent periods of shortage with consequent high prices. A consumers' league, which has been instrumental in maintaining a public market, is interesting itself in the proposition. A prepared statement of the cost of foodstuffs in Calgary shows an average for 1913 five per cent. lower than for 1905.

Lloyd's Interest.

The liability of Lloyd's for shipping losses during the recent storms on the Great Lakes is calculated at $7,500,000.

JOHN GALT,
President.

G. H. BALFOUR,
General Manager.

The Directors have pleasure in presenting the Report showing the result of the Bank's business for the year ended 30th November, 1913.

The new Bank Act, as revised, went into force on July 1st. You will notice several changes in the form of our statement. Under Sec. 56 of the new Act, you are required at this meeting to appoint Auditors for the Bank, and to vote the amount of their remuneration.

A new set of By-laws will be submitted to you for approval and adoption if thought advisable. It will be necessary to change the date of our Annual Meeting from December to January in order that the Auditors may have sufficient time in which to complete their work.

Your Directors wish to place on record their appreciation of the excellent advice, helpful guidance and valuable work by the Bank's Committee in London, England.

It is with the deepest regret the Directors have to record the death of the Honorary President, the Honorable John Sharples. Mr. Sharples was for many years a Director, and for five years the honored and esteemed President of this Bank. Its present standing is largely due to his great interest in its welfare and sound judgment in business matters.

Mr. Wm. Price, of Quebec, was elected Honorary President, and Mr. Geo. H. Thomson has succeeded him as Vice-President.

The vacancy on the Board has been filled by the election of Mr. B. B. Cronyn, Vice-President of the W. R. Brock Company, Limited, a gentleman of long business experience in Toronto. We feel sure the judgment and influence of Mr. Cronyn will be of great advantage to the Bank.

During the past year thirty-one Branches and Agencies of the Bank have been opened in the several Provinces as follows: Ontario 4, Quebec 6, Alberta 2, British Columbia 5, Manitoba 4, Saskatchewan 10.

Three Branches in Ontario which were not giving satisfactory results have been closed.

The total number of Branches and Agencies is now 312.

The usual inspection of Head Office and of all Branches and Agencies of the Bank has been made.

JOHN GALT, President.

The President, Mr. John Galt, moved that the Report be adopted and printed for distribution among the Shareholders and addressed the Meeting as follows:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

In moving the adoption of the Directors' Report, I have an opportunity of placing before our Shareholders a review of general conditions in Canada as they present themselves to us. The financial statement will be dealt with later by the General Manager. I shall only say that this statement is satisfactory as it shows steady progress and also indicates the conservative policy, which, in my judgment, is characteristic of the management of the Bank.

The year 1913 has been a trying one both for borrower and lender. There has been a general feeling of uneasiness which has caused financiers to carry an unusually large proportion of their funds in a liquid form. This has curtailed the loaning power of all the Banks and has checked the encouragement of new business, but we have been careful to see that our customers have had the money necessary to carry on their legitimate trade, and I do not think we have given any of them reason to complain.

The capital available for investment in new fixed forms such as railways, canals, city and farm buildings, etc., is, of course, limited. Of late years it has been pretty well absorbed. It is clear that when the supply is exhausted or when causes operate to check it, expenditure in fixed forms must be curtailed. This point seems to have been reached, and Canada will have to mark time until confidence is restored and until the older countries, from whom we draw much of our capital, are in a position to again invest their savings and profits. The natural resources of Canada are so vast and so attractive that the capital necessary for their development will, undoubtedly be forthcoming when financial conditions become more settled.

The causes underlying the feeling of anxiety to which I have referred were world-wide, and, whilst some of them are now removed, we still feel that caution is advisable and that strictest economy in both public and private affairs is necessary.

Speculation in real estate is over for the present, but the demand for building sites must continue in a country where the population is steadily increasing, and holders of such property should not be apprehensive of this class of investment. That the inability of speculators to turn over their property has had so little effect on the general business of the country is largely due to the conservative and prudent action of Canadian Banks, for they have consistently discouraged and refused to finance speculative land operations.

CROP OF 1913.

The statistics which are at our command will be furnished by the Superintendents in their reports on the several Provinces. I may say, speaking generally, that the crop results have been satisfactory. In the three great wheat growing Provinces this has been a banner year. Not only has the yield been large, but the average quality has never been equalled, and the cost of harvesting has been unusually low owing to the magnificent weather we have enjoyed. This has, to some extent, offset the low prices which prevailed. Providence has indeed been kind to us, and that, too, at a time when we needed it most. The railways have done splendid work in handling the crop, and we have had few complaints of shortage of cars. We cannot, with our present facilities, expect much more wheat to be delivered at lake ports before the close of navigation than has been delivered this year, and the need of interior storage for our grain will be urgent for some time to come.

MIXED FARMING.

There is a marked increase in the number of livestock. Farmers are becoming more fully alive to the advantages they derive from this source and are realizing that their borrowing credit is greatly enhanced with their Bankers if they can show a good proportion of cattle in their assets, and banks should look with favor on loans for the purchase and handling of livestock.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Trade conditions in British Columbia have not been as bright during the year as we could wish. Conditions in the lumber trade have been unsatisfactory, and coal strikes on Vancouver Island, which have lasted for months, have thrown a great many men out of employment.

The fishing industry has had a good year, and the recent revision of the United States tariff, by which fish now enter that country free, will be of advantage to the trade.

The mining industry has yielded satisfactory returns, a very large increase in the production having taken place over the preceding year.

The fruit crop for 1913 has been a record one, the value of shipments from the Okanagan District alone being in the neighborhood of $1,400,000.

Railroad expansion has been active and about 2,300 miles was under construction during the year.

Stringent money conditions have checked many Municipal undertakings, and this, together with the closing down of lumber camps and completion of railroad work, will add to the number of unemployed during the coming winter.

Large harbour improvements have been undertaken at Victoria which have improved conditions to some extent.

In Eastern Canada, trade conditions have been good, and the crop results have been most gratifying.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

Crops have been of a good average and we have again to report a prosperous year.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

Along both shores of the St. Lawrence and in the Eastern Townships, conditions were favorable, and abundant crops were harvested in good order.

The lumber trade has experienced a good year, and the removal of the United States duty on lumber should stimulate trade.

MARITIME PROVINCES

Weather conditions have been satisfactory with the result that all crops have been above the average. The fishing industry has also experienced another profitable year.

GENERAL

GOOD ROADS.—The question of good roads is of paramount importance, and there yet remains a great deal to be done. We are glad to be able to report that the Legislatures of the various Provinces are giving their attention to this important question.

IMMIGRATION.— Reports continue to be of a satisfactory nature. Approximately 400,000 people have entered Canada during the year ending September, 1913. The immigration authorities report favorably on the class of these new settlers, and estimate them to be worth $1,000 per capita to Canada.

Whilst we believe trade conditions to be on a sound basis, and the financial position of Canada in a most gratifying condition, we still consider that it is the duty of this Bank to exercise caution and to discourage any attempts to undertake large commitments whilst conditions in Europe are readjusting themselves after the recent disturbance.

FINANCING OF MUNICIPALITIES.

From our point of view it is very desirable that the Provincial Governments should take action in regard to monies required for municipal expenditure. A commission should pass on all issues after expert examination of proposed expenditures. If these issues carried the guarantee of the Province and were sold under its auspices they would have a greatly enhanced value, and the saving to the community would be very large, both in the difference of value and in the supervision of expenditure exercised by the Government. Under the present system the initial financing falls upon the Banks because they have to await the sale of debentures, the disposition of which, in turn, often depends upon the ability and knowledge of men who have had little or no experience in financial operations, and who make their sales in a haphazard instead of a systematic manner In this way sometimes, for indefinite periods, large sums are tied up which should be employed in the general financial operations of the community.

The proposed legislation by the Province of Saskatchewan along these lines is, in my judgment, likely to prove of benefit.

NEW UNITED STATES TARIFF

The recent reduction in the United States tariff should result in obtaining a larger market for our products.

In conclusion, let me say that the figures which have been laid before you must be particularly gratifying to our Shareholders. We are now a large institution, and our growth and strength illustrate, to some extent, the general development of Canada. With your help we shall do our best to keep pace with this progress, and to build up a great Bank, which will be in touch with the needs of the country, and a credit to the whole Dominion.

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS.

The General Manager, Mr. G. H. Balfour, addressed the meeting as follows:—

Gentlemen,—Owing largely to the unsettled financial conditions which have obtained throughout the whole world during the year under review, business has not been normal and has caused bankers much anxiety. Conservative administration and caution have been adhered to, and whilst supplying our customers with their legitimate requirements, we have aimed at maintaining, at all times, a strong financial position in so far as liquid or immediately available assets are concerned.

The early marketing of the Western grain crops has had an important bearing upon collections in that section of the country in which we have large interests and is reflected in the increased volume of deposits.

Dealing with the figures in the Profit and Loss Account and in the Balance Sheet, I am pleased to say that after making ample provision for all necessary reserves, the net profits show an increase of almost 1 per cent. over those of 1912, being slightly over 15 per cent. on the paid-up capital.

In the opinion of the Directors this result has been deemed sufficiently satisfactory to justify the declaration of a bonus of 1 per cent. in addition to the regular dividend of 8 per cent. (2 per cent. quarterly). This bonus will be paid on the 1st March next to Shareholders of record as on February 14th, 1914.

Owing to the prevailing monetary conditions, prices of securities generally have declined during the year and it has been considered advisable to set aside the sum of $125,000, out of Profits, to a Special Reserve Account, to meet the depreciation in market values, of stocks, bonds and debentures, owned by the Bank as an investment.

$100,000 has been added to Rest Account, which now stands at $3,400,000.

$50,000 has been written off Bank Premises.

The usual contribution of $10,000 has been made to the Officers' Pension Fund.

$90,579.03 is carried to the new Profit and Loss Account, as against $75,483.76 brought forward from 1912.

Some changes will be observed in the classification of figures in the Balance Sheet; these were necessary to comply with the provisions under the revised Bank Act.

Deposits have increased by $8,952,000, which, considering financial conditions, is looked upon as very satisfactory. They now amount to $64,595,288.19.

Our immediate available assets are $25,000,000, or 34.59½ per cent. to liabilities to the public.

Current Loans in Canada have increased by $1,780,000 and now amount to $46,798,969.

Loans and discounts outside of Canada total $1,640,472 as against $779,000 last year.

Real Estate and other Bank Premises has been reduced by $150,000. Property and buildings acquired for the use of the Bank are now at once charged to Bank Premises.

Mortgages on Real Estate sold by the Bank are larger by $47,000 than a year ago, and overdue debts show an increase of $45,000.

In agricultural districts it is difficult to impress upon the farmer the necessity of attending promptly to his paper at its maturity, especially when weather conditions are favorable to plowing and other agricultural pursuits. Bank Premises have increased $200,000. It is found necessary to erect a number of buildings every year for our own occupation, when suitable premises cannot be leased, every effort being made to provide comfortable accommodation for members of the staff at country branches.

The total assets of the Bank are now over $80,000,000, as against $69,400,000 in 1912, showing a substantial expansion in the growth of the Institution during the year.

PROGRESS OF THE BANK.

During the year 3 Branches were closed in Ontario.

The total number of Branches and Agencies is now 312, as follows:— Alberta, 48; British Columbia, 20; Manitoba, 50; Saskatchewan, 90; Ontario, 89; Quebec, 12; Maritime Provinces, 2; London, Eng., 1.

Since closing of the year, we have also opened a West End Branch in London, Eng., in the Haymarket, corner of Panton street, and at Smithers, B.C.

In connection with the very satisfactory manner in which the railway companies have carried out the grain from the Western Provinces this year, it may be interesting for you to know that up to December 1st the following quantities of grain have passed Winnipeg for the head of the Great Lakes, namely, 90,000,000 bushels wheat, 32,500,000 bushels oats, 1,500,000 bushels barley, and 6,500,000 bushels flax.

Before sitting down, I desire to bear testimony to the efficiency and loyalty of the Staff, not only of the Executive Officers, but the whole Staff of the Bank, to whose energy and ability much of the success which has attended the operations of the past year, is due.

Mr. Geo. H. Thomson, the Vice-President, seconded the adoption of the Report, which was carried.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. T. Harry Webb, C.A., E. S. Read, C.A., and C. R. Hegan, C.A., were elected Auditors of the Bank. The ballot was unanimous and these gentlemen were declared elected.

It was moved by Hon. W. H. Montague, P.C., seconded by Mr. E. H. Riley, of Calgary, that the thanks of the Shareholders are hereby tendered to the Honorary President, President, Vice-Presidents and the Directors of the Bank for their valuable services during the year.—Carried.

Mr. G. H. Balfour, General Manager, Mr. E. O. Denison, of Minnedosa, and Mr. H. J. Pugh, of Virden, replied briefly on behalf of the Staff.

The Scrutineers reported the following gentlemen elected as Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. Wm. Price, John Galt, R. T. Riley, Geo. H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, W. R. Allan, M. Bull, Hon. Samuel Barker, P.C., M.P., E. E. A. Duvernet, K.C., Stephen Haas, Lt.-Col. John Carson, F. W. Heubach, B. B. Cronyn, Wm. Shaw. The meeting then adjourned.

At a subsequent meeting of the newly-elected board, Mr. Wm. Price was elected Honorary President, Mr. John Galt, President, Mr. R. T. Riley and Mr. Geo. H. Thomson, Vice-Presidents.

DAN CRAWFORD RETURNING TO THE HEART OF AFRICA

Will Stay in Land of "No Christmas" Until Death — Read Funeral Sermon Over Grave of Livingstone—Has Lived 23 Years With Savages

Chicago, Dec. 29.—"This is my first Christmas on earth for a quarter of a century. And it is going to be my last; although I shall not die for many years yet!"

These words are of Dan Crawford, the most mysterious of all African missionaries—the unheralded missary of 10,000 adventures.

Yet he has been almost unnoticed by newsparpers in his short trip across this country, though critics are hailing him as "one of the most original and captivating speakers who ever stepped on a platform, and perhaps the greatest of African explorers."

"Just one brief year I have had," Crawford mused, when I came to interview him, "one year among my living white brothers of the civilized world. Now I am going back to the dying millions of darkest Africa! Those savage souls out there on the marches on the very dimmest recesses of the dark continent, are calling me! And there I will live, among the canibals—live till I die!

"A thousand miles it is, away from the nearest outpost of civilization, and a few miles nearer than any other white man lives to the black heart of Africa—the post which, if it really be 'on earth' at all, is at least, as great Livingston called it, 'the uttermost spot of the earth, and the nearest place to the bottomless pit!"

Like Cecil Rhodes.

"More than twenty-three years ago I went to Africa—now that Christmas is over I am returning to Africa. I am on my way to die there!"

Here is as much of Crawford's life story as he vouchsafed me, in answer to my query:

"Why this strange purpose of returning forever to the deepest fastnesses of darkest Africa?"

"I went to Africa," be said, "to be cured of consumption, as Cecil Rhodes did. And, like him, I found wealth in Africa—not his wealth of gold and ivory—but the riches of human life awaiting the Gospel. 'God is angry,' the poor savages told me, 'because He is silent!' So I am going back to them to take them His word."

V. CORKERY PRESIDENT OF ST. PETER'S T.A.S.

At the regular meting of St. Peter's T. A. S. held yesterday afternoon in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Pres.—V. Corkery.
1st Vice-Pres.—V. J. McEldery.
2nd Vice.-Pres.—J. Condon.
Rec.-Sec.—V. McCabe.
Fin.-Sec.—J. Drain.
Guard.—D. Sheehan.
Trustees—D. Donaghue, John Dwyer.

J. H. Pirmeau, who is at present ill, has filled the position of Treasurer for a number of years and in recognition of his service in the past, this position is held open awaiting his return.

Judging from the new list of officers, St. Peter's T. A .S. should make some rapid strides during 1914. A pleasing feature is noted in the fact that the young men are taking hold of the work.

Gift of Two Pictures

The meeting was also marked by a presentation by the Trustees of two splendid pictures, one of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and the other of Very Rev. Dean McColl. These pictures which were executed by the Roy Studio, will be used to decorate the Assembly Hall in the Lyceum.

The Society intends celebrating the 14th Anniversary of its organization on January 9th. Mr. C. F. Foy of Perth has been secured as speaker for the evening. The subject will be one fitting the occasion, "Temperance from a layman's point of view." In Mr. Foy's hands, being one of Ontario's foremost speakers, this subject will no doubt be well taken care of. The date of its foundation was January 8th, but the anniversary will take place on Jan. 9th, in order to make it convenient for Mr. Foy.

CANON DAVIDSON LOSES HIS BROTHER

Death Came Suddenly as He Was on His Way to Mexico.

Sympathy will be extended to Rev. Canon Davidson, who has received word of the death of his youngest brother, William E. Davidson, who died suddenly on Christmas Day, while he was en route to Mexico City. A sudden attack of neuralgia of the heart was the cause of death.

Despite the sorrow which had come to him in the midst of the Christmas season, Rev. Canon Davidson took the services as usual, at St. John's Church, on Sunday.

The late Mr. Davidson was Secretary of the Pearson interests in Mexico.

Mr. Davidson left Toronto for New York and Mexico on December 18, when he was in excellenth ealth, except for a slight attack of rheumatism. The suddenness of his death is attested by the fact that the family received Christmas greeting sent by cable on Christmas Eve.

Mr. Davidson was a son of the Rev. Canon Davidson, of Uxbridge. His parents were prominent in the Church of England, and were of New Brunswick United Empire Loyalist stock. He received his schooling in the Uxbridge Public and High schools, and T. C. S., Port Hope, and commenced his business career in the Bank of Nort America. He was manager of a branch at Rosthern, Sask., when he resigned from the bank six years ago and took the the secretaryship of the Mexican Tramways Co.

As a sportsman Mr. Davidson followed had one recreation as member of the R.C.Y.C., of Toronto.

In 1908 he married the eldest daughter of Sir Charles Moss, who survives him with one young son. He also leaves two brothers and four sisters, namely, Rev. Canon J. E. Davidson; N. F. Davidson, K. C., Toronto; Mrs. J. Ketchum, Port Hope; Mrs. C. A. Gossage, Hespler; Mrs. H. H. Lossemore and Mrs. H. C. Roe, Toronto.

On the arrival of the S. S. Mexico at Vera Cruz, the body will be forwarded to Toronto for burial.

APPEAL TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL

Canadian Press Despatch

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—At a meeting of the Ontario Bar Association today, Sir Allen Aylesworth in the course of his address, came out flatfooted in favor of continuing the right to appeal to Privy Council. Inevitable circumstances, he said, made English lawyers and judges superior to their brothers in Canada and as Canadian judges are the King's judges, an appeal is one from the King's judges to the King in Council.

MRS. M. LONERGAN FRACTURED WRIST

The many friends of Mrs. M. Lonergan, 222 Perry Street, will regret to learn of a very painful accident which befell her on Saturday. While walking along Aylmer Street near the G. T. R. crossing she slipped on the ice and fell. Some passersby assisted her home and medical aid was summoned. It was found that she had broken her wrist in a very bad manner and it will take weeks before Mrs. Lonergan can have the use of her arm.

ADDITION TO THE HOSPITAL

Public Invited to Call on New Year's Day.

The new addition to the Nicholl's Hospital, will be open for inspection of the public on New Year's Day.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY

A special committee has been appointed to arrange for the social in the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe Street, New Year's Eve, for the members and friends of the St. George's Choral Society. Some secrecy has been observed as to the actual procedure, but something novel no doubt, will be on the cards.

TWENTY SHOPS AND HOUSES ARE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Firemen at Montreal Had But One Line of Hose in Use

Canadian Pres Despatch.

Montreal, Dec. 29.—Fire broke out to-day at the corner of Ontario and St. Hubert streets. The firemen could pour one feeble stream on the blaze which made rapid progress in half an hour destroying twenty shops and houses, rendering several families homeless.

CONTRACTOR STARTS WORK AT ORIENTAL

Thos. Elphgrave, the local contractor, has the contract for alterations at the Oriental, which were commenced this morning. The plans call for the bath in a large number of rooms and other arrangements necessary to an up-to-date hostelry. A new floor is being laid in the dining room, adding to that room a distinctive appearance.

NO LAST MINUTE MOVES MADE AT NOMINATIONS

Ratepayers Show Great Interest in Proceedings at Council Chamber---Aldermen Buller and Gillespie and Mr. Hartley for the Mayoralty

There were no big surprises at the City Council Chamber this morning, when nominations were registered for the Mayoralty, Utilities' Commissioner and the Board of Education. There was however, a change from the general rule as the Chamber was crowded with ratepayers and an attentive hearing was given to the addresses of the candidates.

The nominations were as follows:

FOR MAYOR

G. A. Gillespie

Nominated by E. N. McWilliams and A. Brown.

John J. Hartley

Nominated by David Moore and R. G. Kingan.

Wm. Buller

Nominated by John Edgar and Wm. Lytle.

For Aldermen

The list of aldermanic candidates previously published was not increased, as shown by the nominations in the five wards as follows:

SOUTH WARD

Wm. S. Robinson

Nominated by T. R. Kennedy and O. Carver.

Jos. Saunders

Nominated by Wm. Collins and Wm. Kemp.

CENTRE WARD

A. H. Stratton

Nominated by E. F. Mason and R. G. Kingan.

F. H. Dobbin

Nominated by T. E. Bradburn and D. Moore.

H. P. Morgan

Nominated by J. W. Miller and R. G. Detcher.

WEST WARD

J. W. Worth

Nominated by John Williams and D. Cremence.

Jas. B. Brown

Nominated by John Best and John Williams.

Jos. J. Duffus

Nominated by W. G. Morrow and C. A. Amys.

NORTH WARD

W. J. Johnston

Nominated by H. C. Stabler and V. Eastwood.

W. T. Holloway

Nominated by D. W. Porter and S. A. Oke.

EAST WARD

J. C. Anderson

Nominated by Wm. Scott and Jas. Ellis.

Thos. W. Oke

Nominated by Jos. Sucee and A. Fluke.

FOR UTILITIES' COMMISSIONER

Proposed by J. J. Turner, Jr., and Robert Hicks.

W .H. Hill

Proposed by Dr. Holloway and D. H. Moore.

Dr. Burnham

Proposed by D. H. Moore and R. Denne.

Col. J. W .Miller

Proposed by J. B. McWilliams and R. B. McGill.

Claude Rogers

Proposed by J. J. Turner Jr., and S. A. Oke.

John H. Smith

Proposed by R. F. MacGregor and W. Maniece.

J. M. Greene

Proposed by A. Brown and H. P. Lindsay.

The new men for the Board of Education are Messrs Claude Rogers, manufacturer; John H. Smith, foreman; and J. M. Greene, merchant. All the members whose terms expire with the year were nominated.

Candidates Speak

From eleven to twelve o'clock the candidates were given the floor, each speaker taking ten minutes.

Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie said that personally, he would like to have seen Mayor Bradburn remain in the chair.

As a candidate he realized the responsibility. He believed that while in council he had done his fair share of what was in the best interests of the city. Speaking of new industries and improvements, he said a great deal of money had been spent but now the city should expect to get some of the money back. He believed the streets would be further improved next year.

As for the Hydro, the system would be pushed through as quickly as possible, should he be elected. It had worked out in other cities, and with the assistance of Mr. Beck the difficulties would be overcome.

The high tax rate, he believed, was caused by the development of the city. "We should now have quite a revenue brought in by the industries and by the people brought here as a result of the industries," said Ald. Gillespie.

The Board of Education had made heavy demands. They had first call and the council had no authority over the Board. He believed the money had been well spent by the Board. The other departments all brought about increased expenditure. As a member of the council for five years, he placed himself in the hands of the people on his record. His business interests were in the city and he contributed to the taxes.

He had been through all stages of labor and he knew the position of the laboring man. If he should be elected, he promised the workingman as fair consideration as all others.

Ald. Wm. Buller

Ald. Wm Buller referred to the expenditures made. There had been no expenditure that the ratepayers could find fault with. "My claim is, I was born here, raised here, and I am a workingman. In the council, he felt he had done his duty, and he expected to be elected Mayor. He had done his part to bring the new manufacturing concerns to Peterborough.

His platform would be to use economy. He was in close touch with the city. His conduct had been above board.

Equalization of taxation; municipal government by Commission; free markets were questions which Ald. Buller believed were worthy of consideration for the future.

He would know what was required of the laboring man. He would thank the electors to place him at the head of the polls.

J. J. Hartley

Mr. Hartley said he was not seeking the position simply by the honor, and if he thought he could not be of service to the city he would not offer himself for the position. All he had was invested in the city, giving work to laboring men and mechanics. He had put his money into building.

"There's no place like Peterboro to me; my earnest desire is to see the city progress right along."

He believed the city's taxes to be as high as any place. The assessment had also increased year by year. When a slump comes, like that in the West, then the high rate of taxation is felt. "It's all right to go ahead, but there's a possibility of us spending too much money.

"This thing has got to come to a stop sometime. The city should be guarded as a man guards his own interests. There's no necessity for borrowing and borrowing money.

He was in favor of permanent improvements. This should have been started earlier.

Mr. Buller and Mr. Gillespie had had the opportunity to do the things, they referred to. If elected he would do his utmost to guard the interests of the city.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams.

Mr. McWilliams reviewed the Hydro-Electric policy for the city. He believed the question of value would be left to arbitration. Then he favored working up a scheme for submission to the ratepayers to decide what should be done. He understood one of the commissioners had not been heartily in favor with the Hydro-Electric and it was necessary to have a member who was. Mr. Hicks, his opponent, had a large business and he would have to neglect his own or the commissioners' business. What that would be, he would leave to the electors.

He cited cases where properties were assessed at a low figure, when the selling price was away up. Wealthy men, he claimed, were not paying their just rates.

He had always been in favor of municipal ownership. He had years ago, made the city the offer for the Burleigh Falls power and the speaker went on to tell of how he had acted in the interests of the city. The city could have had water powers, also the waterworks dam, where power is now generated for the Canadian General Electric Co.

When in Council, he had raised the wages of laboring men and had reduced the time. Also as arbitrator with Archdeacon Casey, he brought about an increased wage for the men on the canal. He had always had the support of the laboring men.

It was strange that there should be any shortage of water. Why should the parks and lawns be burned up? The ratepayers had first claim on the water and should be supplied with all the water necessary and at a cheap rate. Water should also have been brought from Chemong Park, for a supply of pure water. The commissioners should have taken that matter up. He appealed to the electors through his record in the Council.

Robert Hicks.

Mr. Hicks likened the Board of Water Commissioners to a Board of Directors, and the ratepayers as shareholders. He refused to be a candidate with the promise to reduce the rates, but he asked support on the grounds that by careful management the waterworks would automatically lower the rates. He had helped to keep the "hide" on Hydro. What was wanted was the power at cost to the people. There should be no uncertain sound as to where the candidates stand on the important question of Hydro.

"The reason you are paying 25 mills is because the sins of the fathers have been visited on the children," was his statement in regard to the taxes.

He felt his past record had been to keep the way open for any great enterprise. He had given his best and he would continue to do so if elected to the Utilities' Commission.

"The men who employ labor and deal fairly with labor should be supported by labor," was Mr. Hicks' argument in speaking of the representations of the laboring man.

Trades and Labor Council

Referring to the nomination of Mr. Hartley, David Moore, President of the Trades and Labor Council has this message for the electors.

In placing Mr. Hartley's name before you, I do so believing that if elected, he will fill the office in an efficient and business-like way and to the entire satisfaction of the electors. Peterboro has reached that point in its history when with good management, steady growth and progress may confidently be looked forward to. It is therefore important that we elect able and honest men to fill the offices this day open for nomination. Those who fill these offices, of course, have many interests to consider, but "the greatest good to the greatest number" should ever be the guiding rule of "those in authority over us." It goes without saying, that by far the greatest number of our citizens are of those people known as workingmen. I consider it fitting then, that a man representative of the vast majority of our citizens should be honored by a term in the Mayor's chair. Mr. Hartley has been intimately associated with the labor movement in Peterboro for many years, and it has been my pleasant duty to place his name in nomination. He is a man whose interest is centered in our city and who is, I am sure, zealous in the work of advancement of Peterboro. He is a successful business man and will look well after the present needs of the city. If, as some of the literature of the campaign would seem to suggest, the office of Mayor is to be regarded as a recognition of faithful services at the council board, then the claim of Mr. Hartley is equal to any of the candidates, for he has served ten years as an alderman, and in addition, was for fourteen years a member of the board of education. During the past six years in which I have been associated with Mr. Hartley in the labor movement, I have found him a man of good business ability, upright and honorable at all times, and if elected, I feel confident he will give a good account of himself in the Mayor's chair.

At the close of the nominations in the Centre Ward, Mr. Dobbin briefly thanked his nominator and seconder and the returning officer, Mr. McGrath.

Mr. Stratton read from a statement, a number of paragraphs outlining the basis of his candidature and also thanked his friends and the Returning Officer.

NOMINATIONS FOR SMITH COUNCIL

Nominations to-day for Smith Township Council were as follows:

Reeve—J. H. Garbutt, F. McKee.
Deputy Reeve—Fred Cann, Fred McKee, J. C. McConkey.
Councillors—J. A. Jobe, Wm. Brown, Robert Telford, Robert Northey, Fred Cann.

A CASE OF TWO HARRY MORGANS

In answer to an enquiry made to The Review it may be explained the Mr. H. P. Morgan who is a candidate for alderman in the Centre Ward is not Mr. H. W. Morgan, so long one of the aldermen, and representative from the East City. The first Mr. Morgan was until recently of the Peterboro Hardware Co. The latter is, and has been for many years, the efficient and capable superintendent for the Peterboro Canoe Co., and lives in the East Ward.

NINE O'CLOCK TUESDAY NIGHT

Candidates Must Declare Themselves by That Hour.

Candidates for the Mayoralty, Council and Utilities' Commissioner have up to nine o'clock Tuesday night, to sign their declarations with the City Clerk. For the Board of Education, candidates have up to nine o'clock, Tuesday night, to give notice of their resignation.

POLICE COURT

The Andrews-King case was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble this morning at Police Court.

S. T. Medd, of the firm of Hall, Medd and Davidson, acted for the defendant, Mrs. King. Mr. Wm. Andrews, the plaintiff, claimed that garbage had been placed, contrary to the by-law 1654, in a lane. Magistrate Dumble contended that there was nothing of the nature of the offense mentioned in the by-law and dismissed the case.

A MUNICIPAL COAL YARD SPOKEN OF AS POSSIBLE

Difficulties to be Met With in Establishing and Running It.

The question has been asked of candidates for municipal honors as to whether they would favor the establishment by the municipality of a municipal coal and fuel yard, of a place where coal and fuel would be sold under direction of the city and at such prices as would be found advisable, assuming that what is now deemed a large profit taken by the regular dealer, would be at the benefit of the consumer. And assuming that such a project could and would be carried on at a less expense, all around, than by the local dealer. It is thought that collective buying as well as collective bargaining could be made a success.

Without committing anyone to an assent to the proposition it might be well, on the face of it, to examine the conditions as to such fuel trade, as probably would be met with in the hands of a municipal force and under city management. The object to be attained is to bring down the price of coal, nd if not bring it down at least to steady and regulate it, possibly to prevent it going higher. As fuel is a necessity there is nothing to interfere with it costing us ten dollars a ton instead of seven. And it will likely reach that price if something be not done. The hardest pinch is on the man who may not put in his fuel in the summer, at summer prices. Being a monthly tenant, hem ust not stock up, but must buy in limited quantities.

It looks at first glance as if the field of selling coal was an open to anyone as the fish business. But it is mighty restricted. Restricted for reasons. Being in the hands of a trust, practically, the dealer must bow to all regulations. If he or they do not do so, then he or they get no coal. Or get it at difficulty.

What are the hindrances to be met with in the way of starting up a municipal yard. First, it must be ascertained if there be similar yards in operation, and do they pay their way. Do they make a difference in cost of coal to the consumer. If they do not pay their way, if they do not lessen the cost of fuel, then there is no object in establishing one. What is happening in other places, or what has taken place will likely happen here.

It would be no use fitting up a yard, getting teams and vehicles and a staff for one year's service. And if for several years then a very vital matter is a supply of coal, to be ensured as coming forward as a permanent thing. That implies a contract for a term of years, and who will back such a contract. It may be taken as a fact that none of the large companies now supplying coal to anyone of the five dealers now doing business in the city, would care to supply the city with fuel to be sold again. If they did so, they lose a positive customer for one whose orders might not prove so permanent. Better stay with Paul than fool with Peter.

So a supply must be looked for from one of the mining firms known as independent dealers. Several of these are fairly large firms, but many are smaller and all are dependent on the same lines of transportation, the railroads. Now these same railroads, leading from the mines, happen to own many of the mines and require a rake-off. If one buys their coal, and it is shipped over their road, in their cars, well and good. But if the coal comes from a rival mine—then look out. Any obstruction is looked on as good business. Could a permanent supply be ensured for a municipal yard.

There is no doubt that if a municipal yard were set up, and sales begin at a lower price than existing rates that local dealers would sell at the lower prices. They would be helped out in this by the mines' supply, who might place at disposal, coal at a reduced figure for purposes of fighting the municipal competition. That would be good business. It is the regular thing. The local dealer would not loose, he goes to the fellow higher up.

Having brought down the price of coal, how long can it be kept down. That is the unknown quantity. Suppose the local man, under instructions and some sort of "gentleman's agreement," goes the municipal yard one better and cuts under. May cut under so far and so keenly as to leave the municipal yard running at a loss, or selling no coal. Either alternative would be bad, and either is quite likely to occur. It is all good business.

Suppose the yard to be opened for business, and that the price of cial is lower in the municipal yard than at the local dealer. Manifestly if there were a difference of fifty cents a ton, every one would seek to buy there. And it would take a pretty big yard to supply all who would want to buy. If the yard and supply and facilites for delivery were not large enough to supply all the trade coming to it, who is to determine what man or men, families or institutions shall be supplied at the reduced prices. Some one must go without. If we say supply the workingman in preference to the merchant, then we set up a class distinction that would breed infinite trouble. All must be treated alike.

If the city yard brought down the cost of fuel,—and it would be of no use unless it did,—and that cost price became the standard price for the city, is it not fair to assume that people who have been in the past supplied by local dealers, would stay with that dealer, as nothing would be gained by going to the city yard. Loyalty, when it comes to buying coal, is measured by the price. It is the money that counts.

If a strong body of citizens would pledge themselves to support a municipal yard, no matter whether the price at that yard went up or down, a body sufficient to warrant the investment of a plant and contracts adequate for a number of years, then something could be done. But what does it amount to anyway? The average man, to whom the cost of coal is a fairly serious item, burns not more than seven or eight tons per season. Even a lessening of price by half a dollar would only mean four dollars at the most. That amount is pretty nearly blown in on picture shows, church bazaars, roller rinks, and general diversion by the family during the season. To get even something must be cut off. The fact that we can keep hockey rinks, picture shows, skating rinks, tango teas, curling rinks and other amusements, shows that there is just so much loose money lying about to be absorbed. A lot of it should go into the coal scuttle, and give as much heat value as could be extracted from it.

The municipal coal yard project will have some material value in this district just so soon as the Trent Canal is open from the front to this city. Then coal can be brought in, coming up the canal from Trenton, and across the lake from Oswego, and to Oswego along the American glorified Erie canal. Without paying one cent of tribute to the C. P. R. or the G. T. R. Water freight is less costly than rail. Our friends of the Vermont Marble Co., knew this when they placed their new plant and yards on the shore of the lake. Stones as freight will cost less than rocks by rail.

If some effort is to be made, and it should be made, with regard to coal fuel, it can be quite profitably done in some concerted action looking to see that the dealer gives value for the money he exacts.

As it is at present, the citizen who pays for a ton of coal gets an assortment of slate, bone, rock and shale under the name of coal. He extracts a little heat, to be sure, but is irritated to see the wads of stuff that is left on the shovel. In no other business is value received such a farce as in the coal supply. If the printer supply a batch of paper with an error, it is fired back and has to be done over. If the contracting carpenter makes a misfit of a window frame, he has to alter it or make good. If the grocer sends bad butter, one can deposit it on his counter with remarks. The coal dealer sends you what he says he has. That he took it from a firm that said it was the best they had, and the mine says to take it and be lucky to get it. The local dealer professes his regrets and knows that the value is not there, but avers he can't help it. It is pretty much the case of the city man who says he buys eight tons of coal, burns it in his alleged furnace, and carries out ten tons of ashes and clinkers. He lets the smoke go.

TWO KILLED WHEN TRAIN BROKE IN TWO

Express Messenger and Brakeman Crushed to Death in Wreckage

BOTH LEAVE FAMILIES

Express Crashed Into Engine and the First Half of Freight

North Bay, Dec. 29.—Particulars of an accident on Friday in which David Brown, express messenger, and T. Jobin, brakeman, were killed, has been received. An eastbound freight was climbing a grade at Ridout, when it broke in two and the engine started on with the front half, but before the siding was reached a westbound express crashed into it head-on.

The express car was smashed to kindling and Brown was crushed to death. Jobin was on top of a freight car which collapsed, and he fell into the wreckage, to be ground to death in the mass of twisted timber and steel. The engine crews jumped and were saved.

Brown was from Brighton, where remains will be taken. He leaves a wife and three children. Jobin who lived at Chapleau, also had a wife and three children.

CONGRATULATED ST. PAUL'S CONGREGATION

Owing to the illness of the Rev. Robert Pogue, the service at St. Paul's yesterday was conducted by the Rev. Robert Laird, of Toronto, chairman of the Board of Finance on the General Assembly.

The speaker made an earnest appeal for the support of missions. Mr. Laird congratulated the congregation for their valuable assistance in the late canvass for Mission and Church Funds.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, DEC. 29, 1912.

THE DIGNITY OF FARMING.

"THERE IS NOTHING which carries more dignity than the tilling of the soil; but, as farmers, we have not respected our own calling enough." These words were uttered by one of the men from the west who spoke at the farmers' banquet the other day in Peterborough. And from the applause with which they were received the farmers present were in hearty agreement with the speaker.

One of our newspapers the other day, The Montreal Herald, commenting upon a similar gathering, remarked:

"One hundred farmers attended a banquet at St. Catharines, Ontorio, last night. Every one of them appeared in full evening dress. The farmer, in his stocking feet and with timothy seed in his whiskers is getting scarcer and scarcer every day."

There is no particular indignity in a farmer having timothy seeds in his whiskers. Perhaps one of the reasons for the absence of these seeds in the modern farmers' beard is in the fact that the average farmer in these days is clean shaven.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING REDUCES TAXATION.

AS AN EXAMPLE of the profit in civic lighting the case of Jacksonville, in the Southern States, is very much to the point just now when the Hydro-Electric enterprise is being regarded by some people as, at least, a risky business and likely to increase taxation.

The municipal electric light plant of Jacksonville, Fla., is valued at $515,703.63, of which $171,059.70 was paid out of money raised by bond issue. The balance was paid out of earnings of the plant.

The net earnings of the plant for the year 1910 were $252,799.59, or 48 per cent. on the value of the plant, or 147 per cent. on the city's investment.

There was turned over to the city for purposes other than the electric light plant, between 1901 and 1909, the sum of $476,925.17, or $305,380.33 more than the city invested in the plant. So that the plant has not only paid for itself, but has aided largely in the relief of taxation.

The Jacksonville plant has no bonds to pay interest on, while Brooklyn pays for interest a sum equal to 1.35 cents per K.W.H., or 27 per cent. of the total cost of production. This is more than 60 per cent. of the total cost of producing electricity in Jacksonville.

The population of Jacksonville is 57,699. So the plant made a profit per capita of $4.55. If the city of New York operated its own electric light plant and made the same relative profit, it would be possible to reduce the taxes 14 per cent.

Notwithstanding that the net profits are so large, the maximum price charged the consumer for electric current in Jacksonville is seven cents, while Brooklynites pay twelve cents.

CANADA MUST BE TRUE TO HERSELF.

THE CANADIAN GAZETTE commenting upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "free food" cry, says it is the politicians' panacea for the high cost of living. "We fancy the shrewd men of Canada will think it well to wait and see whether this panacea really does effect the promised remedy in the United States. It would certainly not seem to have done it yet. . . . The Canadian tariff has the merit of keeping the Canadian market for the Canadian producers."

A great many people and, evidently, Sir Wilfrid is among them, think that you have only to remove the tariff and the problem of the high cost of living is immediately solved and we would all be rolling in free food and could go and enjoy ourselves on the large balance we would have after paying the baker, the grocer and the butcher! This is only a dream.

Cheap food is not always a boon. Where there is cheap food there is cheap labor. Upon the introduction of free imports in England—which was a good thing for the people and for the country at that time—food of all kinds became plentiful and cheap, trade and commerce increased. But England had come to a crisis, the tariff served no protective purpose. Great Britain was a manufacturing country and could not produce food to keep its people. There was no fear of any other country competing with British manufacturers. So that free trade to England meant merely cheap food, and that meant cheap labor.

Canada is not in the same position. There is no crisis. There is enough food in Canada itself to feed Canadians. To say that Canada cannot keep herself in food, when we have only eight million people in a country of four or five thousand miles in extent, must sound very foolish to those whom we are asking to emigrate to this land of golden harvests.

Canada can and must feed her own people. The commercial aggression of the States upon our markets must be met with more tariff if necessary. America has made itself a great manufacturing country by a policy of absolute protection, and now that the States have taken to a mild form of free-trade they have done so, not from any philantropic mative, but from a protective motive. They are too shrewd in business to give anything away. They know we cannot compete with them in manufactured articles, they can safely open their doors to Canadian trade, knowing that none will come in only what they can profit by.

If Canada were to let in food from the States free of duty farmers would have to compete with a market flooded with American food stuffs. The cost of living would go down for the city man. The farmer would then move into the city, so as to enjoy cheap food. The city would become crowded and labor would become cheap, wages would slowly come down to a level that would correspond with the reduced cost of living. Labor unions would call strikes to keep up the wage, the factories would close up, and in a short time Canada would have to put up the shutters.

But that is not yet. Sir Wilfrid was Premier for fifteen years, he has served his term and must never hope to regain power in the Dominion while he proposes to use it for the undoing of all that the pioneers have toiled for within the last hundred years.

Canada must be true to herself.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

JIM LARKIN is now to come on a tour of Canada and the States to raise funds for the carrying on of his "fiery cross" campaign. He will not have much difficulty in raising the funds to bring him out, as there are many who will gladly bear the expense of an extended vacation.

THE LIBERAL PAPERS seem a little annoyed at Mr. Foster's absence from Ottawa. That Minister has now gone to England on business. What business has the Government got with England, anyway?

THE "TANGO" SEEMS to have some to a premature end in London. Not on account of its naughtiness, but because it was too difficult. Thsi is one proof of the saying, "The way of the transgressors is hard."

THE HAMILTON SPECTATOR remarks that "It is not a favorable commentary on the appreciation of literary enterprise, that not a single Canadian Christmas annual represented the Dominion this year."

THE OLD ENGLISH BUTLER is said to be disappearing from the British household and his place taken up by the parlor maid. This will be regarded as another instance of the encroachments of the fair sex into the sphere of man. But in the case of the butler, he was always an odd individual who combined the domestic qualities of both sexes. It may be that he was instituted in the first place as a sort of half-way house to an unapproachable cook.

A GREAT MEETING of the Canada Club was held in London at the beginning of this month to greet Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor. Many interesting speeches were made. In his address Sir Frederick said: "When I read the other day, in the Bobcaygeon Courier, that I was a hustler, and in the Calgary Eye-Opener that I was a "live wire," I did not recognize myself. Perhaps the sanest remark made about me was in a London paper, which described me as a "plain matter-of-fact Canadian.'"

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Now and Then.

Ottawa Journal.

When grandfather wanted some breakfast food he tramped to the grocery store and bought a few pounds of oatmeal. Now we get it done up in a cardboard box, wrapped in tissue paper, and labelled in gilt letters as "Malta Wheat," or something else—and we pay twice as much, of course. One trouble nowadays is that we can't eat the trimmings.

No Liquor in the Mails.

From L'Evenement.

The decision of the Post Office Department to prohibit the carriage of alcohol in the mails under the parcels post is a wise one. Three-quarters of the counties of the Province of Quebec and two-thirds of the rural divisions of Ontario have prohibited the sale of liquor in any form whatever. From Levis to Gaspe, on the south shore of the river, it is impossible to find a single licensed drinking shop. Clandestine sales are also disappearing. It would have been regrettable if the magnificent results obtained by temperance in this district had been compromised by the inauguration of the parcels post.

Von Blucher in Mexico City.

Westminster Gazette.

A German paper which gives a thrilling account of recent events in Mexico describes the precautions which the German residents in Mexico City have taken to protect their lives and property in the event of street-fighting. The Government having warned foreigners that the garrison might be sent away to fight the rebels, the German Ambassador advised the German residents to raise a volunteer corps of their own, and to combine with the English, and American residents who remained in the city. The raising of the corpse was entrusted to Herr von Blucher, a great nephew of the famous marshal, who has now under his command a well-trained regiment of infantry, cavalry, as well as an automobile, and a Red Cross detachment. The Foreign Legion will assemble at the first sign of alarm in the quarter of the town where they live, and they have fortified certain villas as a place of refuge.

To the Poet Laureate.

By Maurice Hewlett.

Not clamor nor the buzzing of the crowd,
Bridges beset the lonely way you took;
The mountain path, the laurel-shelter'd nook,
The upland peak earth-hidden in a cloud,
The skyey places—here your spirit proud
Could meet its peers, the lowland rout forsook,
Here were your palimpsest and singing-book,
Here scope and silence, singing-robe and shroud,
Let England learn of thee her ancient way
Long time forgot: the glory of the swift
Is swiftness, not acclaim, and to the strong
The joy of battle battle's meed. Thy song
Will call no clearer, nor less surely lift
Our hearts to Beauty for thy crown of bay.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHY FREE TRADE WILL DISAPPEAR

Editor, Review,
Sir:

Just one more word with regard to modern tendencies I have done. We have seen how an open or free trade competitive labor market enslaved labor or at least the largest portion of it. Slums and all their horrors are also the necessary product of it, and of all other forms of trade oppression.

The cheap food of Free Trade appeared to be a move in the right direction, but it was at the expense of the British farmer and agricultural laborer, who have practically speaking, gone down and out. It is plain therefore that both the disease and the remedy were bad. What should have happened, you ask? Simply this: universal control alone will adjust universal conditions. We are struggling up to the light. We have a bad case of struggles on here now. But the result will be some day, if we can hold the money-hogs down, that a surplus will no longer mean at the same time, as at present, periods of starvation. This huge farce will soon be played out we may hope, and then the great curse of unemployment will be next in order for treatment. When the standard of the living wage is likewise more or less realised, the absurdity of expecting people to be decent on a less than decent wage will also be no more. But none of these wrongs can be remedied by perpetuating Free Trade. Extremes of poverty are the natural consequence of extremes of wealth where that wealth is improperly acquired by free untramelled power over the people. "Control" is the watchword of the future and Protection, Embargoes, Dumping-clauses, public ownership, etc., are only phases of it. Free Trade however is ot a phase of it. Free Trade is the deadly enemy of all forms of control and bars the way to it. Therefore it must go. Free Trade is like a splendid chariot well and piously named, that has bound to its wheels those whose sole asset is their labor.

Yours truly,
W. H. BURNHAM.

STATEMENT BY A CANDIDATE

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir,—I understand that a report is in circulation that I have been placed in nomination in the interests of and by the Seymour Power Co., and is being circulated to my detriment in the North Ward, where I am a candidate.

Such a statement is absolutely untrue, wholly without foundation. I am a supporter of the Hydro-Electric and Municipal Power and Light System, and have the interest of the city as much at heart as my opponent or his supporters.

Yours truly,
W. T. HOLLOWAY.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The new C.P.R. station at Grafton, Ont., nearing completion, was burned Friday night. It is supposed to be a case of incendiarism.

The world's altitude record for aeroplanes was broken Saturday by Georges Legagneux, at San Raphael, France, who ascended to a height of 20,295 feet.

According to a Winnipeg paper there are forty cases of smallpox reported at Goodlands, Man., County of Brenda, with other cases as far east as Cartwright.

Navigation in Montreal closed Saturday when the R. & O. ferry steamers, Boucherville and Longueuil, quit their courses and ran into winter quarters in the Boucherville Islands.

Five thousand men out of work in Los Angeles, instead of 30,000 as reported previously from police and other sources, is the report issued by Acting Mayor F. J. Whiffen, of that city.

John W. White, a confectioner, probably the smallest man in the world, died at Southend, Eng., aged 33 years. He was only 25 inches in height, but his two sisters were of normal size.

With the death of Marshall Needham, pit boss, and a Polish miner, the death list resulting from a riot Christmas night at Jamestown, a coal camp in Johnston County, Arkansas, reached four.

S. McDougal, a laborer on a farm near London, Ont., says he is positive that the missing Prof. Lavell of the Columbus University, worked with him on the farm under the name of Harry Chandler recently.

Ross Cutrie, an Italian cobbler of Massena, near Cornwall, was seriously burned by gasoline when he attempted to start a fire in a small coal stove. He put wood into the stove and then poured gasoline in.

WHERE LIVINGSTONE SLEEPS

"I was the first white man to reach the spot at Ilala, where David Livingstone's heart is buried. It was I who read the funeral sermon over that grave, sacred to the most revered of all explorers. Livingstone died while seeking 'the fountains of the Nile'—those hidden sources of Egypt's river which, long before him, Alexander the Great, and the great Caesar, had searched for in vain. But I was hunting for hidden human souls, and I found the fountains of the Nile.

"I was nine years homeless. Then the 'girl I left behind me' dared to come out to meet me. She joined an expedition at the coast which took her through those terrible jungles 200 miles inland. There I met her, and the British consul married us. Off there in the wilderness our babies were born—no doctor near, no helping hand.

"To complete it, after this, my one Christmas on earth, I am going to penetrate into that savage land of cannibals, and vanish—forever—from the land of civilization."

The pathos of her tone touches his heart.

DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service, of all such.

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By HAROLD MacGRATH

(Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.)

Breitmann had tried ineffectually to read their lips. She had given her word, and, once given, he knew of old that she never broke it. But he was keenly alive that in some way he was the topic of the inaudible conversation. As he sat here tonight he knew why he had never loved Hildegarde, why, in fact, he had never loved any woman. The one great passion which comes in the span of life was centered in the girl beside him, dividing her moments between him and Fitzgerald. Strange, but he had not known it till he saw the two women together. For once his nice calculations had ceased to run smoothly. There appeared now a knot in the thread for which he saw no untying.

"You do not sing now?" asked Laura from the table.

"No," Hildegarde answered, "my voice is gone."

"Oh, I am so sorry."

"It does not matter. I can hum a little to myself. There is yet some pleasure in that. But in opera, no, never again. Has not Mrs. Coldfield told you? No? Imagine! One night in Dresden in the middle of the aria my voice broke miserably, and I could not go on."

"And her heart nearly broke with it," interposed Mrs. Coldfield, with the best intentions, nearer the truth than she knew. "I am sorry, Laura, that I never told you before."

Hildegarde laughed. "Sooner or later this must happen. I worked too hard perhaps. At any rate, the opera will know me no more."

There was the hard blue of flint in Cathewe's eyes as they met and held Breitmann's. There was a duel, and the latter was routed. But hate burned fiercely in the breast against the man who could compel him to lower his eyes. Some day he would pay back that glance.

Now, M. Ferraud had missed nothing. He twisted the talk into other channels with his usual adroitness, but all the while there was bubbling in his mind the news that these two men had met before. The history of Hildegarde von Mitter was known to him. But how much did she know of this man Cathewe? The woman was a thoroughbred. He, Anatole Ferraud, knew. It was his business to know, and that she should happen upon the scene be considered as one of these rare good pieces of luck that fall to the lot of few.

Did Laura note any of the portentous glances, those exchanged between the singer and Cathewe and Breitmann? Perhaps. At all events she felt a curiosity to know how long Hildegarde von Mitter had known her father's secretary. There was no envy in her heart as again she acknowledged the beauty of the other woman. Moreover, she liked her and was going to like her more. Impressions were made upon her almost instantly for good or bad and rarely changed.

She turned oftenest to Fitzgerald, for he made particular effort to entertain, and he succeeded better than he dreamed. It kept turning over in her mind what a whimsical, capricious, whirligig was at work. It was droll, this man at her side, chatting to her as if he had known her for years, when, seven or eight days ago, he had stood, a man all unknown to her, on a city corner selling plaster of paris statuettes on a wager, and but for Mrs. Coldfield she had passed him for ever. Out upon the prude who would look askance at her for harmless daring!

"Drop into my room before you turn in," urged Fitzgerald to Cathewe.

"That I shall, my boy. I've some questions to ask of you."

But a singular idea came into creation, and this was for him, Cathewe, to pay Breitmann a visit on the way to Fitzgerald's room. Not one man in a thousand would have dared put this idea into a plan of action. But neither externals nor conventions deterred Cathewe when he sought a thing. He rapped lightly on the door of the secretary's room.

"Come in!"

Cathewe did so, gently closing the door behind him. Breitmann was in his shirt sleeves. He rose from his chair and laid down his cigarette. A faint smile broke the thin line of his mouth. He waited for his guest, or, rather, this intruder, to break the silence. And as Cathewe did not speak at once there was a tableau, during which each was speculatively busy with the eyes.

"I never expected to see you in this house," said Cathewe.

"A compliment which I readily return."

"A private secretary! I never thought of you in that capacity."

"One must take what one can," tranquilly.

"A good precept." Cathewe rolled the ends of his mustache, a trifle perplexed how to put it. "But there should be exceptions. What," and his voice became crisp and cold—"what was Hildegarde von Mitter to you?"

"And what is that to you?"

"My question first."

"I choose not to answer it."

Again they eyed each other like fencers.

"Were you married?"

Breitmann laughed. Here was his opportunity to wring this man's heart, for he knew that Cathewe loved the woman. "You seem to be in her confidence. Ask her."

"A poltroon would say as much. There is a phase in your makeup I have never fully understood. Physically you are a brave man, but morally you are a cad and a poltroon."

"Take care!" Breitmann stepped forward menacingly.

"There will be no fisticuffs," contemptuously.

"Not if you are careful. I have answered your questions. You had better leave at once."

"She is loyal to you. It was not her voice that broke that night. It was her heart. You have some hold over her."

"None that she cannot throw off at any time." Breitmann's mind was working strangely.

"If she would have me I would marry her tomorrow," went on Cathewe, playing openly. "I would marry her tomorrow, priest or protestant, for her religion would be mine."

There was a spark of admiration in Breitmann's eyes. This man Cathewe was out of the ordinary. Well, as for that, so was he himself. He walked silently to the door and opened it, standing aside for the other to pass. "She is perfectly free. Marry her. She is all and more than you wish her to be. Will you go now?"

Cathewe bowed and turned on his heel. Breitmann had really got the better of him.

"I owed her that much," said Breitmann to himself as he locked the door.

"It did not matter at all to me," was Cathewe's thought as he knocked on Fitzgerald's door and heard his cheery call. "I only wanted to know what sort of man he is."

"Oh, I really don't know whether I like him or not," declared Fitzgerald. "I have run across him two or three times, but we were both busy. He has told me a little about himself. He's been knocked about a good deal. Has a title, but doesn't use it."

"A title? That is news to me. Probably it is true."

"I was surprised to learn that you knew him at all."

"Not very well. Met him in Munich mostly."

A long pause.

"Isn't Miss Killigrew just rippin'? There's a comrade for some man. Lucky devil, who gets her! She is new to me every day."

"I think I warned you."

"You were a nice one, never to say a word that you knew the admiral!"

"Are you complaining?"

Fitzgerald laughed—no, not exactly; he wasn't complaining.

Another pause.

"But what's your opinion regarding Breitmann?"

Cathewe laced his fingers and bent his chin on them. "There's a great rascal or a great hero somewhere under his skin."

CHAPTER XIII.

THEY GO A-SAILING.

THE yacht Laura, sleek and swan white, her ensign and colors folding and unfolding, lifting and sinking as the afternoon breeze stirred them, was making ready for sea, and many of the villagers had come down to the water front to see her off.

"Wonder what poor devil of a pirate is going to have his bones turned over this trip?" said the station agent to Mr. Donovan, who, among others on the station platform, watched the drab anchor as it clanked jerkily upward to the bows, leaving a swivel and a boil on the waters which had released it so grudgingly.

"I guess it ain't goin' t' be any of pirate this time," replied Mr. Donovan with a pleasurable squeeze of the pocketbook over his heart.

"Hi! There she goes! Good luck!" cried the station agent, swinging his hat with gusto.

The voyagers were gathered about the stern rail, and a handkerchief or two fluttered in the wind. For an hour they tarried there, keeping in view the green wooded hills and the white cottages nestling at their base. And turn by turn there were glimpses of the noble old house at the top of the hill. And some looked upon it for the last time.

"I've had a jolly time up there," said Fitzgerald. The gulls swooped as they crossed and recrossed the milky wake. "Better time than I deserved."

"Are you still worried about that adventure?" Laura demanded. "Dismiss it from your mind, and let it be as if we had known each other for many years."

"Do you really mean that?"

"To be sure I do," promptly. "But Mrs. Coldfield had given me a guarantee before I addressed you."

There never was a girl quite like this one. He purloined a sidelong glance at her. The rich pigment in the blood mantled her cheeks, and in her eyes there was still a bit of captive sunshine. He knew now that what had been only a possibility was an assured fact. Never before had he cursed his father's friends, but he did so now silently and earnestly, for their pilfering fingers and their plausible lies had robbed his father's son of a fine inheritance. Money. Never had he desired it so keenly. What earthly chance had he? Unconsciously he shrugged.

"You are shrugging!" she cried, noting the expression, for if he was secretly observing her she was surreptitiously contemplating his own advantages.

"Did I shrug?"

"You certainly did."

"Well," candidly, "it was the thought of money that made me do it."

"I detest it too."

ADVISER AND FRIEND.

New Head of Bank of Montreal Is a Widely-Known Financier.

Sir Frederick William Taylor, who has been appointed general manager of the Bank of Montreal, in some respects the most responsible financial position in Canada, although for many years identified with the big bank's business in London, Eng., is a native of Canada and widely-known here. It was as London manager of the Bank of Montreal, however, that he is best known to the rapidly-growing circle of Canadian financiers. Just what services he rendered to Canadians, influential and otherwise, traveling in England in the capacity of financial adviser and friend will never be known; but they were very great. A very prominent Canadian statesman, who had occasion to make several prolonged stay in the world's metropolis told me the other day that he several times had to depend entirely upon Sir Frederick's advice and wide knowledge of Canadian and British financial and industrial affairs to enable him to reach a reasonable conclusion upon several important occasions, and he added, 'You would be astonished at the number of Canadians who weekly apply to the London manager of the Bank of Montreal for advice in financial and other matters. Sir Frederick is a busy man; but has always been ready to give advice and reasonable assistance to Canadians requiring them.'

Sir Frederick Taylor is a son of the late Ezekiel Taylor, of Moncton, N.B. One of his great-grandfathers on the paternal side was Captain Moore, Royal Navy, of Buncrana Castle, Buncrana, Ireland, and one on the maternal side was Col. Joseph Morse of United Empire Loyalist descent, who settled at Fort Cumberland, N.S., after the revolution. Sir Frederick was born fifty years ago, and educated by private tuition. He married Jane Fayrer, only daughter of Joshua Henshaw, of Montreal. His service in the Bank of Montreal covers a period of thirty-five years, commencing as junior clerk. He was successively appointed accountant at Picton, Ont., and at Peterborough, then promoted manager at Deseronto, Ont. He later became assistant inspector, acting joint manager at Chicago, acting manager at London, Eng., and eventually manager in that city. Since his youth Sir Frederick has been famous as an athlete, being equally good at skating, rowing, tennis and squash raquets. He stroked the Wanderers' four-oared crew at Halifax, N.S., some years ago. In his early days he was an active member of the Victoria Skating Rink and Raquet Court at Montreal, and his return to the Canadian commercial metropolis will be welcomed by those who share with him an enthusiasm for wholesome amateur sport.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

JEWS ARE OSTRACIZED SAYS McGILL GRADUATE

In Speech at Zionist Banquet in Montreal Louis Fitch Declares That Social Doors Are Closed to the Jewish Collegian

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—That universities of Canada and the United States while placing no numerical restrictions upon the attendance of Jewish students, as was the case in Europe, none the less observed certain unofficial restrictions against such students, was the statement of Louis Fitch, of Montreal, a graduate of McGill University, at the Zionist banquet Saturday evening. These restrictions, he said, were not officially recognized and were not published abroad, but were still a fact. As a McGill man he had himself felt that there had been a closed door, beyond which Jewish students could not pass. They were not wanted in the Greek letter societies or fraternities, and were seldom or never allowed a hearing in the debates at the McGill University Literary Society meetings.

There was no real sympathy for the Jewish student shown by those connected with the university, Mr. Fitch asserted. They were not treated as were others. In order to have any say at all in the affairs of the university, they had been compelled to form a society of their own and even this was not recognized by the student body, and was ignored altogether in the last issue of the McGill calendar.

It was furthermore, very difficult for a Jew to be elected to any office at the college.

The condition, said Mr. Fitch, were not confined to any one university, but were fairly common, and the young Jew who would obtain advanced education had practically no place to go where he could obtain fair and equitable treatment.

S. W. Jacobs, K.C., president of the Baron de Hirsch Institute, in proposing the health of Canadian Federation, made the announcement that the Jewish Colonization Society of Paris, of which he was a Canadian representative, was shortly to found a Jewish colony in Western Canada similar to that which had already been founded with so great success in the Argentine.

A second Canadian colony for Jews in Palestine was decided upon in the closing hours of the Zionist convention, and $8,000 of the $10,000 necessary for the purchase of land was subscribed by societies and individuals before the convention rose. This came as a result of the announcement of the work being done in the first colony founded since the 1911 convention. This had been named "Canadia" and consisted of 300 acres of land, a large track in that country, and included plantations, buildings and a complete equipment.

The question of what the federation should do next was answered by President de Sola, who made a strong appeal for the foundation of Canadia No. 2, suggesting that another $10,000 worth of land should be purchased and the subscription for this started at once.

IS BEATEN BY RELATIVE

Hamilton Night Watchman Victim of Attack

A BRUTAL DEED

HAMILTON, Dec. 29. — Frank Stevens, a middle-aged nightwatchman, who resides on Holmes avenue, West Hamilton, is in a precarious condition in the city hospital as the result of being brutally assaulted in the basement of Stanley Mills & Co.'s store in the neighborhood of nine o'clock last night. The first intimation that anything had happened was given by the victim when he rushed to James street from the alleyway in the rear of the store with blood streaming down his face, screaming at the top of his voice that he had been robbed. Stevens' hands were tied behind his back and his clothes were covered with flour. Constable Hardon rushed to the man, and after receiving the keys with the words, "He's got all the money and is in there yet," entered the building.

In the meantime police headquarters had been notified, and a squad of officers and constables quickly arrived. Despite a thorough search nobody was found in the building.

The victim affirmed that he was assaulted by a relative who had called at the store, about 8.30 o'clock, with a message.

An eye-witness stated that he saw the man rush from the building and disappear in the direction of York street, but the authorities were unable to get any trace of the man in that direction.

The police found the basement in a state of the utmost confusion. Flour strewn about, upturned stools and clots of blood on the flour told the story of a furious battle which had recently been waged. On a counter nearby was found the coat and hat of the culprit. In the pockets of the coat two revolvers, a length of wire rope and a blood-stained handkerchief were discovered.

Members of the firm were brought to the place, but a hasty investigation failed to reveal any theft.

Stevens was reported this morning to be in a serious condition, suffering from a severe gash over the temple and several minor lacerations about the face.

RELIEF IN SIGHT

Montreal Officials Promise Water Famine Will End Tomorrow.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—While the water situation here remains practically the same, there are hopeful prospects that the citizens will have water by Tuesday, according to a statement made by Controller Godfrey last night. All the excavation work considered necessary for the placing of the steel tubing has been completed, and the last section will be delivered to-day. Until the break in the intake is remedied, the city will have 180 vehicles distributing water to the places and people not already temporarily reached by the arrangement with the Montreal Water & Power Co.

A number of churches were affected. At the First Baptist Church a baptism had to be postponed owing to the impossibility of obtaining sufficient water to fill the large tank used for the ceremony of total immersion.

ANOTHER DASH FOR THE POLE

Sir Ernest Shackleton Will Start for South in 1914.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, the explorer, in a letter to The Times, announces his intention to lead another expedition to the South Pole in 1914. He will start from a South American port with the object of crossing the South Polar continent from sea to sea, returning by way of New Zealand. He adds:

"I have been enabled to undertake this expedition through the generosity of a friend, and I have taken the liberty of calling the expedition 'The Imperial Transatlantic Expedition,' because I feel that not only the people of these islands, but our kinsmen in all lands under the Union Jack will be willing to assist towards the carrying out of the full program of exploration to which my comrades and myself are pledged."

Burned While Owners Away.

KINGSTON, Dec. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Austin Gillies of Gillies Depot New Ontario, while visiting Mrs. Gillies' parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. R. McCann, received a telegram bringing news of the total destruction by fire of their residence and all contents. The fire was caused by the bursting of a stove.

Bank Robbed.

HAVANA, Dec. 29.—It was learned Saturday that a sum of money amounting to $6,500 had been abstracted from the Havana branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. It is believed that the money was taken by employes.

MONEY FOR EVERYBODY

Paymaster's Supply Blew Round the Streets.

PERTH, Dec. 29.—James Montgomery, hardware clerk, experienced the fleeting feeling of richness suddenly thrust upon him Friday night when about half-past seven he picked up a big wad of ten dollar bills. They were blowing about everywhere and satisfying himself that it was the real stuff, Mr. Montgomery scooped as many as he could in his arms, and soon attracted a number of people, who helped him chase the ten-spots which were being blown about by the wind. Later it was learned that it belonged to Harry Wright, who is not a resident of Perth, but is paymaster for a contractor who is building stations on the new C.P.R. line from Glen Tay to Toronto.

Saturday Mr. Wright was busy recovering what he lost the night before, and is understood to have it all now but $260. Considering all circumstances he is lucky in recovering as much of the roll as he did.

Czarewitch's Condition Serious.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 29.—The Czarewitch's health, according to trustworthy reports, is again giving cause for anxiety. For the last two or three days he has not been well, the cause probably being an effusion of blood brought on by over-exertion. The news is more deplorable, as his health at Livadia previously had been excellent and inspired hopes that his recovery was complete.

Mona Lisa Going To Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 29.—The "Mona Lisa," Leonardo Da Vinci's great masterpiece, which was stolen from the Louvre, and recently recovered in Italy, will arrive in Paris from Rome on Wednesday. It will be exhibited at the Ecole Des Beaux Arts till Saturday, when it will be transferred to its old place in the Louvre

WAR ON HUDSON BAY

IT WAS ONCE THE SCENE OF A NAVAL BATTLE.

During the Reign of William and Mary Canada's Inland Sea Was the Theatre of a Desperate Struggle for Supremacy Between the English and the French—Britain Lost Three Ships in Conflict.

Since the days of Henry Hudson, three hundred and four years ago, the waters of the Bay and Strait that bear his name have been navigated by white men. The Great Company, founded sixty years after the discovery of the Bay, sent out its ships laden with goods and brought them home laden with furs, using only this route. The adventurous Radisson and his companions laid the foundation of this trade and established the rule of the company throughout much of this northern region.

With trade there mingled the stern condition of war. The Hudson Bay Company was holding this country for England—this was before there was a United Kingdom—and several times the French attempted to drive the English from it, and thereby make Rupert's Land a part of New France, of which the capital was Quebec on its heights overlooking the St. Lawrence.

This war on the waters and along the shores of Hudson Bay took place during the reign of William and Mary.

The leader of the French forces sent to Hudson Bay was Iberville, after whom is named one of the counties of the Province of Quebec. In 1694 he compelled Port Nelson—Fort Nelson, it was then called—to surrender after a bombardment of three weeks. Two years later an English fleet recaptured the fort, at the same time securing a vast quantity of furs. Then both England and France prepared for a conflict, that, it was expected, would finally settle the question of supremacy in Hudson Bay.

Each country sent out a fleet, that from England consisting of four of the company's ships—the Hampshire, the Hudson Bay, the Dering, and Owner's Love. The English ships entered the Strait only forty hours in advance of the ships of the French, both fleets being much impeded by the ice. The French ships really followed in the wake of the English.

Having entered the Bay, where there was more open water, Iberville, in his ship Pelican, succeeded in slipping by the English ships unknown to them, and reached the mouth of the Nelson River, within sight of the fort. The garrison was greatly surprised, for it had been hoped that the English fleet would prevent the French ships from passing through the Strait. The appearance of the Pelican showed that this had not been done; but the English fleet was hourly expected, and shots were fired as a signal to the approaching vessels.

Iberville also anxiously awaited the coming of his own vessels, and so two days were passed in a state of suspense by both the garrison at Fort Nelson and the crew of the Pelican. On the morning of the third day, which was September 5. 1697, three ships were distinctly visible, and so confident was Iberville that they were his that he hoisted anchor and sailed away to join them. As he drew near he learned, to his surprise and, perhaps, somewhat to his dismay, that the ships were the English fleet, now reduced to three ships; for the fourth, the Owner's Love, had become separated from her companions when they were in the ice-field and was never more heard of.

Iberville was not daunted by the discovery. He decided to attack, and made straight for the three ships of the enemy. It was a case of three against one, but Iberville's one was much superior to its opponents, for the Pelican was manned by about two hundred and fifty sailors and marines, and the vessel carried forty-four pieces of cannon.

The battle began at once. Iberville first tried to run down and board the Hampshire. Failing in this, he turned to the Dering and the Hudson Bay, pouring into each a damaging broadside; the English replying with a musket fire into the Pelican's crew and a broadside of grape-shot which wrought havoc with the enemy's sails.

The Hudson Bay then tried to run in front of the Pelican and give her a constant hull fire, besides taking the wind from her sails. Iberville saw the intended movement. He veered around and by a fine piece of seamanship came so near the Hampshire that the crew saw that boarding was intended, but a terrific broadside of grape held the French in check, for a time saving the Hampshire. It was only for a time, for at the end of three and a half hours of fighting the Hampshire began to sink with all sails set.

At this time there were ninety men severely wounded on board the Pelican, forty having been struck by a single broadside. Nothwithstanding this, Iberville decided to push the fight with the Dering, which was the smallest ship, and had suffered severely. The Dering seeing that she was singled out for destruction, crowded on sail and managed to avoid an encounter. The Pelican being in no condition to give chase returned to the Hudson Bay, which soon surrendered.

In the meantime, the Hampshire had been steadily sinking, and shortly after the surrender of the Hudson Bay, the Hampshire went down with nearly all on board; and thus was concluded what was, in the opinion of the best autherities, both French and English, one of the fiercest and bloodiest naval battles of the war.

RADIUM IN HIS SHOULDER

Metal Worth $100,000 Put There to Cure Cancer.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.— Robert Gunn Bremner, Democratic member of Congress from the Passaic Congressional district of New Jersey, spent his Christmas in a Baltimore hospital Thursday with $100,000 worth of radium temporarily imbedded in his shoulder in the hope that it would destroy the malignant growth of a bad cancer on his left shoulder.

The radium was imbedded in the growth in Mr. Bremner's shoulder by Dr. Howard Atwood Kelly, in the latter's private sanatorium, on Butaw Place, and left there long enough to send its radio-active properties in a cross-fire that penetrated every part of the cancerous growth. Dr. Kelly placed the radium in eleven tubes about one-third of an inch in and these tubes, measuring each about 2 1-2 inches in length and about one-third of an inch in diameter, were planted in as many in diameter, were planted in as many incisions that were made in the cancer on Representative Bremner's shoulder. The tubes were inserted at 11 o'clock Christmas morning, several hours after the arrival of Mr Bremner in Baltimore, and were removed at 11 o'clock at night. The result was very carefully observed by Dr. Kelly yesterday, and the tubes will again be embedded in Mr. Bremner's cancer to-day.

Mr. Bremner is one of the most popular of the newer members of the House, a man of splendid talents and has borne his pain without a murmur while mingling among his colleagues in the House.

ONTARIO'S ROADS.

Huge Problem Faces New Highways Commissioners.

The series of public meetings held by the Ontario Highways Commission is the forerunner of the greatest road improvement scheme ever planned in a Canadian province. British Columbia is engaged in building a road system costing five millions, and Quebec is spending ten millions on long trunk roads paralleling the St. Lawrence, and in aiding municipalities, but the Ontario program will outdistance them all in comprehensiveness and vigor, says George W. Austen in Canadian Courier.

What is the condition of road improvement on which the Commission must base plans? How far has Ontario progressed already? Sober truth it is, that though in twenty years time and money of a direct value of over $50,000,000 been been put on the roads, Ontario is yet far behind most modern states in road improvement. Agriculturally, this province is the most productive in the Dominion. It has likewise a greater mileage of stone roads than any other province. But it falls most notably to show road development at all in keeping with its productive position. In the last twenty years the townships have spent about $20,000,000 in cash, and about 22,000,000 statute labor days on their roads, without improving them, in the opinion of the provincial highways engineer, much beyond their condition at the beginning of the twenty years The counties which have been improving main market roads, under the Highway Improvement Act of 1901, spent, up to the end of 1912 $4,273,478, receiving from the Government as its share of the cost, one-third of that amount, or $1,424,493. Thus the total expediture on county and township roads, with a total mileage of over 50,000, has been since 1892, about $23,273,000 cash and about 22,000,000 statute labor days.

In one of his annual reports, Provincial Engineer McLean estimates that in the organized counties of old Ontario, the 50,000 miles of road may be classified thus:

1. Trunk roads, connecting the large cities and towns, 5 per cent., or 2,500 miles.
2. County or leading market roads, 12 per cent., or 6,000 miles.
3. Main township roads, 50 per cent., or 25,000 miles.
4. Secondary township roads, 33 per cent., or 16,500 miles.

Supplies For Canada.

OTTAWA, Dec. 29.—A report to the Trade and Commerce Department by Canadian Trade Commissioner Beldoe of New Zealand notes that the steamship Marama, leaving Auckland on Nov. 21 for Canada, carried 17,500 cases of butter, 278 carcasses of veal, and 1,250 carcasses of mutton for Canadian consumption. The food taxes will be collected at Vancouver, and the cost of living to the Canadian consumer will be increased by the amount of the duties.

The King's Congratulations.

GULFPORT, Miss., Dec. 29.—Among the many messages of congratulation received by President Wilson on his birthday was the following from King George: "I want to offer you my sincere congratulations on the anniversary of your birth, and trust that your health has not suffered from your arduous duties of the year." This was the only cablegram that was made public.

Phantom Bandits Active.

CANNES, France, Dec. 29. — The people of the outlying districts are in the state of panic over what they believe to be the reappearance of the "phantom bandits," who terrorized the countryside for years by a series of murders and outrages, which long baffled the best efforts of the authorities.

Saturday night a farmer was shot dead through a window as he was sitting with his family at the supper table. The previous night another farmer was shot at but not hit. In each case a thorough search of the surroundings failed to reveal the slightest clue to the perpetrators.

SAD SCENES ACCOMPANY BURIAL OF PANIC VICTIMS

Thousands of Miners From All Over the Copper Country Escort the Line of Bodies to the Cemetery Bought by the Federation of Miners.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 29. — The Western Federation of Miners buried its dead yesterday. Fifty-nine bodies, including those of forty-four children, were carried through the streets yesterday down a winding highway and laid in graves in a snow enshrouded cemetery within sight of Lake Superior. Thousands of saddened miners formed the escort of the funeral parties and passed between other thousands, who, as spectators, testified to the grief that has oppressed the community since 72 men, women and children were killed in the Christmas Eve panic in Italian Hall. Four hours the Sabbath calm was broken by the tolling of bells and the sound of voices intoning burial chants. In half-a-dozen churches services were held earlier in the day and the mourners went about the streets, passing from their homes to the church and back to their homes, after brief respites, and again to the churches to prepare for the last sad trip to the gravesides.

Delegations of strikers began coming into Calumet early in the day. The special train of nine coaches brought hundreds of federationists from the iron mines of Negaunee and Ishpeming, and every town and mining location in the copper country sent members and friends of the union to swell the ranks of the marchers in the afternoon.

The supply of hearses was inadequate and there were only fourteen of these vehicles in the van. Then came three undertakers' wagons and an automobile truck, the latter carrying three coffins. These vehicles contained the adult victims and the older children.

Behind the hearses was a section of the procession which brought tears and sobs from onlookers. Thirty-nine white coffins, their size testifying to the short life of the little forms within, were carried by relays of strikers. Four men bore each coffin and as their arms grew weary or feet stumbled on the slippery roadway, companions relieved them of their burden.

The last marcher had scarcely started from Calumet before the head of the procession had reached the cemetery gates, two miles away. All but half a dozen of the burials were in common graves dug Saturday by members of the union. The ground belongs to the Federation, and it was stated that a monument will be erected there, the formal dedication to take place a year hence.

The cemetery is in two sections. One is consecrated to the dead of the Roman Catholic faith, the other to those belonging to Protestant denominations. In the former three trenches had been excavated and in these 25 bodies were laid.

LAWYER WHO SAT IN THE FIRST LEGISLATURE IS DEAD

J. C. Rykert Began His Career in 1860 in Old Union Parliament

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 29.—John Charles Rykert, K.C., who was long prominent in the political life of the province and Dominion, died Saturday night after having been an invalid for over four years. He was born in St. Catharines three months less than eighty-three years ago, and was the oldest resident of the city in point of continuous residence.

His Parliamentary career began in 1860 when, as a Conservative, he was elected to the Parliament of Upper and Lower Canada. In the year following he was returned by acclamation, sitting until Confederation, when he was elected to the first Ontario Legislature, of which he was the last surviving member. In 1871 he was again returned to the Legislature by acclamation. In 1875 he was defeated by Capt. Sylvester Neelon, who was unseated and disqualified. Mr. Rykert was elected again in 1876. During his time in the local House he, with the late Sir M. C. Cameron and A. Boultbee, furnished the chief opposition in the House to the Mowat Government for several years.

In 1878 Mr. Rykert was elected to the Dominion House and was again returned in 1882, 1887 and 1891, going down to defeat with his party in 1896. He had campaigned in the Conservative interests in every constituency in Ontario, and had spoken as often as five times in a day.

Mr. Rykert was the son of George Rykert, U. E. Loyalist, who came from New York State and opened a banking business here, and who was defeated for Parliamentary honors by the late Hon. W. H. Merritt, the builder of the first Welland Canal. He was educated at Upper Canada College and called at Osgoode Hall in 1853.

He was a prominent horticulturist, and was one of the pioneers in the fruit growing industry. He was a judge of fruit at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. For forty years he was a member of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario, and was three times elected president.

School For Immigrants.

An agricultural farm school for immigrants who intend to settle in Canada is being conducted in England. The young men are being trained so far as possible according to Canadian methods. Canadian implements being used and Canadian hours and methods of working being adhered to. The training given qualifies the immigrant to demand and receive more pay when he reaches this side the Atlantic and is beneficial alike to him and to his Canadian employer, as few employers have time to train young men entering their employ.

LAST SPIKE TO-MORROW.

Pres. Mackenzie Will Finish C.N.R. Eastern Division Himself.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 29.—The last spike on the eastern division of the C.N.R. between Port Arthur and Sudbury, which makes the Mackenzie and Mann road practically a transcontinental, will be driven tomorrow. The ceremony will take place at a point 255 miles east of Port Arthur, and the hammer will be swung by Sir William Mackenzie president of the C.N.R., who is leaving Toronto for a trip of inspection over the road.

In order to make the connection seven miles remained Saturday to be laid, and with only four days the contractors are hurrying that piece of work by keeping men on the job night and day.

NO CHANGE SO FAR.

Doctors Expect Little Result In Bremner Case For Three Weeks.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 29.—There has been no marked change for the better as yet in the condition of Congressman Bremner, who is undergoing the radium treatment for cancer at Dr. Howard Kelly's sanitarium, on the most extensive scale ever attempted.

No correct prediction as to the curable effects of the treatment can be made under three or possibly four weeks. Owing to the malignant growth in Bremuer being near the heart his condition is at all times critical, and as Dr. Kelly has observed in commenting upon the case the Congressman's nerve alone has kept him up. Congressman Bremner's case is the greatest in magnitude that has ever been subjected to the radium test.

Cook Started a Strike.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 29.—Because Robt. Mackay, chief chef on the steamship Tyrolia, which docked Saturday, refused to cook for the firemen on the voyage from Triests because he considered it out of his department and because eleven men in the steward's department of the steerage went on strike for the Saturday half-holiday and refused to work, Captain F. Carey gave them into charge of the police as soon as the ship docked. They were arrested and remanded to jail by Police Magistrate Ridehler.

Will Admit Women.

BERNE, Dec. 29.—The Synod of the Protestant Church of the Canton of Neuchatel, Switzerland, by a vote of 73 to 22, has decided to admit women to the faculty of theology This means that in the future women who take the theological degree at a university will be entitled equally with men to become pastors in this canton. Two years ago the Synod of Grisons took the same step and now has a woman pastor, the only one in Switzerland.

Croats Turn Their First Parliament Into a Bedlam.

AGRAM, Croatia, Dec. 29.—The Neo Croatian Diet was formally opened yesterday and was informally adjourned after a brief and riotous session because of the inability of the members to agree peaceably on a date for the next meeting. Dr. Mileusenic, a member of the Opposition, who presided by right of seniority, named next Monday as the day of meeting. This, however, provoked such angry protests that he hastily vacated the chair in favor of Deputy Taskan, a member of the Government party, who ordered that the House should meet again at night.

Several members of the Opposition rushed to the platform and tried to drag him from the chair. His colleagues hastened to his assistance. Blows were exchanged and the fighting soon spread to the floor of the House. The deputies finally vacated the place, finding that it was impossible to transact business.

In accordance with Deputy Taskan's decision that the Diet reassemble Saturday night, Mileusenic and his friends were already in possession. Mileusenic sat in the presidential chair, but did not attempt to open the sitting. He read the newspapers and conversed with friends. This continued until 7.30 o'clock when a quaestor appeared and declared that as Mileusenic was not discharging his duties of the president, Taskan would like to take the chair. Amid a deafening roar on the part of the Opposition, Deputy Taskan advanced and took a position in front of the tribune, but the chairman declined to move. Taskan verified the credentials of some of the members amid a tumult and the sitting had to be suspended.

When the sitting was resumed at 9 o'clock in the evening, Mileusenic still occupied the chair, which he had not left in the interval. Taskan tried to begin the business of the House, but was greeted with an inferno of noise, the Opposition blowing trumpets, beating the covers of typewriting machines and shrieking insulting epithets. The rival presidents produced bells which they continuously sounded.

MOYER BADLY INJURED.

President of Miners Was Shot By Citizens' Mob.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Charles H. Moyes, president of the Western Federation of Miners, driven from Hancock, Mich., after he had been shot and beaten Friday night, slept well under the care of physicians in a hospital here last night.

The train ride of 600 miles, a bullet still in his body and his wounds having received only temporary care, so weakened the director of the copper miners' strike, that he was unable to receive visitors after he had reached the hospital.

The doctors said that the ease with which Moyer dropped to sleep would prove a factor toward his speedy recovery, and the indications were his wound would not prove serious.

Jury To Investigate.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 29. — The deportation of Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, and leader of the copper miners' strike, who was escorted from Hancock Friday night after being shot and clubbed, will be investigated by the special grand jury when it resumes its sessions to-morrow. Sheriff Cruse began an enquiry on Saturday into the facts of Moyer's departure in response to telegrams from Governor Ferris and George Nicholls, the special prosecutor in charge of the grand jury. Both requested him to make a full statement of the results of his investigation.

Warrants were sworn out Saturday for the manager and a number of employes of a Socialist newspaper in Hancock on a charge of "inciting to riot."

The warrants were sworn under the statutes relating to felony, and the men were held in bonds of $1,000 each. The complaints were made by Sheriff Cruse and were a sequel to an extra edition published Friday, in which charges of grave misconduct were made against some deputy sheriffs and others. The article charged them with hindering the rescuers at the Christmas Eve tragedy.

Will Move Leo XIII.'s Body.

ROME, Dec. 29.—It is understood that the negotiations between the Government and the Vatican relative to the transportation of the body of the late Pope Leo XIII. from St. Peter's to the tomb which has been erected in the Church of St. John Lateran have reached a satisfactory conclusion. It is said that the ceremony will take place in February.

Body of Rampolla To Be Exhumed.

ROME, Dec. 29.—In spite of the denial given out at the Vatican. The Messagero, a popular newspaper, says the exhumation of the body of Cardinal Rampolla has been ordered in consequence of the suspicions aroused by his sudden death and the disappearance of his will, which it is thought may have been connected with it.

Tried to Kill Himself.

HAMILTON, Dec. 29.—A foreigner whose name the police give as Nick Hicknell created much excitement at the G.T.R. station yesterday afternoon about four o'clock when he tried to throw himself in front of a locomotive which was drawing a train into the station. He was overpowered after considerable trouble and taken to jail.

A New Industry.

In the Englehart district of Northern Ontario this fall thousands of spruce and balsam trees were cut for dwellers in the cities of the south. On one day Mr. John Gemmill shipped three carloads of evergreens to Philadelphia. This is the first shipments of the kind from Englehart.

TELLS OF COMING CRASH.

Advises His Audience Not to Envy the Rich Nor to Seek to Acquire Wealth. Pictures Rich Man's Misery, While Audience Groans in Sympathy.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

AFTER the committee to investigate the Panama canal had reported that they had made a thorough investigation into alleged graft and found no evidence that a single individual had got away with more than 15 cents and asked how under such circumstances the canal could be expected to be a success. Brother Gardner arose and said:

"When I look up and down de aisles dis eavenin' I catch he sparkle of diamonds. I behold patent leather shoes. I see embroidered socks sich as de king of England wears. I see suits of clothes dat cost $25. I see members of de club who am gwine home to walk on Persian rugs and drink port wine befo' dey tumbles into a bed wid a $20 spread kivered ober de top to woo de angels.

"My frens, you has bin gwine de pace. You has got dar. You am at de top. What am gwine to foller? Am you gwine to be de happier fur it? You will answer dat you am, but it's all a bluff. Dar ain't a man of you but what's in debt. Dar ain't a man of you dat could raise $50 in cash on a pinch. You am libin' from hand to mouth and don't know what de inside of a savin' bank looks like. Let a carbuncle on de neck lay any of you up fur a week and you'd be around borrowin' money to keep de wolf from de doah.

"I THUNK TILL MY OL' HEAD WAS WHIRLIN'."

"Your wives ride in cowpays while you owe de butcher and am gwine a block outer your way to dodge him You am eatin' ice cream while you owe de grocer fur codfish. You am stuffin' down sweet cake while your betters am satisfied wid co'nmeal. You am wearin' patent leather shoes while you am standin' de coal man off. You am rentin' boxes at the postoffice while your chil'en want fur schoolbooks You am swellin' about and talkin' politics while folks am offerin' good money for whitewashin'!

Prophesies a Crash.

"I say all right to dis. It's none of my funeral. If de pace suits you keep it up. It hain't for me to butt in and spile your day dreams, but when de crash comes, as come it must, don't come shoutin' to me for cold taters Don't come a-sayin' you didn't dun think it could ever be. Don't come weepin' kase you has had a good time and lost it. Dar's signs in de heabens and signs all around us on airth dat hobbery am gwine to be let loose befo' many years mo' have passed, and if you will persist in closin' your eyes and ears you must take what's comin' to you.

"I took a leetle walk today, and I saw lace curtains and heard pianers playin'. I saw grocery wagons and butcher carts drivin' up. I saw cull'd women goin' out and comin' home in cowpays. I saw cull'd chil'en on de street whose clothes cost mo' dan it used to cost me to dress my hull fam'ly of eight. I saw cull'd women in silks and cull'd men in Prince Alberts. I saw 'em buyin' rugs and carpets and statuary. I heard de women talkin' about deir tailors. I saw all dis and much mo', and when I got home I sot down in my cheer and thunk till my old head was whirlin' round wid thunkin'. De old woman put my feet to soak and tied a wet towel around my head, but all night long I was dreamin' of a long purcession of folks marchin' past my cabin on de way to de porehouse and de graveyard beyand.

"I sit down and think of these things, my frens, and den compare fifty years ago wid today. It jest makes my ha'r stand up to do it. I git so excited sometimes dat de old woman has to tell me to put my cold feet in de oven and drink hot catnip tea.

The Old and New.

"De two room cabin of half a century ago has become de six room flat of today. De puncheon floah am hidden under tiger skin rugs. De two or three old cheers and de humble bed have been replaced by furniture fit for a king. One of de lookin' glasses hangin' up costs mo' dan all we had in our cabins.

"Fur thirty years I hadn't a pane of glass in de winders of my cabin. I didn't see the need of it, and ag'in I sorter felt dat I wanted to giu de Lawd a free chance to look in at any time o' day or night. Today you couldn't git a black man to lib in a house widout winders, and he wants lace curtains to boot. He's willin' to keep de Lawd out and de debbil in.

"In my time if a black man had walked into a grocery and ordered de grocer to send him up half a pound of tea, two pounds of butter, a pound of coffee and a box of bakin' powder dar would have bin people sayin' dat de jedgment day was not fur off. Now dar's nuthin' thought about it. In my day, if a husband had come home and found his old woman givin' a high tea he would have dropped dead. Nowadays husbands help to wait on de company.

"If I had come home from town bringin' a cuckoo clock under my arm de old woman would have looked at me fur a minit in a cur'us way. Den she would have felt of my head to find dat soft spot. Den she would have gone under de plum tree an' knelt down and axed de Lawd to gib me my senses back and not leave her in a hole. She would have taken it dat I was plumb crazy, and ebery body else fur ten miles around would have agreed wid her.

The Broomstick of Wrath.

"Had a peddler come along wid a ten dollar rug and axed me to buy it on de installment plan, and had I wasted five minits talkin' wid him at de gate, I should have felt a whack from a broomstick across my shoulders. It would have bin considered a sin in de sight of de Lawd to buy sich a rug All de crows and buzzards and possums and coons for twenty miles around would have come flockin' to look at it and call me a fule.

"And, furdermo' it has come to my knowledge dat we have among us sartin members who am sighin' to be great at any price or in any manner. De pore fools doan' know when dey am well off. From de minit a man gits rich de book agents are arter him. Eberybody who has eber bowed to him wants to borry $10. The grocer beats him, de butcher swindles him and de policeman on de beat stands in wid his cook and is furnished wid all de lemon pie he kin devour.

"De rich man am game for all. He has got to go to church ebery Sunday no matter how good de fishin' am, and when he's dar he's got to sot way up in front whar eberybody kin see de wrinkles in de back of his coat. How often do you s'pose de rich man has a biled dinner? Not once a ya'r. He dassent have. It hain't catosh in his circle.

"Did you eber see a rich man sittin' on de top rail of a fence eatin' a raw turnip? Nebber in your life. He's got to sit down on a stuffed cha'r at home and eat oranges.

Rich Man's Limitations.

"Kin de rich man sot around de grocery in de evenin' in his shirt sleeves or dare drink his 'lasses out of a jug? Do you ebber hear of his goin' fishin or skatin' or off arter huckleberries? Not on your life! [Tremendous applause.]

"All de rich man can do am to be rich and have heaps of trubble. He's got to eat what he don't like, dress as he don't want to, and hang around de Waldorf-Astoria when he'd a heap rather be out on de commons playin' ball wid de boys. His wife is arter him all de time for mo' diamonds, his boys am runnin' around and marryin' chorus gals, and his darters am cryin to go to Europe and buy out Switzerland. [Groans of sympathy.]

"I has knowed as many as seben rich men in my time and I has had private talks wid them all. When dey found that I was Brother Gardner dey just talked to me in confidence. Ebery one of dose seben men told me dat he'd gib his old hutes to be a pore and happy man agin Dey couldn't eben gib deir money away and be pore like de rest of us. Deir wives wouldn't let 'em do it. Dey had to keep right on bein' rich and havin' trouble day in and day out, and it will not s'prise you to hear dey all died befo' deir time. (Sensation).

Don't Envy Wealth.

"My dear frens, don't sigh to be rich. Don't plan and scheme for wealth. Don't envy de millyounire. Dar's hosses and carriages in bein' rich, but what's de use of hosses and carriages when you kin ride on a street kyar?

"I hab summed it up and figured it out, and I'm tellin' you dat de man who am libbin' in a cottage and wearin one shirt all de week through am happier dan any millyonaire dat kin be named. I did not intend to make any distended remarks, but simply to sow a few seeds by de wayside. Remain pore and happy. Remain pore and respectable.

"When you take from a man de privilege of sittin' on his doah steps in his shirt sleeves, wid an old hen cacklin' on one side of him and a pig gruntin' on de odder, de dawg lyin' in de sun and de chil'en rollin' on de grass, you have tooken away a happiness dat money can't replace." [Terrific applause, which continued until the lights were turned out and the doors locked.]

Before a fire brigade can start for a fire in Berlin the members must all fall in line in military fashion and salute their captain.

OPEN EVERY NIGHT.

EVERYWHERE BUT IN PRINT.

They're teaching Willie sex hygiene, and Elsie's learning, too,
How people may be pure and clean and things they must not do.
When they come home from school at night they perch upon my knee
And ask if I've been living right and hand out facts to me.
They've listened well and learned a lot—but I must pause. I fear
What they reveal to me would not be tolerated here.

~~My cousin and his pretty wife came in~~ last night to call.
The conversation hinged on life. We minced no words at all.
We talked about the latest play and "damaged goods," nor let False modesty stand in the way, because we owe a debt
To those who are to follow us—but I must pause. I fear
Twould not be proper to discuss so grave a matter here.

We have been ignorant and blind and foolish in the past;
But, leaving prudishness behind, we see the light at last.
The subject that was barred before when women spoke to men
Is mentioned with a blush no more—but I must stay my pen.
Upon the stage and in the schools the plain truth may appear.
But old conventions and old rules must be respected here.

For they who pray and they who preach that ignorance is wrong,
And they who play and they who teach in language terse and strong,
And they who deem it well to speak and cease to merely hint
Are often still inclined to shriek when candor's put in print.
'Tis time to let the truth be seen—but I must pause. I fear
Remarks concerning sex hygiene would be offensive here.

The Higher Subtraction.

The teacher was hearing the youthful class in mathematics.

"No," she said; "in order to subtract, things have to be in the same denomination. For instance, we couldn't take three pears from four peaches, nor eight horses from ten cats. Do you understand?"

There was assent from the majority of pupils. One little boy in the rear raised a timid hand.

"Well, Bobby, what is it?" asked the teacher.

"Please, teacher," said Bobby, "couldn't you take three quarts of milk from two cows?"—New York Evening Post.

THE PRESS GALLERY.

Reporting Speeches of the Empire's Parliamentarians.

To anyone who stops to consider for a moment it will be obvious that the position of Parliamentary reporter is one of no small responsibility. It is upon him that we depend for an accurate account of the speeches, weighty and otherwise, made in the various Houses of Commons in the Empire, and to him we are indebted for the general Parliamentary news which we are accustomed to find on our breakfast table every morning. "The Galleryman," as he is termed in newspaper circles, is the Parliamentary chronicler for the people and from his seat above the Speaker's chair he daily watches the legislative drama and faithfully records the doings of our M.P.'s."

In Great Britain the Press Gallery is a highly organized machine.

Each seat in the Press Gallery is carefully allotted to the representatives of the different newspapers. "The central place immediately above the Speaker's Chair is reserved for the representative of The Times' chief of staff, who has on his left The Times' reporter and his right The Daily Telegraph. Next to The Times reporter is The Times' summary writer, for the first newspaper in the kingdom enjoys the privilege of three representatives in the gallery. Many of the papers, however, depend on the press agencies for their Parliamentary reports, and do not send representatives," says Mr. J. D. Symon, in "The Press and Its Story." "The reporters are organized in gallery corps of from three to sixteen members each, all expert stenographers."

The work of each reporter in the House is governed by certain instructions relating to the space which can be afforded in the paper which he represents to the speeches of the various members. These instructions run something like this: "Asquith, 1st person, fully. Churchill, 1st person, cut down. Bonar Law, fully. Cecil 3rd person, good summary. Remainder of debate must be kept to lines."

On great historic occasions the staff of representatives is considerably augmented. For instance, on the memorable April 8th, 1886, when Mr. Gladstone introduced his Home Rule Bill, nearly every paper had sent out the instruction, "Gladstone, 1st person, verbatim." On some papers nearly twenty reporters were required, working in relays of three, five or ten-minute "takes."

Much depends, of course, on what debate is going on as to whether a reporter has a busy time or not, and if there is little of importance happening he has a welcome period of leisure which he may spend in the smoking-room, tea-room, or dining-room. But if his notebook is full he goes to one of the writing-out rooms provided for gallerymen, where he prepares his "copy" for the press.

Nor are his duties merely the task of slavish reporting, for, as Mr. Symon points out, "a certain amount of discretion is exercised, and hon. members owe a great deal to the reporter, for in the haste and nervousness of public delivery not every period is rounded to a full close. Minor indiscretions of speech, too, are often kindly veiled and modified by the recording angel."

Miners to Have Baths.

Messrs. Fletcher, Burrows & Co., colliery proprietors, of Atherton, have just completed the erection of a lofty and spacious building, containing forty spray baths, for the use of 700 colliers. The water for the baths is supplied from a large tank inside the building capable of holding 500 gallons of water. The collier, after taking off his pit clothes, goes into one of the small recesses and, pressing on a piece of wood with his foot, causes the water to come over him in the form of a spray at a temperature of 96 degrees.

Alive After Eleven Days.

During the unloading of coal from the steamer Tiger, at Cape Town, South Africa, a human hand appeared among the coal in the hold. Excavation revealed a negro, still living, who was buried 11 days ago while trimming coal when the steamer was loaded. He was in the last stages of exhaustion but made a wonderful recovery.

LYNCHING MOB REPULSED.

Sheriff Completes Rout by Deputizing the Ringleaders.

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Dec. 29.—The mob of men who Saturday night battled with Sheriff Brown and his deputies at the Kent county jail in an effort to lynch Norman Mabel, colored, the self-confessed murderer of John R. Coleman, a farmer, dispersed early yesterday after making a final ineffectual effort to rush the jail. The determined stand of the officers who thrice turned back an attack of the infuriated men finally broke the spirit of the would-be lynchers.

Daunted by the determined stand of the officers the men slowly filed out. States Attorney Vickers and Sheriff Brown followed and selected half a dozen who appeared to be the leaders, deputized them and ordered them to come into the jail and aid in its defence. The men selected obeyed although unwillingly.

Apparently paralyzed by this desertion the remainder of the mob began to disperse.

Long Session Expected.

KINGSTON, Dec. 29.—A prolonged session of the reform commission is looked for if there are no confessions by guards at the penitentiary for having been guilty of trafficking in tobacco.

The intention is to take evidence in the cases if no confessions are made. Furthermore, confessions on the part of guards mean immediate dismissal. If there is no confession and a guard is found guilty it will mean six months' imprisonment in jail for the offence.

No intimation has been made by the commission as to what action will be taken against guards who gave their wrong age on their application papers.

Sailors Are Arrested.

LEWES, Del., Dec. 29.—The revenue cutter Seneca Saturday afternoon reached the British steamer Baron Dalmeny, which returned to the Delaware Cape Friday with several of the crew in irons and others injured as a result of a fight with knives among some of the men in the engine room. Officers of the Seneca are making an investigation and may land some of the crew. The steamer is bound from Philadelphia for Avonmouth and was far at sea when the fighting started among the crew, compelling the captain to return in a heavy gale.

Fined For Pointing Gun.

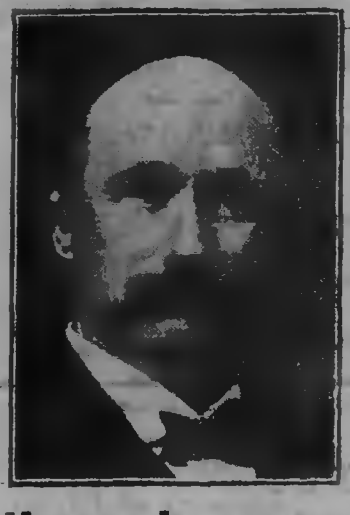
STRATFORD, Dec. 29.—Clarence Flynn, for pointing a gun at Mrs. King, was fined $10 and costs by Police Magistrate O'Sloane and T. H. Beattie, J.P. The case arose from a quarrel which occurred two weeks ago at the home of Mrs. Couzens in Downie. Flynn, it appears, had pointed his gun in the direction of Mrs. King, exclaiming, "I can shoot and pay for it." In court he declared this was but an assertion of his rights to shoot in the neighboring bush, and not a threat.

Stratford's New Fire Bylaw.

STRATFORD, Dec. 29.—In a new bylaw drawn up by the fire and light committee th fire limits have been changed. A new limit, No. 4, has been added, and in No. 3 rearrangement has practically taken place. The provisions for building, too, have received attention in their applications to large buildings, such as churches, schools and assembly halls. The bylaw goes into effect at once.

Railway Telegraphers To Strike.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 29.—The strike committee of the Order of Railway Telegraphers Saturday night issued orders for the telegraphers on the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad to strike on Monday if the conference with the receivers of the Frisco to-day is fruitless. The telegraphers, it is announced, will make no concessions, and a strike is regarded as inevitable.



HYDRO-JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the North Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterboro, all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the city council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honor of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric System into the city, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of this confidence by again electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the people. Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your council of 1913, I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality, and being run in the interests of the people and not in the interests of a monopoly.

W. J. JOHNSTON.

TO THE RATEPAYERS

— OF —

Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

There is one thing on which the Council and people should stand together. That is our Hydro-Electric and Municipal Power and Light policy. In their own interests the electors should assist in electing men who will see that policy through. A good beginning has been made. See that it is completed.

I am in with that policy as a citizen and will be—if elected—as an alderman, and shall be glad to receive your vote to place me in Council.

Yours respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

JOSEPH SAUNDERS.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE NORTH WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practicing my profession here for seven years.

My policy briefly is this: An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the City's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for alderman in the North Ward.

Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

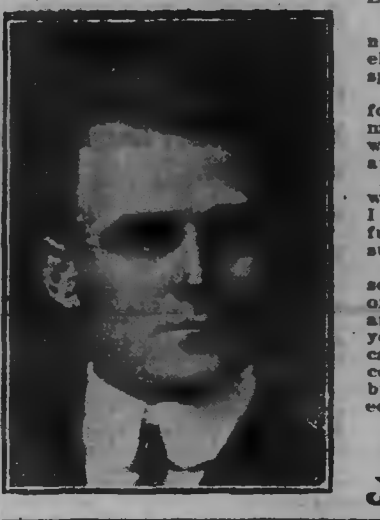
To the Electors of the West Ward



LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for reelection as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers and other interests in the ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavoring to consider all questions in a fair and businesslike manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of municipal ownership and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

PUCK CHASERS DO THEIR FIRST TURN; MATERIAL LOOKS GOOD

King Hockey reascended to his throne on Saturday evening and can be expected to reign supreme for a few months. For weeks the fans have been following the dope and murmuring unparliamentary words when the weather man handed out the unchanged daily slogan of "not much change in temperature." They were about to give up hope when at last the winds turned to the north and the mercury was forced to play a losing battle. Little by little it grew colder and then the rink was flooded on Friday night. Saturday evening the Intermediate and Junior O. H. A. men were asked to turn out.

Although Whitby Intermediates are the attraction here next Friday night, the local boys were not out, but no doubt the cause of this was the short notice they were given. Maurice Park, Percy Bond and Walter Flowers were the only boys on skates, and after loosening up some rather dusty muscles, retired and left the ice entirely to the band of Juniors.

Three Goaltenders

Flowers, also Darling and Latimer, who were out with the Juniors, were not minding goal to advantage and therefore could not be expected to show much class. This year the ice was formed right on top of the roller rink floor and as it was dark, the ice is very dark also, this coupled with the poor lighting system, made it hard to see the puck. It is very evident that something along the line of better lighting must be done before the games begin.

Captain Halpin was out as were Barrie, Long and Richardson of last year's team. Considering that this was their first practise the boys were going fairly good. Barrie appears to have the left wing cinched, for he was easily the pick of the bunch. Halpin will in all probability play rover and although he didn't let himself out to any great extent, he pleased the interested spectators with some nifty stick handling. Long was going for keeps and if the big fellow keeps it up, he will prove a sensation. He looks a lot heavier than he did last year and his one hundred and seventy odd pounds should prove a big asset to the defence.

Richardson was out and going good and should give any of the candidates a battle for a place. Rose, last year's centre man, was not out, but will be on hand Tuesday night.

Lads Look Good

The new material shapes up much better than was expected and it will be a rather difficult task to pick out the best. Knapman, the candidate for right wing, is very fast and although a trifle light, puts up a good game. He is a nice stick handler and carries a wicked shot.

Phelan played on the defence most of the time and by the way he was stepping into them, appears to be the makings of a good man. He has the size and should match well with Long. Roy Smith, Regan, Clancy Picard were also out as was Wilfred Stratton. The latter is going to school in Toronto, but being home for the holidays, grasped the opportunity of loosening up.

The boys all are in fairly good condition, and with a few more practices, should give Jim Sutherland's Frontenacs a merry old battle on the 6th.

FRED DENISON BATTLED ALONE WITH WHOLE CLEVELAND FORWARD LINE

cleveland [illegible]

During the heat of battle in the second half, two Ottawa men, the strength of the collegians' offense, Braitwaite and DeFour, were sent to the bench for alleged fouling. With the removal of the bulwark of the Canucks' chargers, this left Ottawa with only one forward, Dennison by name. The four defense men were kept within reach of the Ottawa goal while Dennison battled in Cleveland territory to keep the puck away from the Ottawa dead line.

Dennison fought like a than with Winters, Elder, Debernardi and Trimble for the puck. At one time he nursed it over to the wall and he held is against the cutting and chopping swings of the Cleveland hockeyists. Once he got the disc away, but he was crowded against the wall again and slowly sank to the ice from the concerted attack of the Cleveland goal defenders. Dennison made a gallant fight to stave off the inevitable score, but four were too many for him.

Derocher played another star game at defense for Ottawa. In the short period of one minute he stopped no less than five shots made at him, every one of them a difficult drive to block. He stopped one drive on the point of his chin. It almost knocked him out, but it prevented a sure score.

CUB SQUAD IS CUT DOWN

Some Youngsters Have Failed to Show up for Training

The Faithful Few Will Now Work out in Regular Practice

Manager Craig of the Peterboro Junior O. H. A. team has asked The Review to state, that owing to the fact that the local juniors play their first game a week from tomorrow night, and that there will only be two or three practices before that time, he has found it necessary to cut down his squad at once in order that the regulars may get some team practice. A number of players who announced their intention of trying for the team but have made no effort to get into shape, will not be given an opportunity now with the first game only a week away. The most promising of the candidates who fail to catch a place will be with the Junior City League teams and will be available at any time for the O. H. A. squad. There will be another junior practice tomorrow Tuesday night, at 7 o'clock, and only the following players are requested to be on hand:

Halpin, Rose, Barrie, Richardson, Long, Knapman, Phelan, Roy Smyth Latimer, Darling, Swanston, Walker.

Players whose names are not given in the above list will realize the importance of the regulars having an opportunity of perfecting their team work, an impossibility with a big squad out.

Not a Recommendation.

"Have you any objection to my marrying your daughter?"

"No," replied Mr. Cumrox. "To be candid, I've taken quite a liking to you."

"Then I may count on you as a friend?"

"I shouldn't do anything like that if I were you. If you introduce yourself as a friend of mine mother and the girls will take it for granted that you haven't any social standing whatever."

LANSFIELD AND McMARTIN BEFORE O.H.A. TRIBUNAL

Oshawa Players Also on the Carpet and Are Given Warning

The adjourned meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association was held Saturday afternoon at The Telegram office, Toronto, with President Charles Farquharson of Stratford, in the chair. Other members present were J. Ross Robertson, Toronto; Kenneth Casselman, London; James T. Sutherland, Kingston; Dwight J. Turner, of Toronto; C. L. Macnab of Orillia; Frank Hyde of Woodstock; A. E. Copeland, of Midland; Francis Nelson of Toronto; Sheriff J. T. Panton of Whitby, and Secretary W. A. Hewitt.

Further information was received regarding the player, John F. Schultz, and the committee decided that he should play in Stratford and not in Goderich. Schultz is a railroad brakeman with headquarters in Stratford.

The Mitchell Junior O. H. A. team was granted permission to play intermediate hockey in the Northern Hockey League.

The committee decided that where teams are compelled to play their home games on foreign ice, the basis of mileage to visiting teams should be on the exact distance they have to travel, while in the return games they should receive mileage from their own town to their opponent's ice.

Local Players

Further information will be required from Lansfield and McMartin, who desire to play with Peterboro. They played last year with the Syracuse team, which was under the O. H. A. ban.

A declaration was received regarding the residence of A. A. Hall, in London, and the committee accepted the same. Hall is in business in London. He formerly played with Collingwood.

N. Jacobs, one of the suspended Waterloo Juniors of last year was reinstated.

Warning Given

Walter Fair of Oshawa, and Charles Blanchard of Whitby, were warned about playing in town baseball leagues where outsiders have played. The boys claimed to have been innocent of any knowledge that there was any wrong doing.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Emilio Palemro, a Cuban pitcher, who is to be given a try-out by the Giants next season, is only 17 years old.

With Bob Bescher, George Burns and Jack Murray in the Giants' outfield, there is no room for Fred Snodgrass. In all probability he will figure in a trade before next season.

Charlie Herzog has a big job ahead of him as manager of the Cincinnati team. He will play at short himself.

Fred Clarke recently signed his 21st contract as manager of the Pittsburg National League club.

Fifteen persons were killed in baseball games in the 1913 season, is reported, but—not a single umpire.

BASEBALL

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 29.—That a former big leaguer as manager of Canadian team, or even a player, is a big drawing card, was proven emphatically when Frank Bowerman jumped the London team. The moguls when the season ended, found that the receipts did not come near the mark set when Frank decided to shake the dust of this city from his feet, hence the powers-that-be are once more angling for an ex-big leaguer, and this time the name of Nick Altrock has been mentioned.

A shareholder of the London club said there was little doubt but what an ex-player from either the National or American leagues would be manager of the London Canadian league team for the season of 1914.

Nick Altrock is given credit by Clarke Griffith for the good showing of more than one Washington pitcher, but Ban Johnson, the czar of the American league, has banned Nick on account of the burlesque work pulled off by him and his co-star, Germany Schaeffer and Nick's arms have gone the way of many others, his fondest hope is to manage a minor league club.

At present Nick is pulling lumber in the White Sox Park, Chicago, for forty cents an hour.

The shareholder of the local club already mentioned, stated that Altrock's name and a recommendation of the former American leaguer's work had been brought to his notice and that the London club would get in touch with Altrock immediately.

Belleville Players

The following players have been registered with the O. H. A. for the Belleville Intermediates.

Waxing Floors.

Old floors can be waxed quite successfully if a little time and care are given over to the work. The floors should first be washed thoroughly and then, when dry, coated with some floor oil, such as linseed oil. This should be at once rubbed with sawdust, which removes all surplus oil and polishes the floor. After this any wax may be used, according to its directions, and then, after a weighted brush is used, the old floors will be as smooth as new oaken ones.

The Car of the Canadian Family

Hupmobile "32" Touring Car, $1,230. With electric starter, over size tires and other additional equipment $1,380 f.o.b. Windsor.

This Beautiful New Hupmobile is now on display at our showrooms. The new Hupmobile is, we believe, better than anything that has ever before come to us from the factory.

And this is no slight praise—for this new Hupmobile is far, far from being an ordinary car. It is an extraordinary car. A car whose intrinsic value and inherent quality are not expressed in the Hupmobile price.

Bluntly, it is an infinitely better car than the price implies. It is a car of characteristics unusual at the price. You have heard us say: "We believe the Hupmobile to be the best car in its class in the world. We mean that sincerely and strongly.

Every man in our organization is imbued with the conviction that it has no equal in its type and at its price. We stand ready to demonstrate as much to you.

We are prepared to dissect the car for your benefit—to justify the faith that we have by pointing out the precise particulars in which the Hupmobile excels.

We will explain to you that its construction embodies a larger use of aluminum than any other car—at any price in the world.

We will show you that a larger volume of costly steel is engaged in its production than in the construction of any car of like price.

See us to-day. We want the opportunity to prove what we say is true. No cost or obligation.

PUCKERINGS FROM PUCK

SOME MATERIAL for the O.H.A. Intermediate team may be available from the Test Department team of the Mercantile League. Munro, who is credited with having played for McDougal who hails from the Maritime provinces and Phillips of Quebec, will be on the lineup as will Joe Dwyer, who played last year with the local Senior O. H. A. team. Phillips played for the Machine Shop in the Mercantile League two years ago, and showed considerable speed.

TONIGHT the Intermediates practise at seven; tomorrow night the Juniors at the same hour and the Intermediates again on Wednesday evening. Thursday morning both teams will practise. The hours will be announced later.

PRESENTATION TO MR. DEVEY

Bronze Timepiece From the Officials of Church and Sunday School.

After the evening service last night a very interesting presentation was made to Mr. R. J. Devey, by the officials of St. John's church and Sunday school, of a bronze timepiece, of handsome design, to mark their appreciation of five years' service as Sunday school superintendent. The Rev. Canon Davidson spoke in feeling terms of the faithful services rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Devey and their sons, which were endorsed by Mr. H. W. Morphet, warden, who made the presentation, and Mr. Frank Linton. Mr. Devey in thanking the speakers and all concerned for their splendid present, felt that much that had been said was undeserved, as he had stepped in at a difficult time five years ago, and only tried to do his duty. A beautifully engraved plate with name and dates is affixed to the timepiece.

PERSONAL

It is the desire of the publishers that all take an interest in this column of The Review. If you have friends visiting you, or are going away for a trip, leave word with the editor, or send particulars on a post card.

Mr. W. Greenwood of Toronto, returned yesterday afternoon after spending a few days in the city.

Messrs. Leo. Barnett and J. Holmes of Detroit, and Messrs. Jack Evans and Art Sharpe of Toronto, left yesterday on the C. P. R. 4:33 after spending a few days at their homes.

Robert M. Fair, McGill University student, is spending a part of the Xmas holidays, the guest of his uncle, Mr. Robert Fair, 505 Dickson St.

Miss Margaret O'Brien, daughter of Mr. G. O'Brien, 533 Gilmour St., who fell Christmas Eve, and badly sprained her arm, is reported to be doing nicely.

By kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Clegg, the senior officers attending the Charity Ball in the Conservatory on New Year's evening will be allowed to wear full uniform.

Mrs. Geo. Swain, Togo, Sask., is here on a visit, called by the illness of her brother, Mr. Cunningham.

Mr. N. Wilsen has returned to Toronto, after spending the holidays the guest of his parents.

Miss Agnes Dougans of Ottawa Ladies College, has returned to Pembroke after visiting Mrs. J. C. Shook in the city over the vacation.

Mrs. L. T. Acton of Toronto, is a guest of Mrs. Hopwood, Simcoe St.

Miss Marion Rusk is home from Brockville spending her vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Rush, Brock St.

Prof. Schlochow and daughter, Norma spent Christmas in Toronto. Mrs. Schlochow will return from California early in the new year.

Miss Irene Pentland, Stewart St., has returned from a pleasant visit at Norwood.

The formal opening of the new wing of the Nicholl's Hospital, will take place Thursday afternoon and evening, New Year's Day, and the public are cordially invited to attend by the hospital board.

The service at St. John's Church Sunday evening was full choral and was one of the most beautiful ever given in Peterboro. A very large congregation listened with delight to the Christmas carols and anthems rendered by the choir in an exquisite style. The expession and feeling with which every number was given, left nothing to be desired by the most critical and the greatest praise is due to Mr. Dewey and his assistants, for such a musical treat.

LAID AT REST

The remains of the late Maxwell [illegible] Weir of Toronto, who passed away in Toronto on Friday, were brought to this city last night, and the funeral was held this afternoon from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Boyler to the Little Lake Cemetery.

JUDGE REID SPOKE.

ONTARIO'S MUSEUM.

New Institution Is To Be Opened Soon After New Year's.

One glance into the Egyptian room of the new Royal Ontario Museum, which will be opened to the public shortly after the turn of the year, is sufficient to interpret the phrase in the book of Exodus: "Against all the gods of Egypt." To see a number of these various gods degenerated to showcase articles for the enlightened populace of a twentieth century city and to see something of the mode of life in those far-off days is to secure a vivid glance into the depths of the past. But what is a great museum for if not to record the activities of past man in his endeavors to add to his material comfort on the one side, and his methods of defence and offence on the other side, with something of his higher and religious tendencies interspersed?

But the riches of the museum date farther yet, for there are things here which belong to prehistoric times and that is anything anterior to 5,000 B.C. What has the museum to offer from these remote times? There are the remains of a man who lived and toiled in northeastern Africa before the world had known how to construct elaborate burial caskets. When this chap's turn came to die his comrades wrapped the remains in a rude grass mat and in this condition he is to be seen to-day in our new museum.

Close by the Egyptian room there are several cases of Roman camp equipment and the frying pans and many predecessors of our present day pots and pans, to say nothing of door locks and hinges, are elaborately carved. It is interesting to note from the case inscriptions that much of this Roman material has been unearthed in Upper Egypt, belonging in all probability to some military expedition.

A very fine model of the Acropolis and Mars Hill is presented to view and these structures form a striking contrast to the model of houses used by the poorer class of Egyptian peasants.

Leaving the room where the relics of these past empires are stored we come on representative collections of later peoples such as the Venetians and medieval England.

Sir Henry Pellatt has placed his famous collection of armor and weapons within the building and the best portion of a large room is devoted to the display of these articles.

The manner in which man has expended his energies on devices to murder and mutilate his fellows is almost hideous.

The forerunner of the modern automatic pistol is clearly seen in the great ponderous guns which are equipped with many barrels and firing mechanism. Then on the other side the ingenuity expended to offset the terrors of these and other weapons is extremely interesting and includes almost everything from suits of armor upwards.

The students of ethnology, the comparison of the barbarous nations and the civilized, is of great benefit, for one may see the relics of a people who have stood still for centuries contrasted with a race whose ideas, if not ideals, have slowly evolved in the years they have existed.

The Royal Ontario Museum has been seeking a home for some years and now that the Provincial Government and the university have combined on this magnificent house and its contents, Toronto undoubtedly is in possession of one of the finest institutions of its class in America. The upper floors are devoted to exhibits of a more or less scientific interest, dealing with rocks, minerals, crystals and fossils.

HOCKEY

Bert James, the goal minder from the west, who is living out at Springville, may be in for to-night's practice.

The local hockey club have received communication from the Dominion Bank team of Toronto, in which they signified their willingness to play the local intermediates at Brock street ring one night this week. Owing to the game on Friday evening with Whitby, the local club did not deem it advisable to play with the money men. Several local fans would have liked to seen the Dominion Bank team go as Harold Clancy, the fast Peterborough wing man is on their line-up.

It has been rumored that Fred Kelly, the local intermediate, left wing man, will not play here this winter. Kelly went to his home at Ingersoll for Christmas and was expected back before now. It is said that he is going to play in the Northern Ontario League. The residence rule in that league required the players to be "collected" before Jan. 1st.

WITH THE VERSATILES

MR. GEO. BRET

The London "Versatiles," that clever company of Old Country comedians and comediennes, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for one night, and a New Year's matinee, Thursday, Jan. 1. The opening bill will be the merry mile-a-minute musical melange, "The Canadian Express," which was written specially for this company by the noted English author-manager, F. Stuart-Whyte. The scenes of this cleverly constructed musical gem, are laid on board a tourist car on the Canadian Express, No. 23, Limited.

The company carry a full scenic production for the piece and the costuming is a special feature. The seat sale opens tomorrow (Tuesday) morning.

MUSIC AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The Christmas services at St. John's yesterday were of a joyous character. The Carol Service at 7 p.m. was finely led by a choir of fifty voices. Five carols, "Hark, what mean those holy voices," "Good Christian men rejoice," "See, Holy the Winter Snow," "Sleep, Holy Babe", and "Carol, sweetly carol, were given; also, six numbers from Handel, viz: Pastoral Symphony, There were shepherds, And the angel, O, Thou that tellest, And the glory of the Lord. The Christmas music at St. John's kept up the fine standard now expected, affording a concrete example of what may be accomplished by a purely voluntary body of purely voluntary singers who faithfully attend practice and rehearsals. The Rector and the choirmaster thanked the choir after the service when a move was made to All Saints' Church to join their choir in rehearsing for a choral evening tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

SAID HE CAME FROM ORILLIA

Jas. Morrison, charged with disorderly conduct on Charlotte street, was fined $5.75 by Magistrate Dumble this morning at Police Court.

"Where do you come from?" enquired the Chief.

"Orillia, generally," responded the culprit, with a grin extending beyond his short vandyke.

A porter of the Snowden House gave evidence how Morrison had struch him during an exciting chase around the back yard of the Snowden House.

"Well, you had better tell the Orillia people to behave when they come to a civilized country," was the advice of the Magistrate in imposing the fine.

Japanese Women In Canada.

The immigration of Japanese into Canada is increasing and the feature of the increase is the number of Japanese women who are settling in Canada. Last year 724 Japanese entered Canada. They included 252 males, 424 females and 48 children. During the first six months of the present fiscal year 571 entered Canada, including 235 males, 289 females and 47 children.

MISS JUSTINA WAYNE,

as Diane Eveleth, in Charming Pollock's play, "The Inner Shrine," at the Grand next Saturday.

CAPTURED BY INDIANS.

Ancestor of Joseph Phaneuf, M.P.P., Was Really an Englishman

Mr. Joseph Phaneuf, of St. Hughes Que., who at the bye-election a few months ago was elected to represent Bagot County in the Quebec Provincial Legislature, has drawn my attention to the peculiar origin of his name. It appears from the new M.P.P.'s own statement that Phaneuf is really a corruption of the old English name of Farnsworth, and thereby hangs a tale. It seems that the original Canadian ancestor of the Phaneufs was Claude Mathias Farnsworth, who when a lad of fourteen years of age, and residing with his parents on their clearing near Croton Maine, was taken prisoner by a raiding party of Abenakis Indians from the district south of Lake St. Peter For some time he lived among the Indians, until a French missionary learning of his captivity induced his captors to give him up, and he was adopted and educated by the Sulpicians. In 1710, having been meantime baptized into the Roman Catholic faith, he married a French-Canadian girl, Catherine Charpentier, became to all effects and purposes a French-Canadian, and served in the French militia of New France.

His family name by a species of evolution passed through the forms Farneth, Fanef and Faneuf, and finally became Phaneuf, which latter name is borne by a large number of French-Canadians who are direct descendants of the little captive English backwoods boy. At Caughnawaga and St. Regis, there are several families descended from men and women when boys and girls, captured by Canadian Indian war parties in the old days in the Dutch and New England colonies, and brought to Canada Mr. Phaneuf is a typical French-Canadian in appearance, but proud of his English ancestry. As well become his blood he speaks and writes English fluently and has had his children educated to do the same. He is a general merchant and director of two well known St. Hyacinthe insurance companies, "L'Assurance Mutuelle du Commerce" and "The Mercantile Fire Insurance Co." He is fifty years of age.—Montreal Star.

An Undesirable Similarity.

One of the most beloved prelates in North America is Rt. Rev. Bishop Jones, for nearly two score years the honored head of the Anglican See of Newfoundland, which includes not only the rugged island of the Ancient Colony, but also such striking contrasts as the bleak and wild coast of Labrador and that Summer Paradise of the Seas, Bermuda.

Bishop Jones has at times a trick of absent-minded and musing reminiscence which produces unexpectedly humorous effects. About six years ago a new organist and choirmaster Mr. Alfred Allan, of Oxford, was appointed for the cathedral at St John's, and he began his engagement while the bishop was absent on a tour of visitation. Mr. Allan was naturally solicitous to learn how his services were regarded by the bishop the church officials, the congregation and the choir members, so he was greatly pleased when, a month later the bishop, upon his return, came to him after church and complimented him on the good impression he had created.

"I hear fine accounts of you, and the choir are especially pleased with you, Mr. Allan," said the bishop genially. "They tell me that you remind them greatly of one of your predecessors, Mr. B., who was very popular indeed. Very fine man, he was too. Your methods of teaching are somewhat like his, and you resemble him in many ways." Then, without any perceptible change in voice or manner, the good bishop added: "He's in the asylum now."—Toronto Saturday Night.

In Danger of Getting Lost.

A young barrister was once arguing a case before Chief Justice Barker of New Brunswick. His brief was an elaborate one, and his argument very technical and tedious; and finally the judge began to lose interest in the abstruse deductions of the youthful Blackstone.

"Pardon me, your honor," said the lawyer, "but do you follow me?"

"So far I have," replied the judge, "but if I could find my way back I'd gladly stop right here."

See Us and See Better

Glasses and Good Vision

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.

Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. are long experienced and have a wide and enviable reputation for ability. Our equipment is one of the most complete in Canada and we know how to use it.

Gerostieta May Be President While Huerta Licks Rebels.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 29.—That Enrique Gerostieta, Minister of Justice will become President of Mexico early in the new year, and that Gen. Huerta will take the field against the rebels who refuse to conform to this arrangement, is the report that has been received with credence by some of the diplomatic representatives here. Gerostieta is to be named Minister of Foreign Affairs, according to the version of the story in circulation, and Gen. Huerta will retire from the Presidency, in which case the Foreign Minister succeeds him.

Senor Gerostieta is well along in years. He was a lawyer at Monterey who was brought to the capital to take the portfolio of finance, but instead was appointed Minister of Justice.

MANY ARE CHOSEN FOR REEVE BUT FEW ACCEPT NOMINATION

Ten Names Were Proposed for the Reeveship at Norwood

THE COMPLETE LIST

NORWOOD, Dec. 30.—A large number of ratepayers asembled in the Town Hall last evening at 7:30 to nominate Reeve, Councillors and School Trustees. The people of the village have seldom shownm ore enthusiasm in the selection of the men who have the management of the finances of the village, than at the present, which augures well for the welfare of the village.

Fully two hundred men were present, who by the number of names submitted, showed they were anxious of securing men who would fulfil theiro bligations in the best interests of the village.

For the Reeveship

The following names were proposed for Reeve: Arthur Breault, by John Baskin, seconded by P. M. Grover. C. E. Pakenham, by James Andrews and Harry Wildman.

James Andrews, by T. E. Roraback and R. S. Ivey.

Chas. A. Reilly, by Hugh Robb and John Baskin.

Rev. W. W. Low, by Thos. Watson and James Calder.

Rev. P. J. Kelly, by Dr. Sutton and J. F. Pearge.

Dr. N. F. Sutton, by J. A. Robb and Robert Tedford.

J. Geo. Keefer, by W. A. Richardson and S. Hendren.

E. P. Cuffe, by J. G. Keefer and K. G. Thomson.

B. W. Squire, by W. H. Brethren and Thos. Watson.

For Councillors

Stanley Hendren, by A. Davidson and Hugh Robb.

J. R. McKelvie, by Hugh Robb and Fred Anderson.

Wm. E. Pakenham, by F. Anderson and C. W. Waters.

Richard Girven, by R. S. Ivey and T. E. Roraback.

Thos. Morrison, by W. A. Richardson and D. Mahoney.

John McLaughlin, by W. J. Gilders and John Hendren.

Samuel Wildman, by John White and Percy Wilson.

Walter Sedgewick, by F. J. Stewart and W. J. McLaughlin.

Wm. Portway, by Thos. Watson and C .J. Searight.

For School Trustees

Samuel Wildman, by N. C. Porter and R. G. Martin.

Harry Wildman, by S. Hendren and W. A. Richardson.

P. M. Grover, by J. R. McKelvie and C. J. Searight.

Samuel Ivey, by C. J. Searight and J. R. McKelvie.

J. F. Elliott, by Thos. Burkell and John Doherty.

Fred Anderson, by W. H. Cuthbertson and W. H. Brethen.

Hugh Robb, by Chas. O'Reilly and A. Davidson.

E. P. Cuffe, by John Doherty and T. Burkell.

A. B. Greenback, by B. W. Squire and S. Hendren.

Edwin H. Scott, by F. B. Garlick and Wm. Portway.

Hydro Electric

Reeve Breault outlined the steps necessary to the securing electric power from the Hydro Commission. He is in the field and asked for the support of the electors.

Mr. Andrews said he thought the Hydro power would be a good thing for the village.

Mr. O'Reilly thought the council of Norwood should put a license on the sale of cigarettes. He said he was not a candidate, but hoped the ratepayers would put the men in the council who would be best fitted to serve the best interests of the village.

Rev. Mr. Low was glad of an opportunity to address the people of Norwood. He would not be in the field as a candidate for Reeve. He advocated the election of men who had a broad public spirited interest in the welfare of the community.

Mr. Pakenham in discussing the electric power question, said he would be glad to see the electric power established in Norwood. He complimented Mr. Harrison on the quality of the light he supplies to the village. But power would be a good thing for our village. Mr. Pakenham said he would not be a candidate.

Rev. P. J. Kelly asked that his name be withdrawn from the list of candidates. He thought the hydro power should be sought after, not as a means of lighting the village, as we already had a good light. But we need power so that we may be able to make a fair bid for manufacturers. He thought it would be a good thing for the farming community surrounding the village. He thought the village should take steps to instal a water works system in Norwood. A good system could be installed for $15,000.

Dr. Sutton asked permission to withdraw. He was pleased to see the increasing interest taken in the hydro electric and fire protection.

Mr. Keefer said he was heartily in favor of both hydro power and fire protection if it could be procured at not too high a cost. He wished to withdraw.

Mr. Cuffe on account of being nominated as a school trustee, asked to be excused, at the present and would say a few words later on.

Mr. B. W. Squire said he would be in the field as a candidate for the Reeveship, and asked the support of the ratepayers and if elected, would do his best to advance the interests of the village. He was in favor of the electric power for the village.

The nominees for councillors each addressed the meeting.

All the old councillors vis: Stanley Hendren, W. E. Pakenham, and Thos. Morrison said they were in the field and asked for the support of the ratepayers.

Mr. Richard Girven, Wm. Portway and J. R. McKelvie said they were in the field and promised to do their best, if elected, in the interests of the village.

For school trustees the following gentlemen said they would be candidates: Messrs. Samuel Wildman, Samuel Ivey, John F. Elliott, E. P. Cuffe, and A. B. Greenback.

TWO NOMINEES FOR REEVESHIP AT LAKEFIELD

Six Nominations for Position in the Village Council.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 30.—The nominations for Reeve, Councillors and Trustees held last evening, were as follows:

For Reeve—

YOUNG LADIES RECEIVE THE HOLY HABIT

A very impressive ceremony took place this morning at Mount St. Joseph, when nine young ladies took their first vows and received the habit. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien said low mass, assisted by Very Rev. Dean McColl and Rev. C. J. Phelan. Monsignor Casey, of Lindsay, preached an appropriate sermon upon the happiness which is inevitable when one answers the call of his or her true vocation in life.

Among those present in the sanctuary were Monsignor Murray, of Cobourg Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father Cote, Rev. Father McCauley, Rev. Father Galvin and Rev. P. J. Kelly, of Norwood.

ALDERMEN SORRY TO PART WITH MAYOR BRADBURN

Last night before council adjourned, Ald. Johnston, Buller Gillespie, Duffus and Gordon spoke appreciateively of the work and worth of Mayor Bradburn and Ald. Gordon extended to His Worship a resolution of appreciation.

In reply, Mayor Bradburn expressed his regret at leaving the council, to go out into the cold world, as it were. He said the years spent in the Mayor's chair, were happy ones and he felt that he had always endeavored to do his duty.

HOW TO VOTE

There seems to be some danger of a misconception among voters as to how to vote. Each voter can only vote for one alderman, viz: the candidate for his ward.

There are eight candidates for the Education Board, but only five of these can be elected, so that a voter can only vote for five. The same applies to all other boards.

A voter cannot make a mistake, as each ward has a separate ballot paper with definite instructions as to what to do.

Choir Practice.

Knox Church Choir will practice Wednesday night at 9.15, preceding the watchnight service.

School Days.

Inspector Mowat, of the Public School staff, informed The Review to-day that the Public schools would re-open next Monday morning.

IMPROVEMENT MUST BE MADE

Mr. Darcy Must Comply With Law at Burleigh House.

A letter was read at the Board of Water Commissioners yesterday afternoon from Dr. Clinton, stating that Mr. Darcy of the Burleigh House at Burleigh Falls, had been notified that if he did not comply with the law by the next season, that his house would be closed.

The above was in regard to the Burleigh House, which was reported as being far from satisfactory in the recent report of the condition of the sanitation at the lakes.

Rates Adjusted

The adjustment of reduced rates for the water for Mr. Wyatt of Cricket Place was confirmed by the Board.

The various accounts were presented and disposed off.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT THE Y.M.C.A.

On New Year's Day the boys of the city will be entertained by the Boys' Department from 9:30 to 12. Games and other amusements will be the feature of the morning, and a delightful time is anticipated by the members.

A basket ball game is being arranged between the old boys and the new boys in the men's department for the evening.

PRODUCERS OF MILK ORGANIZE

Enthusiastic Meeting to Discuss Wholesale Price of Milk

At a meeting of twenty farmers interested in the production of milk, an organization was formed to be known as the Milk Producers' Association.

The meeting was a most enthusiastic one and the discussion was on the subject of the wholesale price of milk.

It was pointed out that the milk producer could not put up milk as cheap as in the past because the price of cows had advanced as had also feed and labor. Also, it was almost impossible to hire the proper help to milk and give the attention necessary to dairy cattle.

The majority of the farmers felt that their's was slavish work and it was early and late hours, in all seven days of the week. They always had to be on the job.

Retailer Makes Money

It was claimed that it was the retailer who was making the money, as some are buying milk from the producers at 3½ cents and 4 cents per quart.

It was decided to allow the price to remain at 4 cents per quart for the remainder of the winter and that the price for next summer be four cents. The president of the Association is W. J. Cox, and Walter McKee is secretary treasurer.

GRAND DUKE DEFENDS HIS CHARACTER.

GRAND DUKE BORIS OF RUSSIA

Grand Duke Boris of Russia, cousin of the Tsar, appeared in open court before the Lord Chief Justice in London to personally refute the libelous attack on his honor made in last April's issue of Munsey's Magazine and to challenge the proof of any of the statements constituting the libel.

He left the court room with a complete vindication and apologies from Mr. Frank A. Munsey and all concerned directly or indirectly in the baseless charges and expressions of satisfaction from the Lord Chief Justice that he had so openly exposed and shattered them.

The whole procedure was a convincing blow at a class of muckraking literature which recently has become an outstanding feature of certain American publications.

CITY DADS WERE SUSPICIOUS AND WOULD NOT RECORD THE PROPOSITION OF MR. O'CONNELL FOR THE POWER COMPANIES

COUNCIL IS WILLING HOWEVER TO PERMIT THE POLES OF THE OTONABEE POWER COMPANY TO REMAIN ON THE STREETS UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE—

Whereas, since passing the resolution, directing the removal of the poles, of the Otonabee Power Company from the streets; the Council have learned that this would inconvenience a number of ratepayers, that, without prejudice to the rights of the city, the Council is willing that the poles of the Otonabee Power Company remain on the streets until further notice from the Council, and that if the proposition made by Mr. O'Connell is put in writing, it be referred to the incoming council.

This resolution moved by Alderman Johnston and Duffus was the outcome of a surprise visit paid to the council last night by Mr. D. O'Connell and Mr. W. H. Munro, of the Peterboro Light and Power Company.

Mr. O'Connell's proposition was follows:

That the Otonabee Power Company be permitted to sell their distribution system to the Peterboro Light and Power Company, and that the city have a reasonable time to consider the proposition.

A resolution first drafted for the council by the Clerk, after hearing Mr. O'Connell, was "That this Council recommend that the new Council consider the proposition advanced by Mr. O'Connell.

Mr. O'Connell did not want this resolution and remained firm for the resolution to be framed as stated. Both he and the city solicitor left the committee room for the purpose of trying to reach an agreement, but failed. Then the council passed their resolution.

Purchase price of $48,000

Mr. O'Connell had taken up the proposition as outlined in the letter of the Peterboro Light and Power Company and the Otonabee Power Company, which appeared in the press a short time ago. This letter asked the council for permission from the council, for the Peterboro Light and Power Company to buy out the other Company for $48,000. It was provided that in the event of the city taking over the Peterboro Light and Power Company, the Otonabee Power assets would be turned over to the city at the price paid, namely, $48,000; or if the city decided the price to be excessive, that question could be taken up with a view to deciding the price to be paid.

A Business Proposition

Mr. O'Connell held that this was a straight business proposition. With the city expropriating the Peterboro Light and Power Co., the distribution system of the other Company would be necessary.

Need Both Systems

All the city is not covered by the Peterboro Light and Power Company, but it is by the two companies. To supply the service of power both are necessary. Should the city not have the distribution system of the Otonabee Power Company, the cost of completing the whole service would in Mr. O'Connell's opinion, be more than the $48,000 given as the purchase price.

Mr. O'Connell said that if the proposition would be considered by the incoming council, the lighting service would be continued.

Franchise Extension

Then it was sugested that the council might extend the franchise of the Otonabee Power Company, month by month, up till the proposition was considered by council. The Mayor and the City Solicitor were of the opinion that action such as this could be taken. To extend the franchise more than one year, it would be necessary to secure the consent of the people.

Mr. O'Connell took another view of the matter. He held that the franchise could not be extended whatever without the consent of the people.

The final disposition of the question by the council did not elicit any statement as to whether or not the Otonabee Power Company would continue in business after their franchise expires on Wednesday.

Only Part Needed

Ald. Johnston said that the estimate of the Hydro-Electric Commission was that $5000 would cover the cost of that part of the Otonabee Power Company, needed by the city, to cover the whole city, by adding it to the distribution system of the Peterboro Light and Power Company. Mr. O'Connell argued that one part was not enough. The whole distribution system of the Otonabee Company was necessary.

NEW ZEALAND SENDS HER BUTTER AND MEATS

OTTAWA, Dec. 30.—The trade and commerce department is advised that the Marama left Auckland, New Zealand, on Nov. 21, the principal items of cargo for Canada being 17,500 boxes of butter, 278 carcases of veal and 1,250 carcases of mutton.

WATCH NIGHT AT BETHANY TABERNACLE

A watchnight service will be held in Bethany Tabernacle beginning at 8.30 o'clock Wednesday evening. Those who attend will be favored with an address by Dr. R. H. Glover, the Deputational Secretary of the Christian and Missionary Alliance.

OPEN AIR RINK FOR EACH WARD

Water Commissioners Will Supply the Water Without Charge

Mayor Bradburn Offers the Use of His Lot for one Rink

The city council of 1914 may decide to go into the open air rink business so that the young people of each ward may have a rink. Last night council received the following letter from the Board of Water Commissioners:

The Mayor and Council:
Gentlemen,—

It has occurred to the Commissioners that it would be a good thing for the children of the city if open air skating rinks were provided and properly supervised by the attendants appointed and paid by the city council.

We ask you to give this your serious consideration and if you decide to establish it, we would be pleased to assist to the extent of supplying the water for the flooding of the rink as often as necessary and also provide the labor to put the water on, for which no charge would be made.

We suggest that open air rinks in each ward be provided, temporary shelter erected and attendants provided for each rink.

Yours truly,
T. F. MATTHEWS,
Chairman.

"A good idea," said Mayor Bradburn. "I have a lot next to the Bell Telephone Co., and the council can have it."

"I'd like to see some provision made for sleighriding," remarked Ald. Anderson.

It was decided to leave the matter with the members of the council, not retiring, and bring the question before the incoming council.

The city would have to employ a man to take care of each rink; build shelters and pay operating expenses.

The Peterboro Light and Power Co., asked for a settlement for the damages done to their gas main, when a sewer was being constructed to the Nicholl's Hospital.

"That's been a kind of football for some time," remarked Ald. Johnston.

Ald. Gordon said it was legacy for next year.

Wm. F. Huffman was granted a license for two months without cost. He had a pool room at the National Hotel, but in view of the alterations to be made, his business will suffer and it would not pay him to remove till the alterations are completed. He is a cripple and the council looked upon his request with favor.

* * *

An account from the National Sanitarium Association for $62.30 was passed on to the Finance Committee. The account is for patients from Peterboro.

* * *

The compliments of the season were extended to council in a communication received last night from Lt. Col. C. H. Rogers, on behalf of the Third Prince of Wales Dragoons.

* * *

A resolution was passed making the Hydro-Electric debentures payable in Toronto and Montreal. This was the request of the purchasers.

* * *

Peck, Kerr and McElderry wrote on behalf of M. Carton, asking unstated damages for Mr. Carton, because of the accident which befell him at Central Park. A limb from a tree fell on Mr. Carton, and be suffered a compound fracture of the shin bone. The matter was referred to the Legal Committee of the next Council.

* * *

A sidewalk will be provided for the new street running from Bolivar to Sherbrooke Streets.

* * *

A resolution of sympathy for Ald. and Mrs. Duncan, on the loss of their son, was passed, and the clerk was requested to forward the resolution to Ald. Duncan.

PREVENT TRADE SLIPPING AWAY FROM PETERBORO

C.P.R. Will be Asked to Give Morning Service From North on the Port McNicoll Line — Lindsay Gets Trade Now

The C. P. R. will be asked to give a morning service from the north on the Port McNicoll line. At the present time, the service is from Havelock in the morning and the train leaves Peterboro at 9:16.

It is felt that much trade along the line is taken from Peterboro, and it goes to Lindsay. One man at Bethany, in conversation with Mayor Bradburn, said that while he had come to Peterboro before the line was built, now he went to Lindsay.

Now, it is proposed to ask the C. P. R. to give a service from the north. Ald. Buller felt that the Company might make up a mixed train.

One of the members understood that at Lindsay, merchants were soliciting trade with the promise of a free return ticket.

REPORTS BEFORE THE NEW BOARD

The various accounts were presented and passed at the Board of Health meeting this morning. The reports of the Sanitary Inspector and Medical Health Officer will be presented to the new board at the first of the year.

Those present were Ald. Duncan, Chairman, Jas. Murty, Inspector, Spence, Dr. McPherson and Mayor Bradburn.

THE MEETINGS START JAN. 4

Evangelistic Services at Gilmour Memorial Church.

The Gilmour Baptist church 15-days evangelistic campaign, which is to be conducted by Rev. Wilson A. Pugsley, the well-known American evangelist, is to be opened on Jan. 4, next, and not the 14th, as reported in Saturday's Review. Please remember that opening service is on Sunday, Jan. 4th, 1914, at 11 a.m.

MEN WILLING TO DO ODD JOBS

Adjutant McElheney, of the Salvation Army, would like to hear from citizens who could give odd jobs to men out of work.

The Adjutant is in touch with quite a large number of men who are waiting and willing to do any kind of work. His 'phone is 440.

OFFICERS OF BARBERS' UNION

Annual Banquet Will be Held on January 24th.

The annual election of officers for local 402, Journeymen Barbers International Union of America, was held last evening in the Trades and Labor hall, and resulted in the following being elected:

Pres.—John Smith.
Hon.-Pres.—John Riley.
Fin.-Sec.—Wm. Welch.
Treas.—H. Gainey.
Guardian.—W. Flannery.
Trustees—Messrs. Geo. Campbell, B. Snelgrove, L. Morrow and A. Mitchel.

Delegates to Trades and Labor Council.—Messrs Smith, Riley, Gainey, Miller and Flannery.

It was also decided to hold their annual banquet on Monday, Jan. 24th.

WILL REPLY TO MR. COLVILLE

On Question of Continuing the Lighting of Streets.

In regard to the letter of Mr. Colville, saying that the Peterboro Light and Power Company will continue street lighting, for any length of time, Mayor Bradburn and the City Solicitor will consider the matter and the council, last night, gave them power to reply to Mr. Colville.

No Meeting.

There will be no meeting of St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society this Friday evening.

QUESTIONING THE COUNCIL.

THE MAIL AND EMPIRE emits a little wisdom when it says:—"If the citizens would only take as much interest in municipal affairs in April or October as they do the last week of December the city would be better governed."

Many of those who are now asking questions about municipal matters, who want to be initiated into all the intricate business of the Council and have everything explained in five minutes, or less if possible, if they had taken the trouble to ask questions a little earlier, or to read the reports of council proceedings they would have acquired all the information they want.

It is the easiest thing in the world to ask questions and, as every father knows, it is not always the easiest thing in the world to answer them. In all things it is best not to be too dogmatic in your assertions. There are other means of getting information than by accusing men of bungling. It was never anticipated that this electric business would be carried through without a hitch of any kind. No business worth doing was ever done easily, especially where others' interests are involved. The Hydro-Electric scheme has its enemies as well as its friends. Its enemies as a rule are those whose private interests are affected by the scheme. Its friends are those whose interests are centred in the city.

CANADA AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

A NEW LIGHT has been thrown upon the Monroe Doctrine by the London Standard. To those who are not sure what this doctrine is it would be as well to state that it originated at the instigation of the British Statesman, Canning. Canning advised President Monroe to establish a doctrine, or more correctly, a dogma to the effect that Europe was to keep its hands off the American continent; under this doctrine only American powers could deal with matters relating to the American continent. This has been effective in shutting out European colonization of Brazil. Germany would like colonies in South America, but she is barred by the Monroe doctrine. But there are other "American powers" than the United States, and the British Empire is one of them.

The London Standard says:—

"The British Empire is one of the American Powers itself, and its actual extent of territory on the continent is greater than that of the United States. Its population, it is true, is much smaller; but Canada is increasing so rapidly that she may number within her boundaries 20,000,000, or even 50,000,000, of people before many decades have passed. When President Monroe propounded his famous thesis 90 years ago, it was taken for granted that there was and would be only one great civilized community in the two Americas; for Canada was a small colony of pioneers and hunters, and the Spanish Republics seemed to be squabbling their way back to barbarism. The situation is very different to-day. Canada will presently be a great nation, no whit inferior in energy, in material wealth, in all the essentials of modern progress to the United States."

As Canada has increasing interests in several countries of Latin America she must see to it that the United States does not interpret the Monroe Doctrine as debaring her from a hand in the disposal of these American preserves.

MINING UNDER IDEAL CONDITIONS.

IT IS NOT GENERALLY known that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company deals in many other things besides railways. Among these other things is coal. This company operates and owns the only anthracite coal mine in Canada. The mine is not worked in the same way as those in the English coal fields, as it is situated on the side of a mountain in the Cascade Range, near Banff, which is a world-famous tourist resort.

Five seams of coal are now being worked at three different levels. The height of these—the Bankhead Mines—while entailing an expensive means of approach, in the end proves an economy, for the law of gravity comes in, and the breaker gives the necessary impetus to send up an empty car by a cable on the other track.

From the Bankhead Mines an average of a thousand tons a day is produced. About 500 tons of this output is what is known as "marketable coal," while the coal dust, mixed with coal-tar pitch and subjected to a pressure of about 2,240 lbs. to the square inch, becomes "briquettes"—little squares the size of a tablet of soap. About 500 tons of these briquettes are turned out per day.

The mines are operated by the Department of Natural Resources of the C.P.R., and about 450 men are employed, working in two daily shifts of eight hours each. The lowest rate of pay is about $2.50 per day, and the highest $10. The miners themselves are paid on the basis of the number of yards mined, the average received by them being from $3.50 to $5 per day. There is always a job open for competent miners. The average payroll runs to about $35,0000 per month. Excellent bathing accommodation is provided for the men; every man as he comes off duty has a hot or cold shower bath, and leaves his working clothes in his locker, which is hired at a very moderate charge. The company owns the entire village, and has erected houses for its workers, which it leases to them at low rentals, ranging from $7 per month upwards. It has also provided a baseball park, football and tennis grounds, and skating and curling rinks. A doctor is located in the camp.

British miners should note this opportunity. Coal mining in England and Wales is carried on under conditions which are degrading as well as dangerous. And the pay is insufficient to keep a man and his family in decency. If all that is said of the C.P.R. mine is true, then it might be said to be mining under ideal conditions.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

TO BE NOMINATED is a much easier matter than being elected. Many are called, but few are chosen.

IT IS NOT A QUESTION of franchise for the company, the question is whether the city has got the Franchise?

HOW LONG would we have had to wait for the present splendid lighting system on George street if we had been content to be spoon-fed by the company?

IT IS SAID THAT there are to be sleeping cabins on aeroplanes. This petroleum air-bird has already put many "to sleep," and now they can die comfortably in their beds.

SOME SAY there are too many lights on George street. The poles had to go up for the street car service. If the city thinks half the number of lights are sufficient, then the lamps will not be wasted.

CITIZENS MAY rest assured that George street is not the only street that is to have the benefit of the Hydro-Electric scheme. There shall be no more dark alleys when the city gets hold of the lighting.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL, of Belleville, has celebrated his nintieth birthday. He is one of the old patriarchs of politics whose grey hairs are honorable.

DAN CRAWFORD who spent 23 years in the heart of Africa has once more and for ever bid good-bye to civilization. There are still some heroes left.

THE LONON ADVERTISER is fortunate in securing the services of Mr. A. A. MacIntosh as its associate editor. Mr. MacIntosh is well-known among journalists as the capable city editor of the Globe.

THE WORLD is congratulating the people of Toronto on the lack of party feeling in the present municipal elections in that city, pointing out that The Globe, Star and News are supporting Hocken—a pronounced Conservative. There must be a reason for this. Some are unkind enough to attribute this unity of support by the newspapers to the surmise that at least one of those millions which Sir William Mackenzie hopes to receive from the city for his street railway, may find its way into the newspaper coffers. Of course, at this distance, we are unable to say as to the truth of this.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

A Ghost at the Table.

Hamilton Spectator.

In view of its action on the Canadian naval aid bill earlier in the year, if the members of the senile senate spent a happy Christmas, it was much more than they deserved.

An Afluent Editor.

Hamiltan Spectator.

The Toronto News man, in commenting on the lack of art conception in Canada, remarks that, "We fill our bodies with champagne and pate de fois quas till they are fat, while our starving souls are as poor as Job's turkey." Say, that fellow must have a private income.

Bacilli in Clothes Dust.

Westminster Gazette.

In the last issue of the Buffalo Sanitary Bulletin, Dr. F. E. Fronczak mentions some experiments devised to show the dangers of the clothes dust. Clothes soiled with dried tuberculosis sputum were brushed in such a way that guinea-pigs inhaled the dust. Garments having sputum from two to four days oir infected all guinea-pigs. In proportion to the length of time over four days the infectiousness diminished, though one pig was infected from sputum dust that had been drying on the cloth for sixteen days.

Swearing and Spitting.

Montreal Star.

It is worth while paying some attention to the story which Bishop Farthing told the other day of a man who felt compelled to leave his job because of the prevalence of blasphemy and foul language among his fellow-employees. He may have been unduly sensitive, but it is more than likely that he was probably just an ordinary clean-minded man who stood as much as he could and then fled. There is absolutely no doubt that foul languaage is all too prevalent here. No one can walk long on our streets without hearing a succession of oaths and all kinds of obscene expressions. Possibly we are no worse than other cities in this regard, but the evil is increasing. Young boys are sometimes the loudest if not the worst offenders. They learn this vile habit from their elders.

The habit is by no means confined to the riff-raff of the city. It is prevalent among the well-to-do, even amongst men who are honest, hard workers, but entirely careless of what their tongue says. It is not the oath or the curse suddenly spoken in rage or excitement which is worst, though that is bad enough. What matters is that a plentiful supply of muckish words now forms a permanent feature of the ordinary man's vocabulary. The use of foul language is winked at by people who dislike and dispise it, but who have grown hardened to it. If only they could exercise their good taste and show a proper contempt for those who speak the jargon of human pest-houses, much would be done to end this abominable state of affairs. Just as much could be done to kill the spitting habit, cuspidor or no cuspidor, if those who indulge in it were made to feel the disgust of their victims.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—As Mr. Gillespie is a candidate for Mayor, I wish to say something as to his treatment of those who have been employed by him. I have a knowledge of his treatment of his employees, and I beg to say that through sickness, or any other cause, no employee ever lost any time, but received money for all the time they were off work, if caused by sickness or circumstances beyond the control of the employee. Ald. Gillespie always paid a good fair wage, and no person can ever say that he has tried to cut down the wages of his employees in a period of hard times.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

ABOUT GARBAGE.

Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—By ruling in case Andrews versus King, a neighbor may leave garbage where the neighbor's neighbor gets all the benefit?

This is a sad state of affairs. Who knows where we will find it next? On the back door step, most likely, where we are apt to step into it one of these dark mornings. Surely a law once made should be upheld by our justices of the peace at least.

Would Mr. Dumble like to have the fragrance from some other man's garbage creep up the wall and invade the pure atmosphere of his bedroom. We hope his neighbor will do as this other neighbor has done and let Mr. Dumble see things as they should be seen.

Yours truly,
Al. Fresco.

ONE GOOD MAN

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir, —

Mr. A. H. Stratton only comes out, he says, because the city needs good men. Even he would not have consented then to come out, only such a darned lot of people kept insisting on it that he says, "Well, if you must have one good man I'll take a throw and there ye are." Now does he think Mr. Haitch, Morgan and Mr. F. H. Dobbin be no good at all, but only owld garbage, that he consinted to run, fearing the city would go crazy if it hadn't one good swate honest man on the council.

Yours,
Counnon Sinoe.

LABOR AND CAPITAL

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—

Mr. Burnham is correct in theory, but, if those principles were adopted there would be no need of his profession; and I don't see the gain. Unless we have slavery we must have an open labor market; and the same with trade, as long as there is any it must be free or protected, both always. Even the Government could not control the trade in tobacco at Kingston Institution. I would prefer the factory capitalist to the labor boss—no wonder, 50 per cent. of the men on British ships are foreigners—and I would rather be a British farm laborer than live under protection, which vitiates the distribution no less than the prodution of wealth.

Yours, etc.,
A READER.

According to The London Citizen (Labor) the British naval estimate next session will be swollen by more than $5,000,000 for an airship fleet.

The Rt. Rev. Anton Christian Bang, bishop of Christiania and primate of the Norwegian Church, died in Christiana yesterday. He was born in 1840.

The Bishop of Besancon (France) yesterday issued a pastoral letter forbidding the dancing of the tango in his diocese. He says the tange is intensely dangerous.

Jules Vedrines, the French aviator, arrived at Cairo yesterday, thus bringing to a successful end a flight of nearly 3,000 miles, which began several weeks ago from Paris.

John Scott, formerly a prosperous farmer of Peel Township and a member of Wellington County Council for some time, but for the past thirteen years a resident of Guelph., is dead.

Hugh Keith, C.P.R. fireman, a former St. Thomas man and brother of Thomas Keith, editor of The St. Thomas Times, was killed in a railway collision at Moose Jaw, Sask., on Sunday.

Harry Laine, in a violent rage, shot and killed instantly Gousta Peltomeniene and Vesta Allanko, two compatriots, near Sudbury yesterday, and then, putting the revolver into his mouth, shot himself dead.

Frogs For the Meds.

For the use of the embryo doctor a big batch of some thousands of frogs has been obtained by the faculty of medicine in Toronto University. The frogs are not used for French dishes, the idea being merely to try experiments upon them. For instance a student will "pith" a frog that is, make it immune to pain by destroying its brain. He may then expose its heart by dissection. To the heart he will attach an apparatus which records its beats. Drugs which paralyze or stimulate or kill outright are daily used on the small animals in this condition. Often when the monotony of the work becomes too oppressive, there ensues a "frog fight" and many a fellow has to eat frogs' legs that are neither cooked nor cleaned.

Gossip is a deadly gas that is fatal to friendship.

DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service of all such.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By HAROLD MacGRATH

[Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.]

"Good heavens, I didn't say I detested it! What I shrugged about was my own dreary lack of it."

"Bachelors do not require much."

"That's true, but I no longer desire to remain a bachelor." The very thing that saved him was the added laughter, forced, miserably forced. Fool! The words had slipped without his thinking.

"Gracious! That sounds horribly like a proposal." She beamed upon him merrily.

And his heart sank, for he had been earnest enough for all his blunder. Manlike, he did not grasp the fact that under the circumstance merriment was all she could offer him if she would save him from his own stupidity.

Then of a sudden the red rim of the sun vanished behind the setting landscape, and all the grim loneliness of the sea rose up to greet them.

"It is lonely. Let us go and prepare for dinner. Look!" pointing to a bright star far down the east. "And Corsica lies that way."

"And also madness!" was his thought.

"Oh, it seems not quite true that we are all going a-venturing as they do in the story books. The others think we are just going to Funchal. Remember, you must not tell. Think of it. A real treasure, every franc of which must tell a story of its own—love, heroism and devotion."

"Beautiful! But there must be a rescuing of princesses and fighting and all that. I choose the part of remaining by the princess."

"It is yours." She tilted back her head and breathed and breathed. She knew the love of living.

"Lucky we are all good sailors," he said. "There will be a fair sea on all night. But how well she rides!"

"I love every beam and bolt of her."

Shoulder to shoulder they bore forward to the companionway, and immediately the door banged after them.

Breitmann came out from behind the funnel and walked the deck for a time. He had studied the two from his shelter. What were they saying? Oh, Fitzgerald was clever and strong and good to look at, but— Breitmann straightened his arms before him, opened and shut his hands violently. Like that he would break him if he interfered with any of his desires. It would be fully twenty days before they made Ajaccio. Many things might happen before that time.

Two or three of the crew were lashing on the rail canvas, and the snap and flap of it jarred on Breitmann's nerves. For a week or more his nerves had been very close to the surface, so close that it had required all his will to keep his voice and hands from shaking. As he passed one of the sailors doffed his cap and bowed with great respect.

"That's not the admiral, Alphonse," whispered another of the crew, chuckling. "It's only his privit secretary."

"Ah, I haf meestake!"

But Alphonse had made no mistake. He knew who it was. His mates did not see the smile of irony, of sly ridicule, which stirred his lips as he bowed to the passer. Immediately his rather handsome effeminate face resumed a stolid vacuity.

His name was not Alphonse. It was a captious offering by the crew, which on this yacht never went further than to tolerate the addition of a foreigner to their mess. He had signed a day or two before sailing. He had even begged for the honor to ship with Captain Flanagan, and he gave his name as Pierre Picard, to which he had no more right than to Alphonse. As Captain Flanagan was too good a sailor himself to draw distinctions, he was always glad to add a foreign tongue to his crew. You never could tell when its use might come in handy. That is why Pierre Picard was allowed to drink his soup in the forecastle mess.

Breitmann continued on, oblivious to all things save his cogitations. He swung round the bridge. He believed that he and Cathewe could henceforth proceed on parallel lines, and there was much to be grateful for. Cathewe was quiet, but deep, and he, Breitmann, had knocked about among that sort and knew that they were to be respected. In all he had made only one serious blunder. He should never have permitted the vision of a face to deter him. He should have taken the things from the safe and vanished. It had not been a matter of compunction. And yet—ah, he was human, whatever his dream might be!

And he loved this beautiful American girl with all his heart and mind. It was not lawless love, but it was ruthless. When the time was ripe he would speak. Only a little while now to wait. The course had smoothed out; the sailing was easy. The man in the chimney no longer bothered him. Whoever and whatever he was, he had not shot his bolt soon enough.

Hildegarde von Mitter—was she to be the flaw in the chain? No, no; there should be no regret. He had steeled his heart against any such weakness. She had been necessary, and he would be a fool to pause over a bit of sentimentality. Her appearance had disorganized his nerves; that was all. Peering into his watch, he found that he had only half an hour before dinner. And it may be added that he dressed with singular care.

So did Fitzgerald, for that matter, and it took Cathewe just as long.

And this night Hildegarde von Mitter was meditating on the last throw for her hopes. She determined to cast once more the full sun of her beauty into the face of the man she loved, and if she failed to win the fault would not be hers.

Never again would the splendor of her beauty burn as it did this night.

Laura, alone among them all, went serenely about her toilet. She was young, and love had not yet spread its puzzle before her feet.

On the bridge the first officer was standing at the captain's side.

"Captain," he shouted, "where did you get that Frenchman?"

"Picked him up day before yestiddy. Speak fair English an' a bit o' dago. They're allus handy on a pleasure boat. He c'n keep off th' riffraff boatmen. An' you know what persistent cusses they be in the Med'terranean. Why?"

"Oh, nothing, if he's a good sailor. Notice his hands?"

"Why, no!"

"Soft as a woman's."

"Y' don't say! Well, we'll see 'm tough enough before we sight Funchal."

There was one vacant chair in the dining salon. M. Ferraud was indisposed. He could climb the highest peak, he could cross ice ridges with a sheer mile on either side of him, with never an attack of vertigo, but this heaving mystery under his feet always got the better of him the first day out. He considered it the one flaw in an otherwise perfect system. Thus he missed the comedy and the tragedy of the eyes at dinner nor saw a woman throw her all and lose it.

• • • • • • •

"Is there anything I can do for you?" asked Fitzgerald, venturing his head into M. Ferraud's cabin.

"Nothing. Tomorrow it will all be gone. I am always so. The miserable water!" M. Ferraud drew the blanket under his chin.

"When you are better I should like to ask you some questions."

"My friend, you have been very good. I promise to tell you all when the time comes. It will interest you."

Fitzgerald shut the door and returned to the smoking room. Something or other concerning Breitmann—he was sure of it. What had he done or what was he going to do that France should watch him? There was no doubt in his mind now. Breitmann had known of this treasure and had come to the Places simply to put his hands on the casket.

Then M. Ferraud had tried to forestall him. This much of the riddle was plain. But the pivots upon which these things turned! There was something more than a treasure in the balance. Well, M. Ferraud had told him to wait. There was nothing else for him to do.

A little rubber at bridge was in progress. The admiral was playing with Mrs. Coldfield, and Cathewe sat opposite Hildegarde. The latter two were losing. She was ordinarily a skillful player, as Cathewe knew, but tonight she lost constantly, was reckless with her leads and played carelessly into her opponents' hands. Cathewe watched her gravely. Never had he seen her more beautiful, and the apprehension that she would never be his was like a band straining over his heart.

How many times he stood on the precipice during the dinner hour Breitmann doubtless would never be told. A woman scorned is an old story. Still, the story goes on, retold each day. The red fires of revenge danced before Hildegarde von Mitter's eyes, blurring the spots on the cards, the blackness of despair crowding upon each flash. Let him beware! With a word she could shatter his dream—aye, and so she would. What—sit there and let him turn the knife in her heart and receive the pain meekly? No. It was the thoughtless brutality with which he went about this new affair that bit so poignantly. With all her beauty, intellect, genius and generosity, she had not been able to stir him as this young girl was unconsciously doing. She held no animosity for the daughter of her host. She was clear visioned enough to put the wrong where it belonged.

"It is your lead," said the admiral patiently.

"Pardon me," contritely. The gentle reproach brought her back to the surroundings. "It is the motion of the boat," hazarded Cathewe as he saw her lead the ace. "I often find myself losing count in waiting for the next roll."

"Mr. Cathewe is very kind," she replied. "The truth is, however, I am simply stupid tonight."

Breitmann continued to speak lowly to Laura. He was evidently amusing for she smiled frequently. Nevertheless she smiled as often upon Fitzgerald—never a glance toward the woman who held his fortunes, as they both believed, in the hollow of her hand. Breitmann appeared to have forgotten her existence.

To be continued.

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic In The World.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

Votes For Indians.

The question of making it easier for the Indians to obtain full Canadian citizenship by the removal of the present onerous conditions which must be complied with before an Indian can be enfranchised, is one that will be taken up by the Department of Indian Affairs with a view to having the necessary legislation passed. Less than a thousand Indians have ever been enfranchised in Canada since the Government first took them under its care, but at the present time there are fully a thousand occupying positions of all sorts in Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, Brantford and other cities and towns in Ontario and Quebec. In the east particularly many of the Indians have been leaving the reserves and living the life of their white neighbors. It is felt to be a real hardship that it should be so difficult for them to become enfranchised.

Owing to the difficulties in the way very few are now becoming enfranchised, but a famous exception some years ago was the enfranchisement of the whole band of the Wyandottes, whose reserve was near Sarnia, and who belonged the Huron Nation. They were a very progressive class of Indians and many of them have since done well in town and city. One is manager of a shoe factory in Detroit, at a salary of $6,000 a year.

Undesirable Seek Entry.

Undesirables from the United States have been massing the borders of Ontario to a phenomenal extent during the past few months and the provincial authorities have been turning them back at the rate of fifty per week during the time. Even so there appears to be no let-up in the influx to the boundary towns and excessive vigilance is being exerted to cope with their endeavors to enter.

Already the number handled has been four hundred above that of last season, and reports coming in show that there is still trouble to be encountered. The number of prosecutions for "repeaters" which also constitutes a record in its way. A man turned back on the fifth occasion becomes liable to imprisonment on the repetition and many such cases have occurred.

Testing "Movey."

The enthusiasm of the people for the moving picture show is not waning in the Province of Ontario. The recent report of the Government inspector would tend to show that the more familiar this form of entertainment becomes the more popular it is with its patrons. There are now 323 theatres of this nature in Ontario with machines run by properly constituted mechanics.

Following the spirit of certain new regulations designed to decrease fire possibilities in these places, the Government inspector now places a serious examination before each applicant for an operator's certificate. There are now 438 who have been qualified to handle machines, and of these 243 were examined during the year.

Of the total number of theatres in the province Toronto supports 83. All the operators in the city and suburbs are required to appear at the head office for the test, but those farther away are examined in local theatres at the convenience of the inspector.

HEAT IN LABRADOR.

Tropical Weather Hit Dr. Grenfell's Helper Pretty Hard.

Dr. W. T. Grenfell, the famous Labrador missionary, and Dr Greaves, the young Scotch physician who is his chief lieutenant, spent several weeks in St. John's, Newfoundland, in June, while their mission yacht, the Strathcona, was in dry dock. The weather in St. John's was unusually cool for June, even in that wind-swept city, but Dr. Greaves made no complaint until one afternoon, when the sun merely tempered the sharp breeze with a hint of coming summer, he informed his fellow guests at the hotel that it was time he was off to "the Labrador," as that rocky and forbidding land is called by those who know it. "I can stand cold all right," he said, "but this weather takes it out of me. I haven't walked two hundred yards, but I am all out in a perspiration. I'm afraid I am getting as bad as my assistant in the hospital at Battle Harbor. One day, when he was working with his coat off, the temperature went up as high as fifty degrees in the hospital. Peeling off his vest, he turned to me and said, plaintively: 'Doctor, no man should be asked to work in weather like this'."

One of Dr. Grenfell's many interests in connection with the Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, of which he is head, is the King George the Fifth Seamen's Institute at St. John's, which does for the seafarers visiting the port what the Y.M.C.A. does for the young men of the inland cities. The Institute has a number of bedrooms, some of which have been furnished by admirers of Dr. Grenfell, and the doors bear plates giving the donors' names. An outport fisherman who spent a night at the Institute was asked next day by a citizen what he thought about the place. "I don't think much of it," he answered. "Most of the best rooms has been taken by swells. I know they has, because I saw their names on the doors."—Toronto Saturday Night.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

3 IN ONE OILS. CLEANS. POLISHES. PREVENTS RUST

3-in-One is a light, pure oil compound that never gums. 3-in-One lubricates perfectly sewing machines, typewriters, bicycles, locks, clocks, guns, lawnmowers—everything that ever needs oiling in your home or office. No grease. No acid. A little 3-in-One on a soft cloth cleans and polishes perfectly all veneered or varnished furniture and woodwork. Sprinkled on a yard of black cheesecloth it makes an ideal Dustless Dusting Cloth.

3-in-One absolutely prevents rust on gun barrels, auto fixtures, bath room fixtures, gas ranges, everything metal, indoors or out, in any climate. It sinks into the unseen metal pores and forms a protecting "overcoat" which stays on.

Free—3-in-One—Free. Write today for generous free bottle and the 3-in-One Dictionary of hundreds of uses.

3-in-One is sold in all good stores in 3-size bottles: 10c (1 oz.), 25c (3 oz.), 50c (8 oz., ½ pint). Also in new patented Handy Oil Can, 25c (3½ oz.).

WILL CLIP AEROPLANE

Shackleton Has New Device for Propelling Sleighs

LONDON, Dec. 30.— An interesting feature of the equipment to be used by Sir Ernest H. Shackleton on his proposed expedition next year across the Antarctic continent will be sledges driven by aeroplane engines and an aeroplane with clipped wings to aid in propelling the sledges over the ice.

The transcontinental party will consist of six men and 120 dogs. The animals chosen will be those accustomed to team and post work in Alaska and Siberia, and they will be handled by experienced Canadains.

Sir Ernest plans to land at latitude 78 degrees south, on Weddel Sea, at the beginning of November, 1914, and expects to arrive in Ross Sea, on the other side of the South Pole, in March, 1916.

The expedition will have two oil-driven ships.

News that Sir Ernest Shackleton is about to lead another British expedition to the Antarctic has awakened the greatest interest here. The main object of the expedition will be to cross the South Polar continent from Weddell Sea to Ross Sea, a distance roughly of 1,700 statute miles, making the South Pole a "half-way house" on the great journey, of which one-half will be over an entirely new route. It will be the biggest polar journey ever attempted, and if successful will open up in the Weddell quadrant a vast and unexplored region which is still a blank on the map.

Borax is one of the best assistants to cleanliness. It should play a large part in every household. If sprinkled about the kitchen it will eliminate roaches and ants.

Blessed is the peacemaker, in the estimation of the chap who is getting the short end of it.

TESTS FOR CHAUFFEURS.

Severe Examinations Must Be Passed by Drivers of Autos.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—After the New Year paid chauffeurs in the province will require special licenses. Legislation to this effect was arranged for last session with an eye to reducing the accidents on highways and making chauffeurs responsible for their passengers. The law now takes effect.

The method of the Government involves a system of resident engineers in different centres, all of whom belong to the Ontario Motor League. These have already been appointed in North and East Toronto, Ottawa, Peterboro, Chatham, Fort William, Woodstock, St. Thomas, North Bay, Sarnia, and other traffic centres. Arrangements are incomplete as yet for Toronto, Hamilton and London.

The examination will be conducted jointly by the district representative and a police chief. Things demanded include technical knowledge, oral rules, speed laws, a road test, and physical and character testimonials.

There are twenty-seven points in all and the examinations will be universal.

Definition Is Required.

What philosophical and scientific instruments are within the meaning of the Customs Act, is at present a subject of consideration by the Customs Board. Under the act, such equipment is entitled to come in free when used in schools and colleges. There are attempts to widen its application, and upon this the board will give a ruling. There will need to be a specific definition as to what are or are not to be classified as scientific apparatus.

Fewer Get Married.

While the population of London, Ont., has been steadily increasing, a marked drop in the number of marriages registered in November is a feature of the month's vital statistics. The high cost of living is, apparently, having a deterrent effect on matrimony.

A Short-Legged Choir.

Near Brantford there is a small congregation of one of the countless odd sects whose members prefer their own Scriptural interpretations or peculiar form of church government to those adopted by the more powerful denominations. One of the families which formed a chief support of the congregation included a father who kept a judicious eye over the financial concerns of the church, and a stalwart son who brought an excellent baritone voice to the services of the choir. At a business session of the congregation, the son, who may be designated as John Junior, urged that a modest sum, say $50, be applied toward enlarging the space allotted to the choir, and he pointed out that so cramped was the accommodation that he and other male members at least had not room to stretch their legs comfortably.

This brought John Senior to the floor, and with simple seriousness he proceeded to offer his solution of the problem. "It is not necessary," he said, "to spend money so that the choir members should have room to stretch their legs. What we must do is to let the present singers resign and secure some men with shorter legs to take their places, and if necessary I will make a motion to that effect."

Thus ended summarily the agitation for an enlarged choir loft.—Saturday Night.

Kingston Sharing Growth.

That Kingston is growing, and growing rapidly, is illustrated by the big increase in the number of building permits taken out for the erection of dwellings this year as compared with a few years ago. An increase of approximately 150 per cent. is shown in the last four years. This year to date there have been 163 building permits taken out, while in 1910 for the whole year there were only 70 dwelling built.

TO DISPENSE THE BIG FUND

Great Lakes Disaster Receipt Amount to Over $105,000

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—H. H. Gildersleeve, general treasurer of the Lakes Disaster Fund, said last night that over $105,000 had been subscribed to the fund launched following the disastrous storm on Lake Huron on Nov. 9 last when several ships, officials and many sailors were lost. While the fund has been closed, straggling subscriptions continue to come in.

A meeting of the committee having charge of the fund will be held this afternoon at the office of Mayor Hocken in the City Hall, when it is expected that final arrangements will be made for the dispensing of the fund to members and relatives of the ill-fated crews who were lost in the storm.

"The committee feel very grateful towards the public for the generous response," said Mr. Gildersleeve, "and we can assure the public that the money will be dispensed and distributed with the utmost care."

Mr. Gildersleeve stated that since the fund was started the committee had had agents inquiring as to the circumstances and needs of the relatives and families of officials and sailors lost in the storm, in order that the sufferers would receive just compensation.

To Probe Will Mystery.

ROME, Dec. 30.—The crown prosecutor has begun an investigation into the matter of the will of the late Cardinal Rampolla. He has been enabled to take this action because of the denunciation of the testament of 1889 by relatives of the cardinal, who were excluded as beneficiaries from his will, on the ground that a later testament has been stolen or concealed.

One of the interested parties in the new move is the Duchess of Campobello, who is of the opinion that her children may be included in a later testament, the testament of 1889 antedating their birth.

Shot By Accident.

THESSALON, Dec. 30.—Two boys, Thomas Wardell and J. Boyd, living near Thessalon, were playing together when the latter picked up a shotgun, which accidentally went off, piercing Wardell's body completely and killing him almost instantly. Dr. Spence, coroner of Thessalon, inquired into the circumstances and concluded that the shooting was accidental.

MAYORS AND REEVES WHO ESCAPE CONTEST

Nomination Day Passes Quietly Throughout Ontario

TORONTO, Dec. 30. — Yesterday was nomination day in many municipalities throughout Ontario and a large number of candidates are in the field for election. The proceedings were quiet throughout, although many hot contests are in prospect. In Ottawa, Mayor Ellis has three competitors with the Binnie $8,000,000 water supply scheme as the fighting ground. Mayor Carter of Guelph will also have to fight for another term against his namesake, Ald J. E. Carter. Mayor Euler of Berlin has no less than ten opponents, but his election is generally conceded. Brantford has three mayoralty candidates, but interest in the contest is slight as is the case in Belleville, Kingston, Peterboro and Niagara Falls. There were thirteen mayors elected by acclamation and thirty-four reeves win their places without a contest.

The results show the following mayors of cities and towns of Ontario elected by acclamation:

Alliston—J. H. Mitchell.
Arnprior—John Brennan.
Almonte—H. Jamieson.
Dundas—W. H. C. Fisher.
Galt—A. E. Buchanan.
Harriston—Anson Spotten.
Kingsville—Lambert Wigle.
Newmarket—J. A. W. Allen.
Paris—J. M. Paterson.
Perth—Allan Grant.
Preston—Otto Homuth.
Sault Ste. Marie—T. E. Simpson.
Welland—John Goodwin.

Following are the names of reeves elected by acclamation in Ontario villages and townships:

Ayr—Dr. Ward Woolner.
Ancaster Township—E. J. Guest.
Brussels—J. Leickle.
Bathurst Township—Fred Wilson.
Bromley Township—M. Breen.
Blanshard Township—M. Irvine.

RUTHENIANS ON TRIAL.

Ninety-Four Charged With Inciting Revolt Against Austria.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 30.—The trial of ninety-four Ruthenians on the charge of inciting rebellion against the Austro-Hungarian Government was begun yesterday at Marmaros-Sziget. It is expected that the trial will last five weeks. The chief prisoner is the Russian monk, Father Alexius, of Mt. Athos, whose real name is said to be Alexander Kabalyuk.

Great political interest attaches to the case, as it is alleged that the seditious movement was largely promoted and financed from Russia. Priests of Russian monasteries and Count Vladimir Bobrinsky, president of the Russian Constitutional Conservative party, and a member of the Douma, are alleged to be concerned in the movement, which, under the guise of a propaganda to convert the peasantry to the Orthodox Greek Church, caused the circulations of hundreds of thousands of foreign printed pamphlets denouncing the Emperor and the Hapsburg dynasty, with the intention of drawing the Ruthenians from their allegiance to Hungary and uniting them with Russia.

Testing.

"Why do you put your finger on that paint. Don't you see the sign 'fresh paint?'"

"Yes," replied the man with eccentric ideas. "But I can't keep from testing it and thinking what a convenience it would be if fresh eggs could be tested the same way."—Washington Star.

Useless Education.

"We are long on education in this country."

"That's right. Half our ribbon clerks are lawyers and many of our motormen have graduated in medicine or art."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

YOUNGSTERS GROW CORN.

Remarkable Test Yields Are Secured In Kent County.

CHATHAM, Dec. 30. — Yesterday the announcement was made that in this northern climate of Kent 142 bushels of shelled corn to the acre have been grown by D. A. Caughill, a school boy, under the supervision of the Department of Education, which will vouch for the accuracy of the plot measurements and the weight of the corn grown. Another boy, John Wilson, had a yield of over 135 bushels, and a little girl, Edna Wills, secured 135 bushels per acre.

The above mentioned boys and girls were members of a corn-growing contest in Harwich Township that was organized by R. H. Abraham of the Department of Education. The object in having the contest was mainly to test the Wisconsin No. 7 corn, to try to find out if it was a suitable corn to recommend for Kent County. Pure Wisconsin No. 7 seed was secured and distributed to two hundred boys and girls who planted one-eighth of an acre in plots isolated from other corn fields.

Skater Drowned.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—The first of the winter's skating fatalities occurred at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, when George Simmons, 18, 88 Morris street, skated to his death on the treacherous ice off Morley avenue, near the city's septic tank.

With Simmons at the time of the tragedy were two companions, one named Waters, also of Morris street, and another whom the police have as yet been unable to locate.

Tasman Is Badly Damaged.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 30. —A wireless message received at noon yesterday from the steamer Tasman, ashore in the Gulf of Papua, reported 15 feet of water in the hold and gaining rapidly. At that hour the steamers which had been despatched to the assistance of the Tasman had not arrived. It is considered possible that the Tasman will be a total wreck.

GIRL WAS DEMENTED

Inquest in Jokinen Case Settles all Theories of Murder

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—No new developments were brought out at the inquest last evening concerning the disappearance of Annie Jokinson on Dec. 4, and the finding of her body in a field on the farm of John Dew, near the corner of Forest Hill road and Eglinton avenue on Dec. 21. The jury returned a verdict of death by exposure while in a demented condition.

Dr. Bond and Dr. Johnson, who performed the post-mortem, both stated that death was due to starvation and exposure. No evidence of violence was found on the body, and no poison was found in her stomach. The autopsy report showed that for several days raw corn was her only food. It was also found that she had not been criminally assaulted, which entirely does away with the idea that she had been enticed away by white slavers. The characteristics of her head, however, were such that she might have been liable to delusions and demented states.

"Mona Lisa" on View Again.

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 30. — The "Mona Lisa," which was Sunday handed over to the keeping of the French ambassador at Rome, arrived here yesterday and was placed on exhibition in the Brera gallery. Great crowds gathered to view the masterpiece, which was first inspected by the Count of Turin and the civic authorities.

A special medal has been coined to commemorate the event. It bears the head of Leonardo da Vinci, and the inscription, "May her divine smile ever shine."

Invented Cash Register.

DAYTON, Ohio, Dec. 30. — John Ritty, aged 65, who is credited with inventing the cash register, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Cooper, here yesterday.

He got his idea of a cash register from watching the distance-recording device in the boiler room of an ocean liner.

Although the cash register has made millions for those who developed the idea, Ritty died in only fair circumstances.

A Full Length Kimona Can be Both Serviceable and Attractive

The Range of Choice in Pretty Negligees Being Wider than Ever.

Few girls or women of to-day, would care to be without a negligee garment, whether it be made of cosy Eiderdown, or from the lighter fabrics, such as cotton crepe, wool delaine, etc.

And apart from its serviceability, the kimona offers a wide scope for the fashioning of really attractive garments, as will be seen by the charming array now on view upon the second floor.

While the long styles being very popular just now, we have chosen four, which are deserving of description as follows :—

In soft, cosy Velour, trimmed with satin and having three quarter sleeves; this pretty kimona is procurable in floral patterns of blue, tan, pink or lavender shades.

It has a high waist line or Empire cut, and fits fairly close around the neck. It is priced $3.25.

At $2.25 there is a plain, loose kimona of printed cotton crepe of wreath design, in a combination of either tan and red, black and mauve, or tan and blue.

This also has three quarter sleeves and is trimmed at the front and cuffs with satin.

Very dainty indeed is a charming conception of bordered Wool Delaine, in which the border is used as trimming down the front, at the cuffs, and also in the form of a deep collar.

It is cut in Empire style and comes in delicate tints of blue and mauve in stripe and floral pattern. This is $7.45.

Designed specially for warmth, is a full length kimona of Old Rose, or Copenhagen Blue Eiderdown, having a deep turn down collar that fits closely to the throat. The yoke is lined, while satin is used as trimming upon collar and cuffs. The price is $4.75.

THIS CONVICT RESTORES WAY

Officials Let Him Go on Parole After Five Years.

BRANDON, Man., Dec. 30.—Edward W. Murphy, born in Toronto, who was sentenced in 1905 to fourteen years' imprisonment for stealing jewelry worth $5,000 from the store of W. H. Mallett here, has been released on parole under unique circumstances while still having six years of sentence to serve.

Though Murphy was arrested shortly after the Mallett store was entered by the window, the jewels were never recovered. Murphy, at the trial, offered to reveal them in return for his liberty, and repeated the offer when Capt. J. C. Ponsford, formerly of St. Thomas, Ont., took charge this year of Stoney Mountain Penitentiary, where he was confined. The authorities at Ottawa finally agreed to grant him parole on condition that he recovered the valuables, and he was brought here under guard.

After a long search, many landmarks having been removed in eight years, the jewels were found, barely hidden under the earth close to the C.P.R. roundhouse. Murphy says he will return to Toronto.

Three Miners Killed.

BICKNELL, Ind., Dec. 30.—Three men were killed and four injured yesterday at the Indian Creek Mine, four miles south of here when a gas explosion occurred. The dead are: Emery Williams, Robert Cotton and an unidentified man. The four injured are buried in the mine. Little damage was done to the mine.

NEW CARTAGE SCHEDULE.

Railways Put Increased Rates Into Force on Jan. 1, 1914.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—The railways issued their new cartage schedule yesterday to take effect Jan. 1. They have established a rate in Montreal of four cents per 100 pounds, which is an increase over the present rate of one cent. Owing to the higher cost of cartage in Montreal and the shippers agreeing to pay the cost in all cases, Montreal shippers pay a higher rate than at any other eastern point.

The rates for the other centres are: Toronto, 3 1-4 cents; Hamilton, 3 cents; and the following points also 3 cents: Bothwell, Brantford, Glencoe, Guelph, Hamilton, Kingston, London, Ottawa, Sarnia, St. Catharines, St. Hyacinthe, St. Thomas, Thamesville, Valleyfield, Walkerville and Windsor.

The minimum in all cases is 20 cents. A feature of interest to the shippers is the addition to the list of exceptions to the flat tariff of the following freight: Baskets, empty packages, furniture, (excepting brass and iron bedsteads).

Drowns Self at End of Rope.

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 30.—After fastening a rope to the ship and tieing the other end about his neck so that his body might not be lost, F. James, a sailor on the steamship Ascania, drowned himself yesterday. Letters addressed to his parents in England showed that he was despondent.

Big Fire at Buffalo, W. Va.

To give ordinary paint the effect of enamel, take a piece of silicate of potash, the size of a walnut, crush it, and add to it one pound and a half of ordinary varnish paint. This will give a surface like enamel at one-third the cost.

If the flower is slightly warmed in the oven before being added to the other ingredients, it makes a cake lighter.

TWO MOUNTED MEN AND PACKER MAY BE LOST

Are Long Overdue From An Expedition Into the North

OTTAWA, Dec. 30. — Comptroller Fortescue of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, has received reports from the far north of what he is inclined to believe is another tragedy. He fears that two of his best men and a companion have either been done to death by treacherous Indians or have perished in the heavy storms which have set in. He has sent out two patrols to search for the missing men.

On Nov. 3 Sergt. Harper and Constable Stevenson, with Richard Harrington, a packer, set out from Saskatoon Lake in the Grand Prairie district to make an arrest in a seduction case. Their destination was in the vicinity of the Porcupine river, and they were expected to be away about a month. It is a rough country, and the party had to be packed, hence Harrington went with them as packer.

On Nov. 11 the party was seen near Moose Mountain Creek and was expected to return to that point in a week. It is from there that the news has reached Comptroller Fortescue. The message comes from trappers, whether white men or Indians is not stated, that on Dec. 15 they found on the Moose Mountain Creek trail a gun and a rifle, the description of which tally with the weapons carried by the party.

The suggestion is made at headquarters in Ottawa that the mounted police party had been set upon and slaughtered by Indians, who in this vicinity are regarded as treacherous and unfriendly to whites, or that, as a result of the severe snowstorms which have been sweeping over the district snow blindness had affected the men, with the inevitable result that they were unable to battle successfully with the piercing cold and were overcome. The difficulties of the country are such that very heavy packs could not be carried, and the party had to forage for food. Heavy snow would interfere with their quest for game, in fact, render it almost impossible.

Comptroller Fortescue is suspicious of the message which he has received. It is not signed. It is very illiterate and it may be that it comes from Indians who are purposely leading him away from the actual scene of what he is disposed to think is a tragedy in which they have played a part. The Indians' fear of the mounted police also may have inspired the message.

However, two patrols have gone out from Grouard and Athabasca Landing and they are expected to report to Ottawa in about a month at the latest.

TO THE RATEPAYERS
—OF—
Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

There is one thing on which the Council and people should stand together. That is our Hydro-Electric and Municipal Power and Light policy. In their own interests the electors should assist in electing men who will see that policy through. A good beginning has been made. See that it is completed.

I am in with that policy as a citizen and will be—if elected—as an alderman, and shall be glad to receive your vote to place me in Council.

Yours respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

U. S. IS SNUBBED.

Germany Refuses To Accede to Tariff Requests.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—Germany yesterday refused the request of the United States Government for the "most favored nation" treatment of American steel, rubber shoes, etc., but it was hinted that she was willing to bargain for this concession if the United States would make an equivalent offer in return for it.

The reply of the German Government to the application of the U. S. Government points out various features of the American tariff law, namely, the inspection of the books of manufacturers and the administrative regulations, which Germany would like to see changed.

Commercial circles here express the opinion that the German-American tariff negotiations will be extremely difficult without some such method of bargaining.

To the Electors
South Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Your vote and influence to secure my return as alderman for the South Ward. Economic administration of civic affairs, consistent with progress, my policy.

Yours truly,
W. S. ROBINSON

TO THE ELECTORS
OF THE
NORTH WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

When casting your ballot on Monday I would ask you all to consider the results of last year's work of the council—a tax rate of 25 mills, and the Hydro tangle, which must be straightened out.

If you elect me as your representative, I will do all in my power to at least prevent a further increase in the rate and if possible, to reduce it and to assist in bringing about a speedy and satisfactory settlement of the Hydro trouble.

I am strongly in favor of the Hydro system, controlled absolutely by the city, and until this matter is settled, I am not in favor of the other expenditure for the new bridge and chemical engine.

I will keep the welfare of our ward constantly in mind and will see that we in the north, get our just due.

Wishing you all the compliments of the season, I remain.

Your Servant,
W. T. HOLLOWAY

A Final Message from Robert Hicks

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your voluntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have sought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing city.

The valuation put upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the city should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my usefulness, and if I am favored with your confidence I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,
ROBERT HICKS.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 30 cars, consisting of 557 cattle, 46 calves, 325 hogs and 12 sheep.

Butchers.

Choice steers and heifers, $8 to $8.50; medium, $7 to $7.75; common to fair, $6 to $6.50; choice cows, $6 to $7.25; medium cows, $5.25 to $6; common, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6 to $7.25; medium, $5.25 to $6; common, $4.50 to $5.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, $6.75 to $7.25; good, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $5.25 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

The range of milkers and springers was from $50 to $85.

Veal Calves.

The range is all the way from $5 to $11 per cwt., but few of the latter kind are reaching the market.

Sheep and Lambs.

Ewes, $5.50 to $6; lambs, $8.50 to $8.85.

Hogs.

Fed and watered are selling in odd instances as high as $9.25 per cwt., but dealers say a fair average is $9, with $9.25 off cars and $8.60 f.o.b.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 27 were 700 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 3000 hogs and 100 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 350 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 100 calves.

The trade in cattle today was very quiet, and the demand limited. There were no really choice steers on the market, but good stock sold at $8.25 to $8.50, and even the offerings of this class were small. Demand for common cattle was slow.

A feature of the small-meat trade was the stronger feeling in the market for lambs, and prices scored a further advance of 25c per 100 pounds, with a good demand, and sales of western stock were made at $9.20 to $9.25 per 100 pounds. Calves were quiet and steady. A stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds. The demand from packers was good, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.75, and straight lots at $9.25 to $9.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.75 to $9; do., medium, $7 to $8; do., common, $6 to $6.50; canners, $4.50 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6 to $6.60; do., bulls, $5.25 to $7.25; milkers, choice, each, $90 to $95; do., common and medium, each, $80 to $85; springers, $70 to $75.

Sheep—Ewes, $5.50 to $6; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.25. Lambs, $9 to $9.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.25 to $9.75.

Calves, $5 to $20.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Cattle—Receipts, 23,000, market steady. Beeves, $6.70 to $9.60; Texas steers, $6.90 to $7.90; stockers and feeders, $5 to $7.45; cows and heifers, $3.50 to $8.60; calves, $7 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market strong, light, $7.65 to $8; mixed, $7.75 to $8.10; heavy, $7.70 to $8.15; rough, $7.70 to $7.80; pigs, $6.75 to $7.70; bulk of sales, $7.85 to $8.05.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 25,000; market strong; native, $4.75 to $6.10; yearlings, $5.85 to $7.10. Lambs, native, $6.75 to $8.35.

Policewoman Subdues Man.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. — Mrs. Mary Boyd, one of Chicago's ten policewomen, is not a large woman, but she is muscular. Sunday she boarded a street car while a powerfully built man and the conductor were engaged in a fight about a transfer. Mrs. Boyd showed her star and separated the men, telling the passenger he was under arrest.

When he resisted the officer she pulled him from the car, stood him against a post, and rang for the patrol wagon. Mrs. Boyd rode to the station with her prisoner and preferred a charge of disorderly conduct against him.

British Schooner Wrecked.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. — Commander E. L. Beach of the tender Vestal at Pensacola, Fla., reported to the Navy Department yesterday that the British schooner Cheslie was waterlogged in latitude 27 degrees 25 minutes north and longitude 87 degrees 32 minutes west. Commander Beach added that he had despatched the tug Patuxent to the Cheslie's assistance in response to summons for help.

Parents Bereaved.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Allen, of Douro, were bereaved by the loss of their four-year-old daughter yesterday afternoon. The funeral took place this afternoon to the cemetery at Douro.

HYDRO-JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the North Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterboro, all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the city council, elected by the good people of North Ward, I have had the honor of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric System into the city, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of this confidence by again electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the people. Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your council of 1913, I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality, and being run in the interests of the people and not in the interests of a monopoly.

MR. GILLESPIE'S CONFIDENT APPEAL TO THE ELECTORS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address and my further public statements made on Nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions effecting the interests of the city, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the city's affairs during the past five years as your alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous New Year.

To the Electors of the West Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers and other interests in the ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavoring to consider all questions in a fair and businesslike manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

The Workingman's Candidate, for
MAYOR
Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of municipal ownership and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

TO THE ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live go-ahead man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the low water marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufacturers and endeavor to bring in new industries. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favors it he is especially in favor of business-like management of the enterprise of seeing that the people who voted so, almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it, at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working men and find employment for them at good wages helps the business man and thereby helps to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. THE SPORTING WORLD

INTERMEDIATES WORK OUT KELLY AND SPRATT MISSING

The Intermediates had their first workout last night between seven and eight, and one look at them would sufficiently warrant one to think that, although some of last year's players would not be out, there were fast men to fill their places. Park, Giroux, Kennealley and Dwyer were out and all going fairly good. McMartin and Lansfield were also out and appear to be speedy. Egbert Kelly and Percy Bond were on the defense while a dark horse was unearthed in Murray of Omemee. The latter is not a finished hockey player, but is a "moose" and a few more practices should further develop him. Flow[illegible] was in the nets and both he and Joe Dwyer showed considerable class. It will be a difficult proposition to pick the better of the two.

Kelly and Spratt Missing.

The absence of Kelly gave further strength to the rumor that he would not be here this season, while the fans were a trifle surprised to see Pete Spratt missing. The word has been passed around that Pete would not play this year, but The Review gets it from good authority that he will be out.

In all probability Denison will be back before Friday and he should be in great condition.

PUCKERINGS FROM PUCK

Jerry Coughlin played for Ingersoll last night, when they defeated St. Thomas 8—0, in the Intermediate O. H. A. series. The Ingersoll Juniors defeated London 8—2.

The O. H. A. rule book for 1913-14 will be issued to the clubs tonight. It contains a complete history of the association, the championship schedules, list of Secretaries and referees, and the rules, regulations and constitutions of the O. H. A., together with a map and photographs of the championship teams.

The following Kingston Frontenacs (Juniors) were registered yesterday: C. G. Clarke, H. A. Dunlop, R. Miltan, Thos. Nicholson, Martin Dolan.

Hamilton Intermediates and Junior O. H. A. teams won both ends of last night's double header with Brantford sevens. The scores were 6—2 and 5—1 respectively.

Grand Mere defeated T. R. and A. A. last night 6—2.

Berlin Juniors defeated New Hamburg Juniors in the opening Junior O. H. A. game by the score of 9—1.

Cobourg at Belleville, and Oshawa at Whitby, Intermediate games, were postponed.

The Boston "Exploits" players are requested to report at the rink tonight at 10 o'clock for practice.

The Juniors will not practice tonight, but they are asked to be at the rink on Thursday morning.

Was It Sabotage?

It all depends on the point of view. Tom Mann, the English workingman agitator is an earnest, honest, totally sincere person who believes in syndicalism and sabotage with all his soul. He may not be the most influential, but he is the most dynamic of the British labor leaders. He especially urges sabotage on his followers.

"If I were a waiter in a restaurant," he said, "I'd see to it that my employer lost customers if he did not treat me fairly.

"Labor is engaged in a war. We must use our weapons—for the other fellow will."

The other day Mr. Mann was a customer in a restaurant, and observed that his waiter had half a thumb buried in his soup. Mr. Mann rose with pain in his eyes.

"If that was sabotage," said Mr Mann, "it was a brave act, and I approve of it. But if the waiter just stuck his thumb in my soup as an incident to the day's business he is incompetent and should be fired."

OMEMEE

For January 21st, the Public Library Board have engaged Miss Pearl O'Neill, elocutionist, who will be assisted by a staff of brilliant entertainers at a concert in Coronation Hall. Patrons of the last concert at which Miss O'Neill appeared, in Omemee, will remember with sweetness, her captivating success in "When Father Laid the Carpet on the Stairs," and "Think of that Gentle Listener." Particulars will appear later.

The concert on New Year's Night, to be given by the Presbyterians in Coronation Hall, will produce such artists as Miss Lucy Webbing, comedienne, who plays the role of Little Lord Farmtelroy and Mr. Walter McRaye, actor, traveller and narrator. These will be assisted by Professor and Mrs. Renwick in choice musical selections. The concert promises a distinctive treat of comedy and high class music. Seats can be reserved.

Mr. Alejo Gine of Chili, S.A., was in town last week, giving some initial trick exhibitions. He appears in full repertoire on Wednesday evening next.

Later—News has arrived of the death of Mrs. Thomas Gardiner. Funeral on Tuesday.

A Western Landmark.

Another historical spot in western Canada has recently been located and marked. It is in the Province of Saskatchewan, and in the constituency of Pelly, situated about three miles north of the town of Pelly, on the C.N.R. The location is on the site of the old headquarters of the Mounted Police, known as Fort Livingstone, or Swan River Barracks, and in the seventies was an important point in the west. It was here that the first session of the first Northwest Council was held, commencing on March 8, 1877, presided over by Hon. David Laird, who was Lieutenant-Governor of the Northwest Territories at that time. The members of that notable Council were: Col. Jas. F. Macleod, Commissioner of Mounted Police; Hugh Richardson, Stipendiary Magistrate; Mathew Ryan, Stipendiary Magistrate. At that time there were no settlers, and the surveys were only being commenced in the far west. In 1878 the headquarters of the post were moved about 150 miles south, where the men put up new log buildings. In 1884 the country around Swan River was swept with prairie fire, to which the old barracks fell a prey.

Dr. Emma Musson Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30. — Dr. Emma E. Musson, professor of otology at the Women's Medical College, and well-known throughout the country as a throat specialist, died Sunday at her home in this city. She was 50 years old and had done much research work in bronchoscopy. During the summer of 1902 she worked with Dr. Grenfell in Labrador, operating and giving medical assistance.

Dr. Musson was a leader in suffrage movements, and was a member of the County Medical Society and of the American Medical Association.

Sues Provincial Police Chief.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Dec. 30.—Yesterday morning an action for $5,000 damages was taken by L. C. A. Dufresne against Chief McCaskill of the provincial police force. The chief arrested Dufresne last June in connection with the death of Mrs. A. A. Boldeau, who was killed by the explosion of a bomb sent through the mails.

Boy Shot by His Companion.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 30.—George Flett, aged 13 years, was shot yesterday and died shortly afterwards by a playmate, Stanley Craig, aged 14, who told contradictory accounts to the police in explaining the affair. One version was that he was shooting at a trap and the other was that he did not know the rifle was loaded.

MONTREAL FIREMEN PIPED WATER ONE MILE

Fire Department Keep Flames Isolated by Bringing Water From River---Loss Over Quarter of a Million.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—Fire broke out at one o'clock yesterday afternoon in the premises of the Auto Garage Co., Ltd., at the corner of Ontario and Providence streets, in the northeast end of the city, and was caused by an explosion of gasoline. It spread with lightning rapidity, due to three other explosions, to adjoining buildings, threatening the whole block on St. Hubert street.

The firemen were without water pressure, owing to the break in the intake, and had to bring water from the river, a mile away. The loss will be about $285,000, with $40,000 insurance.

The heat from the raging conflagration grew so great that the firemen, with their one stream, were driven back. Chief Tremblay then had a consultation with his sub-chiefs, and it was decided that if the fire spread much further resort would be had to dynamiting buildings around it to check its march.

After an hour's work, during which every bit of hose that could be collected, had been connected up, the firemen were just able to throw one end of the chain into the St. Lawrence river, nearly a mile away from the scene of the fire.

A tremendous cheer broke from the firemen when the first few spurts of the river water came through and fell with a hiss on the heated buildings near the fire. With this the progress of the flames was checked.

While attempting to throw chemicals on the fire on the fourth storey of the Automobile & Garage Co.'s building, Fireman James Rollahan lost his balance and fell to the street. He was rushed to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where is was found that his condition was most critical.

A dropsical old man named Patinaude was rescued from one of the buildings, but may die of shock.

When the fire started the firemen and police saved 22 automobiles, but 60 were destroyed. The buildings destroyed were owned by Jos. Laurier and occupied by the Auto & Garage Co., the Decbul Tools, Ltd., and several manufacturing firms.

As a result of the blaze and the absence of adequate water supply for the firemen, some of the sufferers have announced their intention of taking suit against the city.

Water Famine Nearly Over.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30. — Without being too definite, Controller Godfrey expressed the opinion that water might be turned on to-day. The situation at present is the same as it has been since the pumps were shut down on Christmas night. Water carts continue to supply citizens and material relief in some sections has been effected by the Montreal Water & Power Co. The lack of water has seriously affected the laundries and the drivers have had to advise clients to hold their orders until Friday. In those laundries where water is available, the management has been supplying their customers with water.

For Serving Ice Cream.

There are modes even in the serving of ice cream. At present macaroon baskets, wafer boxes and a disguising covering of lady cake are among the most popular ways of serving this always acceptable dessert.

To make macaroon baskets dip the outer edges of five almond macaroons in the sirup obtained from melted granulated sugar. The first macaroon is used for the bottom of the basket and the others are stuck together to form a ring about it, exactly like the bur baskets we used to make when we were children. Fill this receptacle with ice cream and sprinkle ground macaroons on top.

Wafer boxes are put together in exactly the same way. Square wafers are the most desirable, two being used for the bottom and one at each end, standing upright. The ice cream should be cut into blocks that fit into the frame. Pink and white ice cream, garnished with cherries, makes an attractive color combination.

A novel way to serve brick ice cream is to cover the sides and ends of the brick with thick slices of lady cake. Cut the cream as usual. Each slice will have a frame of cake, contrasting prettily with the colors of the cream.

Frederick the Great and Music.

Frederick the Great was the most distinguished musical amateur of his age, and his position gave him the power to regulate the style of composition employed by the musicians of his period. For instance, he made the following rules to be followed by operatic composers: "All the principal singers must have big arias and different in character, as an adagio aria, which must be very cantabile to show off to good advantage the voice and delivery of the singer. In du capo the artist can then display her art in embellishing variations. Then there must be an allegro aria with brilliant passages, a gallant aria, a duet for the first male singer and the prima donna. In these pieces the big forms of measure must be used so as to give pathos to the tragedy. The smaller forms of time, such as two-four and three-eight, are for the secondary roles, and for these a tempo minuetto can be written. There must be the necessary changes of time, but minor keys must be avoided in the theater, because they are too mournful."—Argonaut.

Wanted to Talk.

He was traveling on a western train, and the man next to him began to talk politics.

"I never discuss politics in public," he said.

"Well, let us discuss the suffrage question," suggested the stranger.

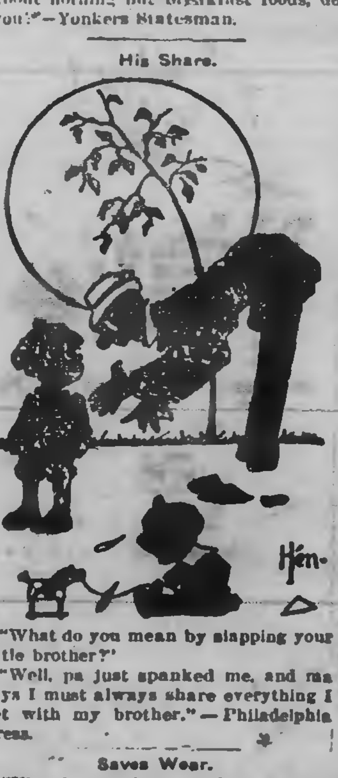
"No, I don't care to discuss that question either."

"Well, how about eugenics?"

"Nothing to say on eugenics."

"Say, old man, you don't want to travel all the way to Chicago and talk about nothing but breakfast foods, do you?"—Yonkers Statesman.

His Share.



"What do you mean by slapping your little brother?"

"Well, pa just spanked me, and ma says I must always share everything I get with my brother."—Philadelphia Press.

Saves Wear.

"Why do you keep such a careless servant?"

"She is the only one that my clothes wouldn't fit."—Judge.

Jealousy.

"Do you admire my hair?"

"Immensely. Won't you tell me where you got it?"—New York Sun.

"Temple of Jezreel."

The unfinished "Temple of Jezreel" on Chatham Hill, a landmark on the London and Dover road, is to be converted into a picture palace. It was built twenty-eight years ago, at a cost of $225,000, by James Jersom Jezreel, founder of a sect known as the "New and Latter House of Israel," who claimed immunity from death. When five storeys had been reached Jezreel himself died.

LARGE MASONIC GATHERING; OBSERVANCE OF FESTIVAL

The Local Masonic Lodges Commemorate the Festival of St. John the Evangelist

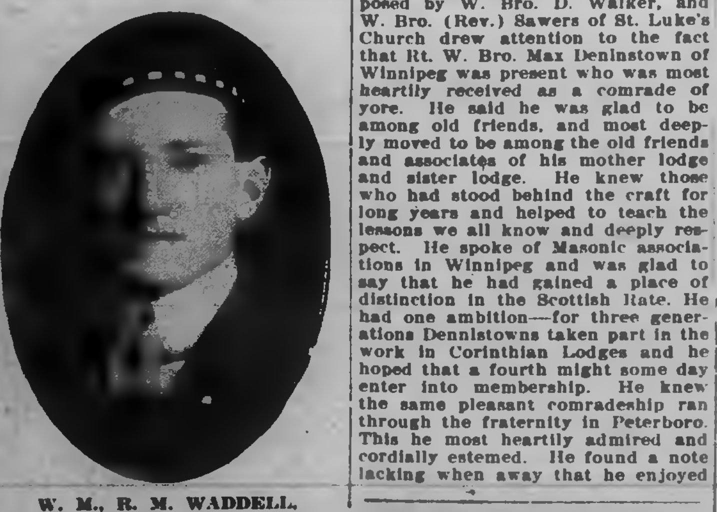
The 27th of December is a red letter day in the Masonic calendar, despite the fact that the Masonic color is blue. The date is one on which masons the world over, get together and hold fraternal intercourse. On this occasion the officers elect for the year ensuing are formally installed or placed in office.

There was a very large attendance last evening at the Masonic Hall, the formal work being put on very early in the evening, the installing Master being W. Bro. A. P. McLean.

The list as following give the lodge officers for both Corinthian and Peterboro lodges.

Corinthian Lodge, No. 101

Wor. Bro. T. H. Gillespie, I.P.M., W. Bro. R. M. Waddell, W.M., Bro. H. W. Morphet, S.W., Bro. J. F. Allin, J.W., R. W. Bro. H. Winch, Chaplain, Bro. S. T. Medd, Secretary, Bro. W. R. Morris, S.D., Bro. F. Dawson, J. D., Bro. G. K. Rackham, I.G., Bro. E. F. Mason, S.S., Bro. Hazen Ritchie, J.S., Bro. C. H. Ackerman, Organist, W. Bro. J. Belcher, Tyler.



W. M., R. M. WADDELL, of Corinthian Lodge, No. 101.

Peterboro Lodge No. 155

Wor. Bro. W. R. G. Higgins, I.P.M., W. Bro. A. A. Fowler, W.M., W. Bro. W.S. Campbell, S.W., Bro. J. M. Rossell, J.W., W. Bro. W. Hill, Chap R.W. Bro. A. Gibson Treas, Rt. W. Bro. W. H. Walkey, Sec., Wor. Bro. J. G. M. Wilson, D. of C., Bro. G. R. Cameron, S.D., Bro G Macdonald, J. D, Bro. A. Weddell, I.G., Bro. R. G. Cottrell, S.S., Bro. S. Taylor, J.S., Bro. R. J. Devey, Org., Bro. E. B. Wilson, Tyler, Wor. Bro Wm Hill, Trustee, Rt. Wor. Bro. H. Rush, V. Wor. Bro. R. F. Morrow, auditors.

At eight o'clock the brethren adjourned to the refreshment room and partook of a very fine and ample dinner, served by Bro. Thos. Hooper, caterer. A card of snatches of songs and choruses was placed to use of each brother and led by a few voices all joined in with large vigor.

The chairman for the evening was W. Bro. A. P. McLean, while Bro. Devery led the singing and made the piano ring.

The loyal toast of "The King" was drank and honored.

The Grand Master and the Grand Lodge responded to by W. Bro. John Crane, in a brief reference to the administrative work and function of this governing body.

"The Day We Commemorate" was responded to by Right Wor. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner, who described the significance of St. John, the Evangelist, occurring on Dec. 29th. He traced the Masonic connection and observance of the anniversary wherever Masons congregate. Enlarging on his theme, he addressed the brethren on the duty of Masons to exercise that charity which likened not only alms-giving, but charitable in our deeds, and our words, uttering nothing that was uncharitable, and abstaining from wrong thoughts, covering all our frailties with the mantle of brotherly love.

"The Newly Installed Officers" was proposed by W. Bro. Higgins, and responded to by W. Bro. A. A. Fowler of Peterboro Lodge, who expressed confidence in the officers elected.

"The Retiring Officers" was proposed by W. Bro. M. Comstock, and responded to by W. Bro. W. R. G. Higgins, for Peterboro Lodge, and W. Bro. F. D. Kerr, for Corinthian Lodge, paying a well deserved compliment to the W. Master during last year, W. Bro. T. H. Gillespie, who had recently been called away from the city.

"The Absent Brothers" was proposed by Bro. J. R. Webb, who spoke feelingly and affectionately of the many members who once enjoying associations of the lodges, but who have removed from the district. Many still retain membership and are not forgotten, especially on such occasions as this. He referred to those who stay away, to those who have moved away, and reverently to those who have passed away, and said that all these taught to us lessons that we should take to heart and ponder.

"The Visiting Brethren" was proposed by W. Bro. D. Walker, and W. Bro. (Rev.) Sawers of St. Luke's Church drew attention to the fact that Rt. W. Bro. Max Deninstown of Winnipeg was present who was most heartily received as a comrade of yore. He said he was glad to be among old friends, and most deeply moved to be among the old friends and associates of his mother lodge and sister lodge. He knew those who had stood behind the craft for long years and helped to teach the lessons we all know and deeply respect. He spoke of Masonic associations in Winnipeg and was glad to say that he had gained a place of distinction in the Scottish Rate. He had one ambition—for three generations Dennistowns taken part in the work in Corinthian Lodges and he hoped that a fourth might some day enter into membership. He knew the same pleasant comradeship ran through the fraternity in Peterboro. This he most heartily admired and cordially estemed. He found a note lacking when away that he enjoyed when here. He added a word of commendation to the address and past addresses of W. Bro. Kenner.

W. M., A. A. FOWLER, of Peterboro Lodge, No. 155.

Rev. Bro. Sawers was called on to finish his remarks, and spoke of the world wide reach and influence of Masonry and instanced that in the room were brothers from Dawson City and Newfoundland, and these and all others were heartily welcome.

Bro. G. W. Morrow proposed "The Installing Masters" coupling with it the name of W. Bro. A. P. McLean, who briefly expressed his sense of the compliment paid him in allotting to his care the duties of the evening, and read a pleasant allegory, taken from the construction of a modern building and applied to the principles and practice of Masonry.

"The Junior Warden's Toast" of time-honored memory, brought the evening to a close, with expressions of good feeling and friendship on all hands. During the evening Mr. Chas. Coleman and Mr. W. Patterson contributed to the program.

Glasses and Good Vision

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.

Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. are long experienced and have a wide and enviable reputation for ability. Our equipment is one of the most complete in Canada and we know how to use it.

FIRE KILLS EIGHT PEOPLE; THIRTY MADE HOMELESS

Blaze Started on Ground Floor of Tenement Building, Cutting off Escape

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Dec. 31.—Five men and three women were killed in a fire this morning in a tenement house at 96 Monroe street, on the East Side.

Fifteen others were injured, some seriously, by jumping from the fire escapes.

The fire, which is supposed to be of incendiary origin, started on the ground floor and as a result all escape by the stairway was cut off.

Thirty families were made homeless and many were forced to flee to shelter, in the cold morning air, in a half clad condition. The dead are:—Mrs. Becky Kaplan, widow, age 55; Barney and Louis Kaplan, aged 18 and 16, her sons; Samuel Cohen, age 64; Isaac Weisberg, age 50; Mrs. Weisberg, his wife, aged 50; Israel Golden, age 35; Gussie Mazzin, age 19.

Gussie Mazzin, after assisting her father, mother and five brothers to the fire escapes, became confused and returned to her room, where she was found dead.

TIME IS NOT OPPORTUNE

City Solicitor Hall in Reply to Mr. Collier's Statements

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—

As Mr. W. H. Collier's letter in your issue of the 27th inst., refers to me, I think I might be permitted to correct some of the statements in it, probably made through want of knowledge of the facts. He seems to assume that the Acts relating to the city's powers of expropriation passed in 1912 and 1913 were passed exactly in the form the council wished them to be in, and has forgotten or did not know that the acts as prepared under instructions from the council, had to pass the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature and undergo in that ordeal many changes and the city had to to take what the Private Bills Committee would give, not what the Council wanted or asked. Both the acts of 1912 and 1913 were very strenuously opposed before the Private Bills Committee, not only by the Companies engaged in the supply of electricity and their friends, but by many of the ratepayers who did not agree with the council's policy, and although the representatives of the council made every effort to have the acts put in the shape they wanted, they had to be accepted as they are now and the council had to proceed under them, and although the acts are not as the council desired, it is not to be assumed that the rights of the city under the acts are not sufficient for the purpose of acquiring the property of the Light and Power Company, or that the council is in any "tangle or muddle" as asserted by Mr. Collier. Several of Mr. Collier's other ideas, as expressed in his letter, are also erroneous, but at this juncture it is not advisable to set him right through the public press.

Yours truly,
E. H. D. HALL.

HIBERNIANS WERE AT HOME

Progressive Euchre and Dancing Made Up the Program.

A very delightful evening was spent last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum in the form of an at home, held under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Progressive euchre was played till ten-thirty, the winners being Mrs. Leonard Henry and Mr. V. McCabe. Dainty refreshments were served, after which the dancing began, and it was continued till twelve-thirty, when the happy crowd dispersed. The music was furnished in a very efficient manner by Messrs. W. Moher and S. Sheehy.

ELECTED TO COUNCIL

At the election of officers at Toronto on Tuesday, for the Ontario Bar Association, Mr. F. D. Kerr was elected to the council.

LABOR REPORT

The following is the report to the Labor Gazette on the conditions of labor in Peterboro during November:

The general condition of the labor market differed little from last month. The state of employment was not quite so good as in November of last year. The building trades were very busy for this season, and the prospects are good for the winter. The Canadian General Electric Company has orders on hand that will carry it well through the coming year. A contract has been secured from the Canadian Northern Railway tunnel under Mount Royal, Montreal. The Wm. Hamilton Company is also enjoying busy conditions. It has just closed a contract to supply the Ford Motor Company with a year's supply of castings. The contract for the new Government dam at Nassau has been let, and the contractors are getting material ready and will start operations as soon as possible. The contract price is in the neighborhood of seventy-five thousand dollars. The Canadian General Electric Company will also make extensive improvements around its power house at Nassau. At the beginning of the month an effort was made to raise the price of milk to eight cents a quart, but there was so much opposition that it only lasted a few days. There is considerable activity among the woodworkers, carpenters and joiners at the present time, a general reorganising going on.

Caring for stock and marketing produce occupied the farmers' attention. Hay is selling at $18 to $20 per ton. The Quaker Oats Company is paying eighty-eight cents a bushel for Ontario winter wheat.

Lumbering operations are in full progress, and large parties are going to the shanties. The lumbermen are anticipating a heavy cut this season, and preparations are being made accordingly.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is building a new swing bridge over the Otonabee, this being necessary on account of the heavy traffic. The new freight sheds are nearly completed. The lighting system has been installed and will be ready for next month.

FORMER PASTOR AT MARK STREET

Rev. Lockhart Thompson Passed Away at Vancouver.

Word has been received in the city to the effect that Rev. Lockhart Thompson passed away in Vancouver, B.C., on December 17th, and was buried on December 20th.

Rev. Mr. Thompson was a superannuated Methodist minister and while in active work he was pastor of Mark street Methodist church of this city for three years. He left here some eight years ago and has since been living in the west.

Mrs. (Dr.) Carmichael is the only relative of the deceased in this city.

PLAN FAILS AT MONTREAL

No Relief as Yet From the Water Famine

Westmounters Invite Friends to Have a Bath

Canadian Press Despatch

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—The water famine which began Xmas Day is not yet relieved. The engineers' plan for filling the gap with a steel pipe has failed. After pumping water through the main thus patched, for two hours, the packing connecting the concrete conduit and steel pipe was forced out and pumping operations had to be suspended.

The famine will continue today and probably tomorrow. People in Westmount, which has its own supply, are sending Montreal friends cards inviting them to bath parties and many acceptances are being received.

St. George's Society.

All members of the St. George's Choral Society and their friends, are asked to assemble at the Foresters' Hall, on Simcoe street, at 8 p.m. to-night for the New Year's eve social. A pleasant time is assured.

CANDIDATE AT PORT HOPE EXPIRES SUDDENLY

Thos. Long Had Been Nominated for Position of Reeve

PORT HOPE, Dec. 31.—One of the town's best known and oldest citizens died suddenly yesterday afternoon of heart failure in the person of Thomas Long, who was a candidate for reev for 1914 with every prospect of being elected. Mr. Long was born in New York City on October 25, 1840, and came to Newtonville, Ont, when five years of age. He had been a resident of Port Hope over 40 years, coming here to take over the insurance business of the late Henry Wade, and engaged in the real estate business. He was a chartered member of the Canadian Ticket Agents' Association and for years a member of the executive. He held several municipal positions, and was reeve of Port Hope, justice of the peace, water commissioner, harbor commissioner and director of the gas company. He was a prominent member of the Masonic order.

Mr. Long was married in 1876 to Miss Sarah Jane Clarke, daughter of the late James Clarke, of Port Hope, and is survived by his widow and one son, Captain A. H. C. Long, C. P. R. agent and Secretary of the Board of Trade. The interment takes place on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock to St. John's Cemetery, Port Hope. Deceased was a Presbyterian. The whole community is shocked at the suddenness of his passing.

THE PEOPLE'S CHIMES.

The Peoples' Chimes will be rung to-night at midnight; also at the 10 a.m. service in St. John's church tomorrow.

TWO FOR REEVE OF ASPHODEL

WESTWOOD, Dec. 30.—At the nomination meeting for Asphodel there was nominated for Reeve, John MacNaughton, Maxwell Brown, Patrick MacNulty and James Andrews.

Mr. MacNulty and James Andrews resigned, this leaving the contest for the Reeveship between Mr. MacNaughton and Mr. Brown.

For Councillors—

Adam Humphries, John Sargent, Andrew Quinlan, Wm. Lynch, Thomas Davidson, John Scott, John Preston, and Robert Collins.

Mr. Wm. Lynch and Mr. John Preston both resigned.

A very interesting meeting was held in the Town Hall at Westwood after the nomination in which the old council gave a very good account of their stewardship, which seemed to be satisfactory to the large audience.

WARRANT ISSUED.

Wm. Crowley, of North Monaghan, a blacklister, failed to answer his summons to Police Court this morning, and as a result a warrant was issued for his arrest.

CHORAL EVENING AT ALL SAINTS'

An Enjoyable Programme of Music by Combined Choirs.

The combined choir of St. John's and All Saints' churches with several members from other city choirs gave a very fine choral evening last night under the direction of Mr. Geo. Chandler and Mrs. R. J. Devey, the latter with Miss Flowers presiding at the organ.

All the soloists acquitted themselves well and so did the large chorus, which made a striking picture in the processions. The Rev. F. J. Sawers conducted devotional exercises and dainty refreshments were afterwards served by the ladies in the Parish Hall. The program was as follows:

Part I.

Hymn 383—"Onward Christian Soldiers."
Choral—"Sleepers Wake a Voice is Calling" Mendelssohn's, St. Paul.
Chorus—"Send out Thy Light" Ch. Gounod.
Recit. Tenor—"Comfort Ye" Aria "Every Valley" Mr. Geo. E. Chandler.
Chorus—"And the Glory of the Lord" Handel, air—"The people that walked in darkness", Mr. H. Hill.
Recit. Alto—"Behold a Virgin" Mrs. Lloyd.
Chorus—"Oh Thou that Tellest".
Hymn 79—"Angels from the Realms of Glory".

Part II.

Chorus—"Glory to God" Handel, air—"Come unto Him", Miss B. Greenlaigh.
Chorus—"Behold the Lamb of God" Handel, air—"How beautiful are the Feet." Miss Ruby Quartermaine.
"Hallelujah Chorus" Handel.

WEDDING DAY ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes Entertained Their Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes, of McKellar street, entertained about 40 friends last evening, the event being the celebration of their crystal wedding. Music, games and other means of amusement constituted the evening's entertainment, which was greatly enjoyed by those present. A delightful and sumptuous repast was also provided by the hostess and host. A large number of gifts were received.

RETURNED BY ACCLAMATION

No Contest for the Separate School Trustees

The nomination for Separate School Trustees was held today and as there was no opposition, the following were elected by acclamation:

West Ward—Mr. J. J. Hickey.
East Ward—Mr. James Drain.
Centre Ward—Mr. H. Carveth.
North Ward—Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald.
South Ward—Rev. J. J. O'Brien, (one year).
Mr. J. Goslin, (2 years).

Rev. J. J. O'Brien takes the place of Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien D.D., who was on the Trustee Board prior to his elevation to the Episcopate.

CHRISTMAS TREE FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL

A delightful time was afforded the members of Charlotte street Sunday school last evening, the occasion being the annual Christmas Tree of the Sunday school.

Mr. Wm. Galbraith in the role of Santa Claus was a find, and was the means of much mirth for the younger generation in attendance.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 31, 1913.

THE PASSING OF THE YEAR.

THE YEAR HAS COME to its close. Most of us are, like Janus, two-faced. One face turned to the past, the other to the future. Man is a creature that looks before and after. With one hand he dismisses the parting guest, with the other he greets the new. We must not stand too long upon the threshold of the new year, pondering upon the passing of time.

What boots it to repeat,
How time is slipping underneath our feet,
Unborn to-morrow and dead yesterday,—
Why think about them if to-day be sweet?

sings Omar, and it is good advice, even if to-day be not sweet but bitter.

We have to get used to this passing show and move with it if we are to do anything at all. It is not enough that we have done well yesterday; our best deeds are soon forgotten even by our best friends. "A living dog is better than a dead lion." Past achievements are past, they are there only as models to be improved upon. What we did yesterday we get credit for as a deed of yesterday and unless we intend to die and let our epitaph be written, we must go on doing. "Time wears, my friend, a wallet on his back in which he puts alms for oblivion." The lines of Tennyson always ring true:

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky;
  The flying cloud, the frosty light;
  The year is dying in the night;
Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
  The ancient forms of party strife;
  Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners purer laws.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
  The larger heart, the kindlier hand,
  Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

IS THE WOLF AT THE DOOR?

OUR EVENING CONTEMPORARY replying to the question of a correspondent as to the present slackness in trade and the consequent unemployment, tries to fix the blame upon the present Government. Of course when you are "agin the Government" it is the simplest thing in the world to blame the Government for all the ills that flesh is heir to. What easier way is ther for to get out of answering a serious question than to say, "it is all because you voted for Borden and not for Laurier at the last general election." That explains the whole thing! What better explanation could you have than that? There is no need for going into details and for showing just how it comes about—this is a very troublesome process—the facts remain that there are unemployed in Peterborough while Mr. Borden is Premier, those two facts are co-relative. Put Sir Wilfrid Laurier in power at Ottawa and the man looking for a job in Peterborough would immediately get one. This is the kind of reasoning the Examiner deals out to its hungry correspondent.

It is not true that there never was any unemployment under Laurier, there were always periods of slackness. Five or six years ago there was a time of great falling off in trade and many people had to be sent back to the Old Country by the authorities here in Peterborough. The Government was not to blame at that time any more than now. The winter season has much to do with the present scarcity of work and this will always affect the labor market, more or less while the climate is what it is. There is nothing doing in the building trade because nothing can be done. As for the discharging of men in some of our factories, this can be explained partly by the exigencies of the market for certain classes of goods. The fact that an American firm brought out a new electrical instrument which was cheaper than the one made in Peterborough, had nothing to do with Mr. Borden, and yet this is one of the causes of certain men being knocked off. Among other causes are the slackness of trade in other countries. If the world's market is not demanding goods, it does not pay to go on manufacturing them. The check is only temporary, the world is not going to stop just yet and our industries are looking forward to a revival soon. In some of our factories there is no dearth of business, indeed one firm has more orders than it can fulfil, yet they have been forced to stop work owing to financial stringency. Money is out that must be got in before urgent work can be gone on with.

This stringency in the money market is not due to Mr. Borden. It is due really to the too excessive booming of the west. And if any one is to be blamed for this it is the Laurier Government, for they boast that they made the west. British capital poured into the Western Provinces and many investors were bitten, and they say, "once bitten twice shy," capital is certainly very shy just now. But it is hoped that with the firm stand of Mr. Borden in Imperial matters and his determination to carry through the Naval Aid Bill proposal, in spite of the Senate, that Canada will regain the confidence of British capital, without which the development of Canada would have been impossible. But it is not our purpose to blame anyone for bad trade. We must make the best of it and take our medicine like all other nations have to do. We must not expect special treatment. We have had our full share of prosperity and are still far more prosperous than other countries. There is no need for panic legislation in the shape of "free food." If the wolf is at the door it is surely the height of folly to open the door and let it in.

MONTREAL WITHOUT WATER.

WE ARE APT sometimes to think that our own city is about the worst governed city anywhere. When Peterborough was without water for a number of hours last summer many nasty things were thought and said about our water commissioners, some of them may have been true. But things were not quite so bad as they are at present in Montreal, where practically the whole city has its tongue hanging out for lack of water.

Who is to blame for this state of things? that is what Montreal citizens are asking. The Gazette, which is generally a mild and sober journal, gives vent to some very candid and caustic remarks about civic officials in an editorial entitled, "An inexcusable fault." When we say The Gazette is usually a strictly "sober" journal we do not wish to infer that the lack of water has forced that newspaper to adopt a stronger beverage, nor do we believe it. However, the following is what The Gazette thinks about the present state of affairs:

"Wherever the blame for the present water supply failure in Montreal may be finally placed, the facts make it clear that there is no excuse for what has happened. The conduit which broke is new. It is part of a larger scheme which is yet but partly completed. Its location and character is known not only to the department of the municipal service which has it in charge, but to everybody who takes an interest in the city's affairs. It is also known that, pending the completion of the power canal alongside, it is the only means of supplying any kind of water to a large part of Montreal. Only gross incompetence or neglect could have allowed such a work to have been imperilled. It has broken, and the comfort, the health and the property of the citizens is put at needless risk. There can be no defence for whoever is responsible for such a condition under such circumstances. There is no room even for beginning a defence. It will be just as well if none is offered. It is to be added, also, that the case is made worse by the talk some seem to have put out of it taking ten days to repair sixty feet of conduit, in a crisis when hundreds of millions of property are at stake because of the failure. There are evidently in the city service many men who regard their positions only as the source of their wages and not as involving serious duties. They are found in many departments also. They need a lesson to the effect that they are servants of the citizens and must do their duty or expect to be removed."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

PETERBOROUGH can, in a small measure at least, realize what it must be like in Montreal just now without water. The people have to resort to melted snow for drinking purposes. We thought we were in a bad way this summer when the water was shut off for a whole day.

HARRY LAUDER, who is starting on a tour of North America, Australia and New Zealand, has received invitations to occupy pulpits in New York, Toronto and Buffalo. This comedian seems to have bridged the gulf between the pulpit and the stage.

"CARRYING VOTERS TO THE POLLS," is the title of an article in a contemporary. Candidates should not get their supporters too drunk before voting or they might mark the wrong place on the ballot paper. A man who has to be carried to the poll is not in a fit condition to vote at all!

THE ANGLICAN CHURCH throughout the United Kingdom held special services on Sunday last to consider the present situation in Ireland and prayers were offered for the preservation of peace, that the nation might be spared the calamity of a civil war. Those who know what civil war means may well pray to be delivered from it. It is worse than Home Rule.

THE EXAMINER is an able adept at twisting. It construes The Review's article on the municipal coal yard proposition into a support for such a scheme. Most readers think that what was printed pretty effectually killed off the idea, if it ever had any substantial foundation. Nor was it an attack on a coal man, who is quite able to take care of himself and who will make an excellent member of the board when elected. The Examiner hates the idea of anything approaching municipal ownership—light, power, paving plant, or any form of local effort by the municipality for itself.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

For the Press.

Colliers.

A good motto for editors is this one of King Solomon's invention:

Buy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding.

The Tariff and Living.

Guelph Herald.

No person who has made a close study of economics contends that the reduction or abolition of duties on foodstuffs would appreciably diminish the cost of living. Western Liberal journals, and only a few of the more rabid of these, assert that free food means cheaper food. The San Francisco Chronicle in its issue of December 8th commented upon the new policy of the Canadian opportunities as follows:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier has adopted the slogan, "free food before dreadnoughts,' and is out on a campaign for reducing duties as a means of reducing the cost of living. He will find no help for his theory in the experience of the United States under the new tariff. And, in any case, where does Canada expect to get cheaper food than she can furnish herself? She eats only one-quarter of the breadstuffs raised within the Dominion,"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—In view of the fact that under the chairmanship of Ald. Johnston the city's bill for lighting its down-town section has been increased from $450.00 a year to in the neighborhood of $6,500.00 a year, is it not about time that the ratepayers should exercise more care in the choice of their representatives in the city council? If the balance of the city of Peterboro were lit up one-tenth as well as the business section of George Street, then on the same basis the total lighting bill of Peterboro would be no less than about $42,500.00 as against the present lighting bill of $8,250.00. There is no ratepayer in the North Ward who cannot justly complain of the fact that it is very poorly lighted, and some of the streets are practically not lit at all, and still Alderman Johnston, the representative of the No. 4 Ward has seen fit to have the ratepayers taxed, to brilliantly light the down-town section of No. 2 Ward. There are two candidates before the electors of the North Ward, namely: Ald. oJhnston and Dr. Holloway. Those who know Dr. Holloway during this last seven years that he has been in Peterboro, have justly sized him up as a careful and successful business man and possesses every qualification to properly represent the North Ward in the City Council.

Yours etc.,
G. B. BOUCHER.

(Our correspondent is astray us to his figures, and he assumes as a fact what he hears)—Ed. Review.

MR. STRATTON'S LETTER

To the Editor The Review.

Dear Sir,—

Mr. A. H. Stratton is out with a very fine plausible letter, which he is mailing to the electors in the Centre Ward, and in which he sets forth all his good qualities and says he is "with my present knowledge of the subject" in favor of the city owning a street paving plant, but he does not let us know how he stands with respect to the Hydro question.

Come out, Mr. Stratton, and tell us if you are for or against the Hydro proposition. It is vital at this time that we, as electors, by our votes, should not put into office men who dodge in their printed utterances, the question of the city's Hydro-Electric municipal policy. We would be fools to assist into the council any man or men other than those who will give the most distinct and positive assurance that they are with the city in this matter.

We do not want men in the council, who will knife the city's plans and efforts. Mr. Stratton's circular dodges all reference to this subject, and I fear his evasion may be the outcome of some alliance with those who seek to block the city's operations.

Come out Mr. Stratton, we are looking at you.

Yours truly,
RATEPAYER.

TEMPERANCE VOTE.

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—There has come into my hands an extraordinary communication from the City Temperance League, signed by H. B. Cowan, President, and A. D. Cunningham, Secretary. It is of the late date of Dec. 29th, and looks like a last-minute spasm in fear and favor for Alderman Gillespie. It states amongst other things these words: "Mr. Hartley is a good man and is a temperance worker, but he has not had the opportunity to assist us that Mr. Gillespie has had," etc. Then follows the following objection:—"Under the circumstances your committee has come to the unanimous conclusion that the candidate most entitled to receive the temperance vote is Alderman G. A. Gillespie." I would like to ask why Mr. Hartley, if he is a good man and a temperance worker, should be attacked in this underhand manner by the Temperance League. Is it not politics, Mr. Editor? Some people are training Mr. Gillespie for the future and they do not hesitate to sacrifice Mr. Hartley when they admit that Mr. Hartley is in every way an acceptable man. Is this fair play, Mr. Editor? I say it is not.

Yours, etc.,
Citizen.

PRICE OF COAL

To the Editor of The Review,

Sir,—Will you allow me the privilege to refer to your article, "The Municipal Coal Yard." As one interested I would like to ask what are the prices of coal in Peterboro today?

I find in looking over the advertisements of the local dealers, prices are not quoted. Kindly oblige.

Yours truly,
ONE INTERESTED.

Prices for coal are as follows: Egg, $8; stove, $8.25; nut, $8.50; pea, $7; soft, $5.50.—Ed.

Choosing the Cuspidors.

Rev. Alexander McGillivray, the well-known Presbyterian minister in Toronto, is credited as being the relator of an amusing story concerning an actual incident in a Canadian kirk.

It seems that in this particular church there were some careless young fellows who got into the bad habit of expectorating on the floor. The nuisance had continued for some time when the pastor's patience finally came to the breaking point.

He attended a meeting of the Church Session, and explained the situation to the pillars of the kirk.

"I am afraid if this expectoration continues we will have to have a couple of cuspidors," said he.

Up rose one of the aforesaid pillars, and gravely asserted that immediate action should be taken on the request of the minister.

"I move," said he, "that we nominate David McPherson and Sandy Campbell as cuspidors." — Canadian Courier.

DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service of all such.

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By HAROLD MacGRATH

[Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.]

When the rubber was finished Cathewe came into the breach by suggesting that they two, he and his partner, should take the air for awhile, and Hildegarde thanked him with her eyes. They traversed the port side, saying nothing, but thinking much. His arm was under hers to steady her, and he could feel the catch each time she breathed, as when one stifles sobs that are tearless. Ah, to hold her close and to shield her, but a thousand arms may not intervene between the heart and the pain that stabs it. He knew—he knew all about it, and there was murder in his thought whenever his thought was of Breitmann. To be alone with him somewhere and to fight it out with their bare hands!

She had been schooled in the art of acting, but not in the art of dissimulation. She had been of the world without having been worldly, and sometimes she was as frank and simple as a child. And wordliness makes a buffer in times like these. Cathewe thanked God for his own shell, toughened as it had been in the war of life.

They paused by the rail. Without warning she bent swiftly and kissed his hand, which lay upon the rail. "How kind you are to me!"

"Oh, pshaw!" But the touch of her lips shook his soul.

Cathewe was one of those sure, quiet men, a staff to lean on, that a woman may find once in a lifetime. They are as a usual thing always loving deeply and without success, but always invariably cheerful and buoyant—genuine philosophers. He knew that the whole heart of Hildegarde von Mitter had yielded to another. But it had been thrown, as it were, against a wall. There was this one hope, dimly burning, that some day he might catch it on the rebound.

"Why are not all men like you?" she asked.

"The world would not be half so interesting. Some men shall be fortunate and others shall not. Everything has to balance in some way."

"To have met you," childishly.

"Don't talk like that. It always makes me less sad than furious. We'll go on as we have done in the past, good friends. Call me when you need me, and wherever I am I shall come."

"How pitifully weak I must seem to you!"

"You would be no happier if you were a mask. Hildegarde, what has happened? What power has this adventurer over you? I cannot understand. He was man enough to say that you were guiltless of any wrong."

"He said that?" turning upon him sharply. She could forgive much.

He could not see her face, but by the tone of her voice he knew it had brightened. "Hildegarde," and he pressed his hand down hard over hers, "I could find a priest the day we land if you would love me. You will always remember that."

"As if I could ever forget your kindness! Much as I know him there are still some unfilled pages. I would call him a scoundrel did I not know that in parts he has been a hero. What sacrifices the man has made and with what patience!"

"To what end?" quietly.

"No, no, Arthur! I have promised him."

He took her by the arm roughly. "Let us make two or three rounds and go back. We shan't grow any more cheerful talking this way."

"He loves her. I saw it in his eyes, and I must stand aside and watch!"

"So must I," he said. "Aren't you just a little selfish, Hildegarde?"

"I am wretched, Arthur, and I am a fool besides. Oh, that I were cold blooded like your women that I could eat out my heart in secret, but I can't, I can't!"

"But you have courage. Only use it. If what you say of him is true rest easy. She is not in his orbit. She will not be impressed by an adventurer of his breed."

"Thank you!" with a broken laugh. "I am only an opera singer, here on sufferance."

"Oh, I did not mean it that way. Let us finish the walk," savagely.

On the afternoon of the second day out tea was served under the awning, and Captain Flanegan condescended to leave his bridge for half an hour.

"Say," said the captain, drinking his tea, not because he liked it, but because it was customary, "I've got a character forwards. I'm allus shippin' odds and ends. Got a Frenchman, hands like a lady."

Breitmann leaned forward, and M. Ferraud sat up.

"Yessir," continued the captain, "speaks Eyetalian an' English. An' if I ever meets a lady with long, soft hands like his'n I'm for a pert talk straightway."

"What's the matter with his hands?" asked the admiral.

"Why, commodore, they're as soft as Miss Laura's here, an' yet when th' big Swede who handles th' baggage was a-foolin' with him this mornin' it was the Swede who begs off. Nary a callous, an' yet he bowls th' big one round th' deck like he was a liner bein' pierced by a sassy tug. An' what gets me is he knows every bolt from stem to stern, sir, an' an all around good sailor int' th' bargain, an' it don' take me more'n twelve hours t' find that out. Well, I'm off t' th' bridge. Good day, ladies."

Breitmann rose presently and sauntered forward, while M. Ferraud snuggled down in his rugs again. The others entered into a game of deck cricket.

But M. Ferraud was not so ill that he was unable to steal from his cabin at half after 9 at night without even the steward being aware of his departure. It cannot be said that he roamed about the deck, for whenever he moved it was in the shadow and always forward. By and by voices drifted down the wind. One he knew and expected, Breitmann's. Of the other he was not sure, though the French he spoke was of classic smoothness. M. Ferraud was exceedingly interested. He had been waiting for this meeting. Only a phrase or two could be heard distinctly. But words were not necessary. What he desired above all things was a glimpse of this Frenchman's face. After several minutes Breitmann went aft. M. Ferraud stepped out cautiously, and luck was with him. The sailor to whom Breitmann had spoken so earnestly was lolling against the rail in the act of lighting a cigarette. The light from the match was feeble, but it sufficed the keen eyes of the watcher. He gasped a little. Strong hands indeed! Here in the garb of a common sailor was one of the foremost Orleanists in France!

CHAPTER XIV.

LIKING IS NEVER LOVING.

BREITMANN and the admiral usually worked from 10 till luncheon unless it was too stormy, and then the admiral took the day off. The business under hand was of no great moment. It was rather an outlet for the admiral's energy and gave him something to look forward to as each day came round. Many a morning he longed for the quarterdeck of his old battle ship. Since his country had no further use for him and as it was as necessary as air to his lungs that he tread the deck of a ship he had purchased the Laura.

"That will be all this morning, Mr. Breitmann," he said, rising and looking out of the porthole.

"Come in, Laura, come in."

The girl stood framed in the low doorway, a charming picture to the old man and a lovely one to the secretary. She balanced herself with a hand on each side of the jam.

"Father, how can you work when the sun is so beautiful outside? Good morning, Mr. Breitmann," cordially.

"Good morning."

"Work is over, Laura. Come in." The admiral reached forth an arm and caught her, drawing her gently in and finally to his breast.

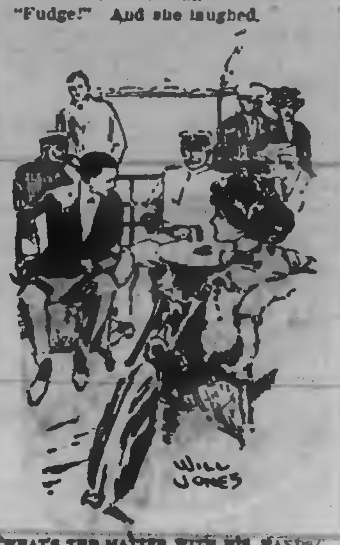
Breitmann would have given an eye for that right. The picture set his nerves twitching.

"I am not in the way?"

"Not at all," answered the secretary. "I was just leaving." And with good foresight he passed out.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," murmured the admiral.

"Fudge!" And she laughed.



"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH HIS HANDS?" ASKED THE ADMIRAL.

"We are having a fine voyage."

"Splendid! Why is it that I am always happy?"

"It is because you do not depend upon others for it, my dear. I am happy too. I am as happy as a boy with his first boat. But never has a ship gone slower than this one of mine. I am simply crazy to drop anchor in the gulf of Ajaccio. I find it on the tip of my tongue every night at dinner to tell the others where we are bound."

"Why not? Where's the harm now?"

"I don't know, but something keeps it back. Laura," looking into her eyes, "did we ever cruise with brighter men on board?"

"What is it you wish to know, father?" merrily. "You dear old sailor, don't you understand that these men are different? They are men who accomplish things. They haven't time to bother about young women."

"You don't say!" pinching the ear nearest.

"This is the seventh day out, and not one of them has ceased to be interesting yet."

"Would they cease to be interesting if they proposed?" quizzing.

These two had no unshared secrets. They were sure of each other. He knew that when this child of his divided her affection with another man that man would be deserving.

"I would rather have them all as they are. They make fine comrades."

He sighed thankfully. "Arthur seems to be out of the race."

"Rather say I am!" with laughter. "Why, a child could read Arthur Cathewe's face when he looks at her. Isn't she simply beautiful?"

"Very. But there are types and types. What do you think of Mr Breitmann?" soberly.

"He is charming sometimes, but he has a little too much reserve. Doubtless he sees his position too keenly. He should not."

"Do you like him?"

"Yes," frankly.

"So do I, and yet there are moments when I do not." The admiral filled his pipe carefully.

"But your reason?" surprised.

"That's just the trouble. I haven't any tangible reason. The doubt exists, and I can't explain it. Flanagan will tell you."

The girl grew studious and grave. Had there not been an echo of this doubt in her own mind? Immediately she smiled.

"We are talking nonsense and wasting the sunshine."

"How about Fitzgerald?"

"Oh, he's the most sensible of them all. He proposed to me the first night out."

"What?" The admiral dropped his pipe.

"Not so loud!" she warned. And then the clear music of her laughter penetrated beyond the cabin, and Fitzgerald, wandering about without purpose, heard it and paused.

"You minx!" growled the admiral. "To scare your old father like that!"

"Dearest, weren't you fishing to be scared?"

"Let's get out into the sunshine. I never could get the best of you. But you really don't mean"—

"I really do not. He's too busy telling me the plot of this novel he is going to write to make love to a girl who doesn't want more than one man in the family, and that's her foolish old father."

And they went outside, arm in arm, laughing together like the good comrades they were.

Fitzgerald viewed his case dispassionately. But what to do? A thousand times he had argued out the question, with a single result, that he was a fool for his pains. He became possessed with sudden inexplicable longings for land. He could not get away from this yacht. On land there would have been a hundred straight lines to the woods and the fisherman's philosophy.

"The villain?"

He was moved suddenly out of his dream, for the object of it stood smiling at his side. A wisp of hair was blowing across her eyes, and she was endeavoring to adjust it under her cap.

"The villain?" making a fine effort to remarshal his thoughts.

"Yes. We were talking about him last night. Where did you leave him?"

"He was still pursuing, I believe."

She propped her elbows on the rail. It was a seductive pose and came very near being the young man's undoing.

"Does it seem impossible to you," she said, "that in these prosaic times we are treasure hunting? Must we not wake up and find it a dream?"

"Most dreams are perishable, but in this case we have the dream tightly bound. But what are we going to do with all this money when we find it?"

"Divide it or start a soldiers' home. I've never thought of it as money."

"Heaven knows, I have!"

"Why?"

"Do you really wish to know?" in a voice new to her ear. "Do you wish to know why I want money, lots and lots of it?"

To be continued.

A CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Tortured Four Years Until He Took "Fruit-a-tives"

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st, 1913.

"Your "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was a cripple completely, not being able to do anything. I doctored with four different physicians, but they did not help me. Other advertised remedies were equally unsatisfactory, and I have taken several.

Some neighbor of mine told me that "Fruit-a-tives" helped him, and I took them faithfully every day and the result was marvellous. For over two years now, I have been free from any Rheumatic pains whatever, and give "Fruit-a-tives" the full credit for making a remarkable cure".

Dicky's New Year

How He Came to Attend the Grown Folks' Party.

DICKY sprawled ungracefully on the floor, and at times he bestowed a sly and naughty kick upon the unresisting legs of a chair that stood near him. His first impulse was to feel sorry for doing this, his second to look around and see if any one had noticed this little outburst of temper.

It may be that the Christmas festivities of a few days before had been too much for him; but, whatever it was, Dicky was certainly cross and inclined to weep easily.

However, neither his mother nor his Aunt Gertrude noticed how he kicked the chair nor the way he scowled upon the world in general from under his tawny curls. They were absorbed in their preparations for entertaining the guests of that evening, and for once Dicky was forgotten.

"If I was going to have a party and invite all the people in the world I'd invite my own little boy, Dicky, too. I wouldn't leave him out," quoth Dicky out of the silence.

"What's that?" asked his mother carelessly, absorbed in her own thoughts. "No, no, Dicky; this is a party for mother's and father's friends. You wouldn't enjoy it."

"Oh, but I do want to come," persisted Dicky. "I've heard you all talking about it, and I want to see the new year come in the window."

"What is the child talking about?" asked his aunt.

"The new year. It's coming in the window, and I heard mother tell how you were all going to open it to welcome it in," replied Dicky, somewhat impatient at his aunt for not understanding so obvious a meaning.

"Nothing will come in at the window, dear," said his mother gently. "It's just a pretty custom. There will not be anything for you to see, and you will be much happier upstairs in your nice warm bed."

Dicky wept a little at the time, and when the hour came for bed under the stern eye of his father he rebelliously consented to be tucked in by his nurse, although not without further remonstrances. Finding them of no avail, he sobbed his woes into his pillow, while his father and mother went below to receive their guests.

By making a brave resistance to the drowsiness that was stealing upon him Dicky managed to keep awake until the party had assembled in the parlor below. Then he crept out of bed and hung over the banisters, eagerly trying to catch sight of the brilliant people in the gathering. A man passed along the hall. Dicky thought it might be his father and scampered back to bed again as fast as his little bare feet would carry him. And then with no more ado he soon fell asleep, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot."

Downstairs the hours passed merrily, and the old year drew to a happy close. First there were only fifteen minutes of it left; then there were only ten. Finally the old year had but five short periods, counting sixty seconds each, to live. The men and women gathered together showed nothing of the solemnity that underlies the merriment of all such gatherings. Four minutes, three minutes, two minutes—ah! They turned from the windows in surprise to see Dicky standing in the doorway.

He was not dressed for the party, and his little nightgown afforded scant protection against the drafts of the lower room. He was not expected at the party, either, and the expression on his father's face suggested that he was not even welcome there. These considerations might have disturbed an adult guest, but they mattered little to Dicky.

He did not look or speak to any one. Ordinarily his father's sternness would have sent him with a headlong rush to the protection of his mother's arms. Turning neither to the right nor to the left, he went to the window, and, although his eyes were closed, his little hands unlocked the catch that fastened it and opened the great casements without a mistake or hesitation.

His mother, choking back a cry, took a furred wrap and went to cover him. His father looked, half in fright, at his brother, who was standing near.

"Be careful not to wake him suddenly," said Dr. Tom. "He's walking in his sleep!"

He raised the child gently in his arms and held him in the full blaze of the great chandelier, but Dicky's closed eyelids never quivered as the light struck against them.

When he opened his eyes he was amazed to find himself at the party after all, surrounded by men and women, who all said cheerfully, "A happy New Year to you, Dicky, dear!"

He was too drowsy to be frightened but as his father carried him back to bed the child heard the great bells of the city calling out to him:

"A happy New Year, Dicky, dear, and many of them!"

Best Market For Butter.

Curiously enough, Newfoundland, with its scant population, was Canada's best market for butter during October last. Newfoundland took 60,370 pounds, valued at $15,299; Great Britain took only 225 pounds valued at $65, and the United States 14,000 pounds, valued at $4,000. The total exports of butter during that month were 112,000 pounds, valued at $30,000, so that the little colony of Newfoundland took over half our exports of butter during that month.

A Distressful Position.

Senator Domville, who used to be colonel in the cavalry, tells a story of a sham fight at a militia camp down east.

One of the infantry regiments had been sent out along a country road where they were supposed to be lying in ambush pending the approach of the enemy.

Nothing happened, however, and some of the men began to amuse themselves by firing off their blank ammunition.

"Here, that won't do," exclaimed one of the rural officers, "we're supposed to be lying here in 'ambulance'."

Whole Fleet May Move.

There is a possibility of the Gloucester, Mass., fishing fleet transferring its headquarters to Yarmouth, N.S., owing to the fact that fish is now on the U. S. free list, and that by becoming a Canadian establishment the fishermen will be admitted to the fishing grounds off the Nova Scotian coast.

B. C.'s Forests.

With the exception of Siberia, Brazil and the northwestern United States, British Columbia's timber wealth is reported to be unparalleled in any other country.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

OSHKIGMONG

OSHKIGMONG, Dec. 31.—Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson Whetung and baby are spending Christmas season down east.

Mrs. Joseph Whetung is at Rama, spending her Christmas holidays with her friends.

Mr. Albert Whetung was at Toronto this week.

Mr. Zack Smoke and wife and children of Alderville, are spending Christmas here.

The recent snow storm somewhat spoiled the skating here.

Christmas Day was spent here with the usual alertness of course, the celebration on such occasions would be incomplete if the customary greeting by the children was dispensed with, for at an early hour long before daylight, the children were making their visits to each house, undisturbed with their usual greeting "Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!" and in recognition of their morning call, receive a hot cake, apples, candles, etc., while the young men with spades and shovels, spontaneously cleared away the snow which marred the pleasure of skating. Having done this, seniors and juniors lined up for a hockey match, being the first game of the season. At night all repaired to the Town Hall to view the Christmas Tree which had been erected during the day, copiously laden with gifts for the children and of course the old people were not forgotten. A grand entertainment was given by the school children, which was rendered in most excellent manner under the training of Mr. Buffani and Miss Lovenia Whetung.

The Rev. Mr. Bain of Hall's Bridge occupied the chair in a most efficient manner.

The program consisted as follows: Christmas anthem, the church choir. Address, the chairman.

Chorus, ting-a-ling, by children.
Recitation, Clifford Jacobs.
Violin selection, John Tobico.
Recitation, Maggie Taylor.
Chorus, Old Santa Claus, boys.
Recitation, Clarence Taylor.
Trio, Mrs. and Miss Coppway and Chas. McCue.
Recitation, Lottie Johnson.
Chorus, Santa Claus is coming, children.
Anthem, the church choir.
Recitation, Austin McCue.
Recitation, Merry, Merry Christmas, five girls.
Violin selection, Miss M. Jones.
Recitation, Flora Coppway.
Recitation, Clarence Blaker.
Song, Lullaby, four girls.
Recitation, Maggie Whetung.
Song, Jolly snow brigade, four boys.
Recitation, George Whetung.
Song, Chief Whetung.
Recitation, Mildred Taylor.
Mouth organ selection, Allen Taylor.
Recitation, Game of Letters, by children.
Duet, Misses Coppway.
Violin selection, Walter Jacobs.

Alderman Duffus States His Platform

To the Electors of the West Ward. Ladies and Gentlemen:

There are several subjects which should receive the especial attention of the City Council during 1914, in addition to firm efforts to keep the general expenditure down to the lowest figure consistent with good service. To these subjects, if you honor me with re-election, I will give close attention.

It is in the highest degree in the interests of the people that the Hydro-Electric project should be carried through, and this will receive my earnest support.

The extension of permanent improvements is an important subject, and in close connection with this question, the desirability of the city owning its own street paving plant should be carefully taken up, in order that the Board of Works and Engineering Departments may do as much of this work as is in the best interests of the city, and at such time as is most suitable in order that we may have all the work done by our own ratepayers.

The extension of sewers and sidewalks, and the subsequent grading and water-tabling of same on such streets as may be requested by the ratepayers living thereon.

A more adequate system of surface drainage, in order to improve the general appearance and sanitary condition of our streets.

I have already asked for a report from the Engineering Department on the advisability of adopting civic conduits, in order that all wires may be placed therein, thus eliminating the undesirable necessity of having poles placed in front of the people's property. Space in these conduits to be rented to the different companies at such charges as will pay for the cost and maintenance of same. If a favorable report is received this matter will have my further attention.

A better and more extensive system of street lighting and police protection for the outlying districts will receive my attention, in the interest of the general and moral welfare of the city.

I will give all the time and assistance necessary to endeavor to secure further new industries, of such character and upon such terms as will be in the best interest of the city.

Owing to the orders of the Provincial Board of Health sewage disposal works will have to be constructed, and my object will be to have this done in the most economical and efficient manner.

Every question that will come before the council will receive my best attention with a view to serve the best interests of the ratepayers, and my experience in the council will, I believe, be of advantage in their consideration.

Upon these grounds I solicit your support for re-election.

Yours most respectfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

CLASSIFICATION TO BE ARRANGED

Lake Disaster Fund Beneficiaries Must be Grouped.

TORONTO, Dec. 31. — First steps were taken yesterday to distribute the Lakes Disaster Fund to the relatives and dependents of the sailors who perished in the fall gales on the Great Lakes. Mark H. Irish of Toronto was appointed representative of the Ontario Government.

Committees were formed to negotiate for a proper administration. Messrs. Playfair, Gildersleeve and Irish were appointed as a subcommittee with instructions to confer with the American committee and to classify the beneficiaries.

One of the important problems to arrange is whether the fund will be pooled or whether each of the committees will distribute to their own countrymen.

The project for a tunnel under the British Channel to link England and France is being considered afresh by the Committee of Imperial Defense and will be presented to the next Parliament.

REBELS ARE WINNING; FIERCE BATTLE ON SINCE MONDAY

Fierce Struggle Which is Going on at the United States Border Between Northern Division of Federal Army and 5,000 Rebels Under Gen. Ortego, Has Resulted in Advantage for Latter.

PRESIDIO, Dec. 31.—The battle between 5,000 rebels under Gen. Torobio Ortega and the northern division of the Mexican Federal army, entrenched around Ojinaga, Mexico, across the border from this place, still was in progress when darkness fell last night. No bullets came across the border.

The forces had been engaged for 36 hours and many had been killed and wounded on both sides.

Gen. Ortega, executing a series of flank movements, kept steadily on the offensive, gaining foot by foot the approaches to the Federal stronghold. The Federal forces, although crippled and disorganized by the first rebel onslaught, which drove in their outposts, clung to the hillside trenches, where their leaders had decided to make a last stand.

The Federals rallied somewhat from the panic which seized many of them with the first volleys of the rebels, when day light disclosed the position of Ortega's men and put up a plucky fight against heavy odds, although their losses were heavy, both from wounds and desertions.

Many wounded and deserters waded waist deep through the river to the American side.

It was impossible even to approximate the number of dead and wounded, although many are known to have fallen on each side. Fifteen of the Federal wounded who waded the river were allowed to remain and were cared for by United States army physicians, but several score unwounded Federal deserters were disarmed by the border patrol under Major McNamee, and sent back across the border.

Army officers were convinced, from the fact that 15 wounded were able to make their way across the river, that the casualties had been heavy and Red Cross representatives, therefore, sent requests for more help and hospital supplies. They also requested permission to cross the border to attend the wounded on the battle field.

Neither of the opposing forces is provided with hospital facilities, and the wounded have been left on the hillsides where they fell.

Lind To Meet President.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 31.—John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, who has been in Mexico for several months watching the situation, announced yesterday that he expected to leave Vera Cruz last night aboard the scout cruiser Chester for the United States. He will proceed to Pass Christian, Miss., where President Wilson is spending his vacation.

Do Not Want To Join Mexico.

TOKIO, Dec. 31.—Francisco de la Barra left here for Paris yesterday having completed the mission entrusted to him by the Mexican Government of thanking Japan for her participation in the Mexican centennial.

Senor Pardo, the Mexican Minister here, gave out the following statement yesterday:

"Reports published in America that 50 Japanese officers had applied for permission to attach themselves to the Mexican Federal army are untrue."

Mexican Railway Defaults.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Disturbed conditions in Mexico have forced the national railways of Mexico and its affiliated properties to default in the payment of interest due Jan. 1, on bonds amounting to $111,000,000. E. N. Brown, president of the system, who made this announcement yesterday, said that in lieu of the regular cash payments, the company would issue three-year six per cent. notes.

The bonds on which default is declared consist of $84,000,000 of National Railways 4 1-2 per cent. prior liens, $26,000,000 of National Railroad 4 1-2 per cent. prior liens, and $1,374,000 of Mexican Central Railway 6 per cent. priority bonds. Semi-annual interest on these issues aggregate approximately $2,500,000.

AUTOISTS MAKE SUGGESTION FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT

Will Appeal to Governments to Establish New System—Uniform Auto Laws Will Also be Sought

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—An effort will be made by the Automobile Federation of Canada to have convict labor used in the building of roads throughout the entire Dominion. The federation at its annual meeting, held yesterday afternoon in the Ontario Motor League rooms in the Lumsden Building, it was decided to appeal to the various Provincial Governments as well as to the Dominion Government with a view to having this system established.

This system of road-building has been in vogue in many parts of the United States for two years and has met with great success. It was first started in the Western States and has rapidly grown until now it has worked itself into the Eastern States and practically every state in the Union is building its roads in this manner. The convicts will be allowed out on parole and will receive a salary for their work if this system is established in Canada.

The federation is offering this scheme to the various Provincial Governments as well as the Dominion body as one means of solving the roads question.

A campaign will also be started in the near future with a view to establishing a uniform regulation governing automobiles in all the provinces of the Dominion. At present in nearly every province there is a different rule regarding the placing of license numbers, the rate of speed, the placing of lights and the levying of fines, and it is with a view to having these regulations made uniform throughout the entire Dominion that the federation is starting this campaign. By establishing this new uniform regulation it will mean that tourists from one province to another will know just what the regulations are and will not be continually breaking them as they are doing now.

The Good Roads Congress, to be held in Montreal early in the new year, was endorsed by the federation, and delegates will be sent. This will be the first Dominion Good Roads Congress to be held in Canada, and it promises to be of great benefit in the way of solving of the problem of good roads.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Oliver Hezzlewood, Toronto, president; F. Carroll, Quebec, first vice-president; C. H. Cotterol, Vancouver, second vice-president; W. D. Robertson, Toronto, secretary-treasurer; H. W. Pellow, president Montreal club, chairman of the good roads committee; A. L. Gordon, president of the Regina club, chairman of the legislation committee, and A. C. Emmett, president of the Winnipeg club, chairman of the touring committee.

Pope In Good Health.

ROME, Dec. 31.—Pope Pius X. is in excellent health, despite reports which have been circulated to the contrary, according to a statement issued yesterday at the Vatican. The Pope spoke to a delegation of foreign diplomats yesterday, joking on his familiarity with the French language.

COMEDIAN IS KILLED.

Harry Fragson Shot In Paris by Aged Father.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—An extraordinary tragedy occurred in Paris last night. A popular English vaudeville performer, known on the stage as Harry Fragson, was shot and killed by his 84-year-old father, Victor Pott

Fragson had dined at a restaurant, and on the way to the theatre where he has been appearing called at the apartment which he occupied with his father in the Rue de la Fayette. He found the door bolted and was kept waiting a long time before it was opened by his father. High words ensued, and suddenly the father seemed to lose all control of himself. He drew a revolver and the son fell with a bullet in his head.

The feeble old man was greatly shaken and trembled as he told in a somewhat rambling way his story to the police commissary. The father says he intended to commit suicide in his son's presence.

Frenchmen's Kindness Recognized.

PARIS, Dec. 31. — In recognition of the devoted care shown to Capt. D. Von Winterfeldt, the military attache of the German Embassy to France, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident last fall while following the French army manoeuvres, the German Emperor yesterday sent an autograph portrait to Eugene Etienne, the French ex-Minister of War.

His Majesty also bestowed decorations on a number of French officers, surgeons and civilian officials, and on several women who aided in nursing Captain Von Winterfeltd back to health. To the Mayor of Grisolles the Emporer sent $1,300 to be distributed among the needy persons of the town.

Shoe Factories To Close.

QUEBEC, Dec. 31.—Nineteen boot and shoe factories will close their doors to-day and over 2,000 workmen will be locked out on account of the differences between the shoemakers' unions and the John Ritchie Co. and Gale Bros.' firms.

The nineteen factories which will close to-day are paying about $25,000 in wages every week, and the retail trade in the lower part of the city will suffer a great deal from the coming conflict.

The association decided to make it a rule not to keep a workman in any boot and shoe factory without a contract. To this the unions refuse to submit.

Le Pas Is Without Snow.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—So little snow is there in Le Pas district that the Mounted Police patrol which leaves Le Pas every winter for Port Nelson and Fort Churchill, has been kept waiting there since Dec. 3, unable to get away. Dog trains are used for the transportation of supplies and mail. Such an experience is unusual.

STUDY OF THE BIBLE AT GOSPEL HALL

Commencing on Friday, Jan. 2, at 8 p.m., and continuing for three months, there will be a public Bible reading, conducted in Gospel Hall.

Everyone is invited to attend these meetings. The studies will likely be from the Epistle to the Romans. After a short talk, the subject will be open for free interchange of thought. Bible students are especially welcome.

Undertakers are men who follow the medical profession.

To Wish You Well

We publish this our New Year's greetings, to you.

We feel that this is a time when we should all pause in the hurry and strain of active life and think for a moment of the human side of business.

And so we publish this for the very human reason that we want to say a friendly "hello" to you and with heart-deep sincerity extend the happiest greetings of the season and wish you the pleasantest of good things for the year ahead.

We believe in making friends as well as customers in business, and we try to make our store service exhibit that spirit distinctly by being just as sincerely helpful and pleasant as we can make it.

So here's a handclasp across the newspaper to those we can't reach in person.

May you win more friends, prosperity and happiness in 1914, than ever before.

DEPARTMENTAL STORES GO TO THE RECEIVER

Poor Christmas Trade and Curtailment of Bank Advances Are Given as Responsible.

The Greenhut-Siegel-Cooper Co. of this city is not allied with the chain of stores in trouble and was in no way involved. Siegel Cooper & Co., of Chicago, although its stock is controlled by the Siegel Stores Corporation, is likewise not affected. On the other hand, its business is declared to be in a highly prosperous condition.

The banking business was conducted in connection with the Fourteenth street store in this city, but the amount of deposits or the number of depositors was not made known. Counsel announced, however, that Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel, principal owners of the stores, had pledged $3,500,000 in stock in the Siegel Stores Corporation toward the depositors' protection. The bank will proceed to liquidate.

Efforts will be made to reorganize the chain of stores as soon as possible. Meanwhile the business will be conducted by the receivers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Six enterprises, controlled by the Siegel Stores Corporation in this city and in Boston, were thrown into bankruptcy yesterday in a friendly proceeding instituted in the Federal courts. The concerns did an annual gross business estimated at $40,000,000, but it is understand that their Christmas business did not come up to expectations and they found themselves hard pressed by curtailment of banking credit. The failure has been discounted in the financial district and had no effect on the stock market.

The companies for which receivers were named are: The Fourteenth street store, New York; the Simpson-Crawford Co., New York; Henry Seigel & Co.', bankers, New York; Henry Siegel & Co., wholesalers, New York; Merchants' Express Co., New York; Henry Siegel Co., Boston, a department store.

SITUATION IS TENSE

Calumet May be Scene of Civil War at Any Moment

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 31.—A tense situation has developed here with more than five hundred armed citizens walking the streets looking for an outbreak on the part of the striking copper miners. A feeling of bitterness has developed since the testimony was offered at the coroner's inquest over the deaths of 72 victims of the Christmas Eve panic that the man who shouted "Fire" in the Italian Hall wore a Citizens' Alliance badge.

The citizens have determined that the Western Federation of Miners shall be forced out of the Calumet copper district. They blame the present strike conditions and panic disaster on representatives of the miners' organizations. The miners are just as bitter against the citizens, and declare that the attitude of the business men of Calumet, Hancock and Houghton has had more to do with keeping the strike in force than the attitude of the mine owners.

Fears of reprisals are entertained by many persons in the district, and all public meeting places, including churches, where many Christmas entertainments for children and Sunday schools are being held each evening, are being closely guarded by deputy sheriffs.

All the homes of prominent merchants at Calumet, Hancock and Houghton were guarded yesterday by armed citizens. Every member of the Alliance carried a 44-calibre revolver.

None of the leaders of the Miners' Federation ventured on the streets of the three towns yesterday without an armed guard of three or four men.

President Moyer, it is understood, goes from Chicago to Denver to-day, although Judge Hilton says that Moyer will return to the copper country at once, he believes.

QUEEN IS DEAD

Mother of Swedish Monarch Was in 78th Year.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 31.—Queen Mother Sophia of Sweden died here yesterday, in her 78th year. She had suffered acutely for several days, and succumbed to an attack of inflamation of the lungs.

Her Majesty had been practically an invalid for more than a quarter of a century. She was subject to melancholia, which necessitated a constant watch being kept on her by her medical attendants. She took very little part in court functions, devoting herself whenever her malady permitted it, to enterprises of a religious nature. She was a great sympathizer with the Salvation Army, whose operations in Scandinavia she followed with intense interest. At the same time she was a strong advocate of temperance.

SCHMIDT JURY COULDN'T AGREE

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—After deliberating thirty-six hours the jury trying the case of Hans Schmidt, the former assistant priest of St. Joseph's Church, accused of the murder of Anna Aumuller, reported about ten o'clock last night that it could not reach an agreement, and was discharged.

GERMAN COLONY COMING.

Expert Dairymen May Be Planted In Alberta.

EDMONTON, Dec. 31.—The Dominion Government is understood to have granted 16 townships in the centre of Alberta for a German immigration project which is likely to bring the greatest and richest influx of settlers into this province that has ever seen. From meagre details announced yesterday the undertaking is to mean the expenditure of millions of dollars.

Everything necessary for the settlers is to be provided. The farms they will take up will in some measure be patterned upon the ready-made farms of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but will be more complete.

The object of this immigration scheme seems to be to develop immense dairying industry by the Germans who will settle here. This will be encouraged by the actual accompaniment of $5,000,000 subscribed capital.

CHANCELLOR MAY GO.

Alsatian Trouble May End Autocracy In Germany.

BERLIN, Dec. 31. — Indications that Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's retirement may eventually be brought about as a result of the political crisis arising out of the trouble between the civil and military authorities at Zabern, Alsace, were given at the conventions of the Centre and Liberal parties, held on Monday evening.

The Clerical leaders, Matthias Erzberger and Adolf Groeber, in the course of speeches delivered at the party convention at Ulm, declared that the Zabern incident was probably the beginning of a great political struggle in Germany, in which compromise was scarcely possible.

The newspaper at Mannheim, which voices the views of the Liberal leader, Ernst Bassermann, stated yesterday that a grave crisis is impending in Germany.

Alberta Pays Up.

LONDON, Dec. 31. — Announcement is made that the Government of the Province of Alberta liquidated yesterday the million and a half dollar debt in treasury bills, which were issued in July last and have just matured. The satisfactory way in which this has been done is a subject for comment in The Standard, which says that at a time when overseas borrowing seems to be the feature of the hour it is only right and fair on the part of the British investor to take notice of the payment that is being effected.

Two Injured by Flying Rock.

COBALT, Dec. 31.—A shower of rock broke through camps of the Northern Ontario Light & Power Co. at Fountain Falls on the Montreal river and struck down Y. Kankas and W. Oleman, two Finlanders. Blasting operations were being conducted 100 feet away. The men are in the mines hospital at Cobalt to-day, and Kankas is not expected to live. Both are unmarried.

MR. MILLER MUST GO TO WINNIPEG

Word was received by City Relief Officer Finch Miller yesterday, that it would be necessary for him to go to Winnipeg, in connection with the suit for damages because of his son's death who was electrocuted last summer.

At the Charity Board meeting last evening he was granted leave of absence, and will leave at the latter part of next week.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun is conducting the case in the interests of Mr. Miller.

Adjutant McElheney of the Salvation Army will look after relief cases during the absence of Mr. Miller.

BEFORE THE O.H.A.

Tom Lansfield and Jimmie McMartin are going to Toronto on Friday to settle their trouble with the O. H. A. Both are positive that they can prove they never received money for playing hockey in Syracuse last winter, and if they are successful they may be on Peterborough line-up on Friday night.

Best Tea in the World.

The best tea in all China and therefore in all the world grows on top of a small mountain in western Szechuan called Ming Shan, and is cultivated by the priests of the Buddhist temple on its summit. Tradition says that a Chinese pilgrim brought the seeds from India centuries ago. There are only a few pounds in each crop, and these have always gone as tribute to Pekin for the use of the imperial household. Who will get the precious tea now? Will it be reserved for the family of the president of the republic or will it be scattered among those who are willing to pay a big price for such a luxury?—Youth's Companion.

"Yuuzhyual" Looks Funny.

The English Spelling Reform association has no use for the system suggested by Mr. Carnegie, but advocates a system based upon the doubling or combining of letters. Sir William Ramsay told the British association recently that any one who looked at the system could learn to spell in five minutes, though be admitted that some of the words looked strange when spelled in the new way. "Usual," for instance, would be spelled "yuuzhyual."—New York World.

Makes Up Her Loss.

It is estimated that Ontario loses ten thousand of her population every spring through those who go west on the homeseekers' and settlers' excursions. In the fall nearly twice that number leave for the prairies as harvesters. During the entire year there is a steady drain that would bring the total of those who leave for the west at close to 50,000.

But, while Ontario is losing heavily each year of what might be termed "native born," it is a great gainer from another source — the British Isles. This year the number of British immigrants that has already arrived here reaches 58,936, and when the figures for 1913 are complete the total will be well over 60,000.

POLICEWOMAN IN THIS CITY

Arguments Given in Support of Request for Appointment

On what grounds will our Police Commission be asked to appoint a policewoman on the local force?

We have 3,628 young people between the ages of 5 and 16 years. The protection of women wage earners is large, one-fifth of the voters are women. The industrial unfoldment of this 20th century is exposing all women, willing or unwilling, to the social process, which is changing the old home world into the new home world. We must prevent crime in the city if we would protect our homes. Under the new conditions, women have a right to what they consider to be in the best interests of the community. This is not an untried thing that we are advocating. The movement is endorsed wherever it has been tried, and this fact should appeal to Peterborough, for truly there is little of the pioneer about us. The only truly original (?) thing tried in Peterboro was I believe, the Chambers Street pavement.

"I cannot refrain from stating that the value the policewoman has rendered to this city and the public in an educational way is incalcuable. The policewoman is no longer a curiosity, or a stranger. She has shown the skeptic that a woman is capable of attending to certain phases of police work with greater success in obtaining results, than policemen, and her services in connection with cases concerning women and children are such that every city has before it the sugestion that this angle of the police service be placed in charge of a woman." H. H. Rose, Mayor of Los Angeles. "I can say nothing but good of women's work in my department. Their work has passed the experimental stage and I would not if I could, dispense with their services."—C. E. Sebastian, Chief of Police, Los Angeles.

But let us come nearer home. Mayor Hocken, of Toronto tells us "We have two police women and two matrons in connection with our police force. The result of their appointment has given complete satisfaction."

Col. Denison, Police Magistrate, Toronto, says: "We have two policewomen and two police matrons and we find them of great service."

And our own Chief tells us he is not opposed to the appointment of a police woman and will welcome her presence on the force should the Police Commissioners appoint one.

NOW WANTS TO CIRCLE THE GLOBE

Aviator Vedrines is Off on Round the World Flight.

CAIRO, Dec. 31.—Jules Vedrine interviewed regarding his proposed American flight, said he plans to leave Cairo in a fortnight and fly to Jaffa, Alleppo, Bagdad, Calcutta, Singapore, Java, East India Islands, through Polynesia, and two hundred miles across the sea, his longest sea flight, to Australia, the French battleship Bruix following. He also intends to fly from South America to North America. Although he is unable to state the exact details, he hopes to fly at several points in the United States. "It is," he said, "my determination to fly around the world. I have always contemplated an American visit. After leaving the States I will embark, presumably at New York, for Morocco, and fly home to Paris from Tangier."

HUNGER TEST

Doctor Has Invented Balloon Which You Swallow.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 31. — An apparatus by which blood may be removed, cleansed of impurities and returned to the system, and a contrivance by which it can be determined whether one is suffering from hunger or merely has an appetite, were among the inventions demonstrated yesterday by members of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, in annual session here, Dr. A. J. Carlsen of the University of Chicago, demonstrated on himself the efficiency of the hunger-testing machine, his own invention.

Swallowing a small cigar-shaped rubber balloon which had been fitted with long rubber tubes he inflated the balloon in his stomach through the tubes and then attached the latter to sensitized paper. Hunger, he declared, caused the muscles of the stomach to grip the balloon and drive out the air which registered the amount of hunger on the sensitized paper.

NOMINATIONS AT BOBCAYGEON

BOBCAYGEON, Dec. 31.—The following nominations were made here for the village council, electric commission and school trustee, and judging from the number of candidates in the field, there promises to be a merry race.

A HORSE DEAL

Is Followed by Police Court Case and Settlement.

A case was settled this morning at Police Court by the defendant paying the amount of $180 and costs amounting to $10.50.

The plaintiff claimed $180 as result fo a horse deal. It seems the men were partners in the ownership of a team of horses. The defendant sold the team and pocketed the entire $380.

To the Electors of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer, I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City, it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years' experience as alderman, I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think, is proof that if elected, will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to, can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary, will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready-made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extention and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past, will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS.

To the Electors
South Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Your vote and influence to secure my return as alderman for the South Ward. Economic administration of civic affairs, consistent with progress, my policy.

Yours truly,

W. S. ROBINSON

MORE MAYORS

Twenty one Heads of Municipalities go in by Acclamation

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—In addition to the list of mayors and reeves elected by acclamation in Ontario on Monday, there are twenty-one more entitled to their seats without a contest, according to delayed reports.

Mayors elected are:
Carleton Place—D. Smythe.
Dryden—C. W. Coombe.
Deseronto—Col. E. W. Rathbun.
Englehart—R. O'Grady.

TO THE ELECTORS
OF THE
EAST WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen.

I am again a candidate for Alderman in No. 5 Ward and respectfully solicit your support on my record in Council.

I have served you for the past 3 years as Alderman and in that time I have gained a knowledge of city affairs, city finances and the problems now before the Council, which fits me to deal with them in a capable and intelligent manner.

I have given close attention to my duties and have carefully looked after the interests of the East Ward in particular and the city as a whole.

I trust my services in the past meet with your approval and if so I ask your hearty support.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

J. C. ANDERSON

TO THE ELECTORS
OF THE
NORTH WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

When casting your ballot on Monday I would ask you all to consider the results of last year's work of the council—a tax rate of 25 mills, and the Hydro tangle, which must be straightened out.

If you elect me as your representative, I will do all in my power to at least prevent a further increase in the rate and if possible, to reduce it and to assist in bringing about a speedy and satisfactory settlement of the Hydro trouble.

I am strongly in favor of the Hydro system, controlled absolutely by the city, and until this matter is settled, I am not in favor of the other expenditure for the new bridge and chemical engine.

I will keep the welfare of our ward constantly in mind and will see that we in the north, get our just due.

Wishing you all the compliments of the season, I remain,

Your Servant,

W. T. HOLLOWAY

HYDRO-JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the North Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterboro, all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the city council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honor of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric System into the city, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of this confidence by again electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the people. Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your council of 1913, I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality, and being run in the interests of the people and not in the interests of a monopoly.

W. J. JOHNSTON.

TO THE RATEPAYERS
— OF —
Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Should not your Council for 1914 have your support, without reservation, on the city's light and power enterprise. It is to your interest.

Have your candidates pledged to this. Let no man in who, so far as you can judge, will trifle with the question or flirt with the opposition.

Get the candidate's assurance that he is right. If he isn't, leave him at home.

I am flatly and wholly in favor of the city's Hydro-Electrical operation as planned [illegible]. It will come out all right in the end, temporary blocking will not hinder the result.

Yours respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

TO THE RATEPAYERS

Ladies and Gentlemen

I solicit your vote and influence in my favor as a candidate for election as Alderman from No. 1 Ward.

If elected I will do the utmost in my power to promote the interests of the city at large.

MR. GILLESPIE'S CONFIDENT APPEAL TO THE ELECTORS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address and my further public statements made on Nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions affecting the interests of the city, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able personally to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the city's affairs during the past five years as your alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous New Year.

G. A. GILLESPIE.

A Final Message from Robert Hicks

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your voluntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have sought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing city.

The valuation put upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the city should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my usefulness, and if I am favored with your confidence I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,

ROBERT HICKS.

CANADIAN TO BATTLE FOR WHITE HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE

Pelky Meets Gunboat Smith at San Fransisco Tomorrow

With Arthur Pelkey meeting Gunboat Smith, in a heavyweight championship battle; Leach Cross tackling Bud Anderson in a return match of 20 rounds; Freddie Welsh, British lightweight champion, engaging the 1913 sensation, Johnny Dundee, in a 10 round fracas, and Jack Dillon clashing with his ancient rival, Gus Christie, in a 10 round set-to. New Year's Day will see plenty of good mills.

Of course the match that will be watched with the most interest is that between Smith and Pelkey at San Francisco because the winner will be generally accepted as the white champion, and he will be generally accepted as the white champion, and he will be directly in line for the first crack at Jack Johnson when that dusky husky recovers from his present impairment and is fit to defend his world's title. Negotiations already are under way for a match between the victor of the Smith-Pelkey battle and Johnson. Promoters at Paris France; have made an especially lucrative offer for this fistic plum and it will not be surprising if they land it. However, Jimmy Coffroth of San Francisco has entered the list of bidders, and the California promoter is in position to put up a spirited competition for the match.

Pelkey an Enigma

Pelkey is the enigma of the white hope situation. His chief basis for recognition is the tragic victory that he achieved over the late Luther McCarty. Before that contest Pelkey was regarded as merely a ring burly of the Jess Willard type. Pelkey is a big chap as fighters go these days. He stands 6 feet 2 in., in height, and his best fighting weight is 205 pounds. He is now 28 years of age. Pelkey was born in Chatham, Ont., and until three years ago, he never entertained a thought of being a fighter.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Lt.-Col. Massie, principal veterinary officer of the Kingston division, has resigned after 31 years' military service.

Full investigation into alleged irregularities at the recent civic elections in Winnipeg was ordered by the City Council.

Another clash between police and silk mill strikers, during which a number of shots were fired, occurred at Shelton, Conn., yesterday.

The funeral of the late J. C. Rykert, K.C., ex-M.P., held at St. Catharines yesterday, to Victoria Lawn Cemetery, was largely attended.

Eighteen weaving mills around Blackburn, Eng., have been closed within the past few days owing to the great slump in the cotton trade.

To inaugurate a campaign for a "dry" Alberta, the Temperance and Reform League will hold a series of field days in the principal towns of the province.

In accordance with the instructions of the Police Commissioners, all fruit and tobacco stores will be closed on Sundays for the first time in the history of Nelson, B.C.

The village lock-up at Highgate Ont., in which a tramp was sheltered for the night, took fire from the natural gas stove and the inmate had a narrow escape from being cremated.

Candles burning beside the corpse of Ivan Waluka, a Pole, set fire to the casket in the Montreal morgue yesterday and the roof of the building was destroyed. The body was saved.

Sixty days in jail and ten lashes was the sentence meted out in Toronto yesterday to Tom Haldane, a young professional prizefighter, convicted of assaulting Emma James, aged 20.

George Nix, a Bulgarian, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and Mike Mano and Vasil Nickloff got 18 months for robbery. Mano was identified by a tooth mark left by his victim.

Use For Hot Stones.

Primitive man boiled his water with hot stones. That was not the only use he made of them—at any rate—if he was a Scythian. The Scythian practice described by Herodotus has been claimed by some as the first recorded case of smoking. Having spoken of a kind of hemp that grew in the country, Herodotus proceeds: "Now, the Scythians, taking the seed of this hemp, go into their tents and then throw the seed upon stones heated white hot. As it is thrown on it is burnt into smoke, producing so much that no Greek vapor bath could surpass it. And the Scythians delighted in it, bellow. This takes the place of washing for them." It seems as though they had discovered the Turkish bath and the cigarette.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Britain and Germany Reported to Have Solved Problem

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—Great Britain and Germany have as good as concluded a comprehensive political agreement which, optimists believe, will go far towards eradicating the danger of war between the two empires. It is learned that the announcement of the agreement is not likely to be deferred beyond the date of the approaching session of the British Parliament. The negotiations have been carried on exclusively in London, so that the first announcement of their result will be made there.

Although the agreement is far-reaching, it fails conspicuously to touch what impartial authorities in both countries recognize to be the issue of issues between Great Britain and Germany, namely, naval antagonism. Britain has made numerous overtures to bring about an understanding on this burning question, but Germany has rejected them on the ground that her naval policy is laid down by law and cannot be altered without an act of Parliament.

The approaching agreement mainly concerns future Anglo-German action in Portuguese Africa. Germany is left free to act in Angola and has also obtained the right to construct a railway terminating in the neighborhood of Rhodesia. This will join the Cape-to-Cairo line, the realization of which was Cecil Rhodes' great dream.

Germany on her part, renounces all interest in Mozambique, which supposedly, will fall to Britain. The agreement will specifically point out that neither power desires to "interfere with the sovereignty of Portugal," but merely to mark out "trading spheres" for itself.

Other points in the agreement concern the Bagdad Railway, on which Germany and Britain have hitherto failed to agree.

DROPPED DEAD ON THE STREET

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—Daniel McCarthy, late storekeeper at the Hamilton Asylum, and formerly storekeeper at the Central Prison, Toronto, dropped dead at the corner of Lansdowne avenue and Dundas street yesterday morning. It was not known who he was at the time and his body was removed to the morgue where it was identified later in the day by his son, Herbert McCarthy.

The late Mr. McCarthy was 82 years of age and was born in Cork, Ireland. He came to Toronto about 65 years ago.

Three Escape; Two at Large.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 31.—Three prisoners escaped from the Charles street jail early yesterday by lowering themselves from the high walls by means of a rope of tied sheets taken from their beds. Two of them, Arthur Quinlan and John J. Black, are still at liberty, and despite the heavy cordons of police thrown about the city have apparently made good their escape.

Fire Proved Fatal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—M. Patenaude, who was on Monday taken to the Notre Dame Hospital, suffering from nervous shock and the effects of the smoke from the fire on Ontario street, which filled his room where he was lying ill, died yesterday.

Newfoundland House Summoned.

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., Dec. 31.—Governor Davidson issued a proclamation last night summoning the Legislature elected last October to meet Wednesday, Jan. 14. Sir Edward Morris, the Premier, will continue in power with 21 members of the people's party, and Sir Robert Bond, former Premier, will head the Opposition, consisting of five Liberals and ten members of the Fishermen's Protective Union, which won large majorities in the northern districts.

New Basilica Inaugurated.

ROME, Dec. 31.—The new Basilica of the Holy Cross to commemorate the sixteenth centenary of the recognition of the Christian faith by the Roman Emperor, Constantine the Great, was solemnly inaugurated yesterday by Cardinal Francis De Paula Cassetta in the presence of many high church dignitaries. It is 180 feet long, 58 feet wide and 100 feet high.

Editor Shot Strikebreaker.

DECATUR, Ills., Dec. 31.—Carl Pierson, editor of The Illinois Strike Bulletin, published at Clinton, yesterday afternoon shot and probably fatally injured Tony Masser, a strikebreaker employed at the Illinois Central shops at Clinton.

The shooting was the culmination of an alleged attack on Masser through Pierson's [illegible].

Fire at Powassan.

POWASSAN, Dec. 31.—Yesterday morning about one o'clock a fire which broke out in Brown's grocery completely destroyed the building, a wooden structure, and an adjacent frame building. Notwithstanding the fact that the town force-pump gave out at a critical moment, the Bank of Ottawa, on one side, and Gough's block on the other, were saved through the untiring and heroic efforts of the volunteer fire brigade.

Dr. Chabot Has Blood Poisoning.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—Dr. J. L. Chabot, M.P. for Ottawa, is in a local hospital suffering from blood-poisoning, contracted a month ago when he scratched a finger while performing an operation. Two operations have since been performed on his arm and it is expected he will recover.

On the Track of the New Year

NEW YEAR'S was a long time in settling upon Jan. 1 as the proper time for its celebration. Even now, in Greece and Russia, where the Julian calendar is in force, New Year's does not arrive until twelve days after the year is well on its way in the rest of the civilized world.

The ancient Egyptians and Persians began the new year at the autumnal equinox, Sept. 22, and the Greeks of Solon's time at the winter solstice, Dec. 21, but in the time of Pericles the date was changed to the summer solstice, June 21. The Romans began the year from the winter solstice until Caesar changed it to Jan. 1. With the Jews the new year began in September in civil affairs, but in their ecclesiastical reckoning the beginning of the year dates from the vernal equinox, March 22. And, as this is astronomically the beginning of spring, the date is a logical one, and that of the 25th of March (25 being a more fully rounded number) was accepted generally by Christian nations in medieval times as New Year's.

In England Dec. 25 was New Year's until the time of William the Conqueror. His coronation happened to fall on Jan. 1, and accordingly the year was ordered to commence on that day. But the English gradually fell into union with the rest of Christendom and began the year on March 25. When in 1582 the Gregorian calendar was promulgated and definitely located New Year's on Jan. 1 most Catholic countries adopted it at once, but England did not acquiesce until 1752.

In ancient Rome New Year's day was given up to feasting and frolicking. Sacrificial fires burned continually on the altars of the twelve gods. All litigation and strife were suspended reconciliations took place, New Year's calls were made and New Year's gifts bestowed. There also originated the New Year's resolution, for every Roman resolved on New Year's day to so regulate his conduct that every word and act should be a happy augury for all the days of the ensuing year.

ALL NATIONS DRINK A NEW YEAR'S HEALTH.

On account of the orgies which marked the New Year's arrival not only among the Romans, but among the Teutonic races, the early Christians looked with scant favor upon the whole season. By the fifth century, however, Dec. 25 became the fixed festival of the Nativity, whereupon Jan. 1 assumed a special sacred character as the octave of Christmas day.

The giving of gifts on New Year's day has been superseded largely in Anglo-Saxon countries by the giving of Christmas gifts, but the custom still is retained in France. This custom was one of the most ancient and universally observed of New Year's day.

The druids distributed branches of the sacred mistletoe. The Roman emperors exacted gifts, and so did the English rulers down to the time of Cromwell.

The world over on New Year's it is a custom to drink to the health of one's friends.

The custom of making New Year resolutions and "turning over a new leaf" is universal and, like political platforms, is as much honored in the breach as in the observance. But the temptation which surrounds frail human beings in this wicked world are many and insidious.

The Old Year And the New

I WATCHED the old year fade,
  And with its dying light
The gloom, at first a shade,
  Turned into darkest night.
And then I said: "'Tis gone
  The old year is no more,
And memories now alone
  Linger along the shore."

I watched the old year die,
  And with its fading day
There came the thought that by
  Its death a brighter way
Opes up, and all things bright,
  We'll have surcease at last
From specters dark as night.
  They'll live, but in the past.

THE OLD YEAR'S FLIGHT.

I watched the old year's flight
  And then said, with a smile,
"Ah, now the new year bright
  Will bide with us awhile!"
But ere my hopeful dreams
  Have realized one day
Is dead and passed; it seems
  It starts but to decay.

Thus all along the way
  Gravestones must mark the miles,
An epitaph each day,
  A tomb of tears and smiles.
So we begin the new
  ('Tis old ere we've begun)
To find it's aging, too,
  With the first setting sun

But 'twill not always be.
  There'll come a living day,
And all things new, and we Shall live in endless May.
No gravestones then will mark
  The tombs where dead hopes lie,
No nights of sorrow dark
  Creep o'er our changeless sky.
—James Daniel Cleaton.

Crude Petroleum.

Twelve years ago the production of the crude petroleum oil wells of Canada was fifty per cent. of the domestic consumption. To-day the supply is only about five per cent. of the consumption in Canada. This huge decrease is regarded seriously by the Department of Mines, whose annual statement was published recently. Investigation into the possibilities of Southern Alberta and the Peace River district are being conducted by the Department.

The domestic output in 1912 was 8,516,762 gallons, and in 1911, 10,188,219 gallons. The oil imports in 1911 totalled 116,892,689 gallons.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANN SWEENEY

Mrs. Ann Sweeney, relict of the late James Sweeney, passed away this morning at the residence of her son, Mr. Jas. Sweeney, Douro. Deceased was 68 years of age, and up to a month ago lived in Ennismore, where she was well known and highly respected.

Besides her sons she leaves two daughters to mourn her loss, namely Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, Indian River and Mrs. Corkery, Ennismore. The funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. Jas. Sweeney, on Friday morning, to St. Joseph's Church, Douro, where requiem high mass will be sung by Rev. Father McGuire, after which interment will take place at St. Joseph's Cemetery.

LAID AT REST

The Royal Black Knights conducted the funeral of the late Maxwell E. Weir, who passed away at Toronto, and was buried at Little Lake Cemetery on Monday. Rev. R. G. Peever, officiated at the funeral services.

Among the floral tributes were wreaths from the Royal Black Knights and the Toronto Railroad Union.

SPECIAL COMMAND PERFORMANCE

"A Christmas Carol" presented by Tom Terriss & Co.

Mr. Tom Terriss as adapter, producer, and depictor of Charles Dicken's works on the stage is of course, unequalled, and it is therefore particularly noteworthy that the only sketch ever played at a special command performance was "The Christmas Carol," one of Mr. Terris' most successful of his many masterly adaptations. This took place at Sandrinkham, on Nov. 26th, 1901, when the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra were delighted with the performance.

Their Majesties expressed their keenest appreciation of the excellence of the performance and of the whole production, and the honor conferred has naturally been a source of the greatest satisfaction to Mr. Terriss. In bringing to Canada and the United States his English Company of selected Dickens players Mr. Terriss is determined to place before the public a series of productions on a scale never before attempted. The artists are all experienced people, and have been personally rehearsed by Mr. Terriss, who has devoted all his great abilities to bringing about a portrayal of the Dickens' favorites in a manner which cannot fail to appeal to thee yes, ear and hearts of everyone who is fortunate enough to be present. It is a treat that all lovers of English literature and their name is legion cannot afford to miss.

DOG FOUND.

Mr. G. N. Graham's dog has been returned. He advertised in The Review.

MORMONS IN CANADA

The visit which Joseph F. Smith, president of the Mormon Church, has been making to Alberta in connection with the erection of a temple at Cardston to cost $250,000, arouses interest in the extent of the Mormon population of Canada. According to the census of 1901 there were 6,891 Mormons settlers in the Dominion, and in 1911 almost 16,000. The number is now believed to be considerably over sixteen thousand.

In the former decade the principal settlement was in Ontario, the total being 3,377, while in Albeta there were 3,212. By the last census it is shown that more than half the Mormons of Canada are now found in Alberta, the total in that province being 9,978. In Ontario the number is 4,912, the balance being scattered throughout the other provinces.

Glasses and Good Vision

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.

Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. are long experienced and have a wide and enviable reputation for ability. Our equipment is one of the most complete in Canada and we know how to use it.

POLICE DEPARTMENT HOLD FIRST ANNUAL BANQUET

Splendid Repast and Program Given in the Court Room

A representative gathering attended the first annual banquet of the Police Department, held in the Court Room, on New Year's Eve. The gathering which numbered about sixty, included members of the legal profession, members of the City Council, and representatives of other civic departments.

A bright and pleasing effect was brought about in the decorations and the excellent repast prepared by the Boston Cafe, was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Police Chief Thompson acquitted himself as chairman, like a veteran and the first toast that of The King, was responded to in hearty manner, with the gathering singing the national Anthem.

The City Council

In proposing the toast to the city council, Ex-Mayor H. Rush deemed it a great pleasure to be present at such a representative gathering, and to have the honor of proposing the toast to the city council. In a neat and most effective response, Mayor Bradburn spoke of the efficiency and ability of the police force, and also gave a review of the work done during the past year by the city fathers.

"I am certainly very sorry to state that this will probably be my last appearance as Mayor in public, and I wish to thank you all for your kindness, and wish you a happy and prosperous New Year.

Board of Police Commissioners

In response to this toast proposed by the Chief, His Honor Judge Huycke spoke of the work essential to the police department and to the city at large, and the organization of the police commission. He also spoke with deep regret of the departure of Mayor Bradburn from the board as the years with the Mayor on the board, be said, had indeed, been years of great pleasure.

His Honor pointed out that owing to the large increase in the population, it was a dire necessity to have a large police force next year and His Honor strongly advocated the movement. Judge Huycke also spoke in favor of women police.

The Legal Profession

The toast, The Legal Profession, was ably proposed by Mr. W. S. Dodd of the C. P. R., while Messrs. W. H. Moore K.C., and Mr. F. D. Kerr responded, each speaker referring to the efficiency and ability of the police force. Mr. Moore was of the opinion that the increase in the city would eventually lead to a larger police station, and he was sorry that the entire building had not been torn down at the time of alterations some time ago, and a new building constructed.

The Ladies

Constable Brown proposed the toast of The Ladies, which was responded to most ably by Miss Adams.

The Police Department

Magistrate Dumble in proposing this toast, spoke of the efficient and able police force, and he deemed it a sincere pleasure in proposing a toast to them.

In response Chief Thompson read a short and interesting paper on the work of the police and their organization.

The musical program was exceptionally well rendered, Miss Pentland showing considerable mastery of the violin, while Constable Brown also pleased the gathering with two selections on the violin.

Constable Brown brought the gathering to their feet on the rendition of his Scotch ballads. Other contributors were Mr. Robert Handry, Scotch soloist; Jas. Brown, violin; F. Pratt, vocal soloist; E. Desautel, reading and Mrs. Evans, pianist.

The Civic Department

In proposing the toast to the Civic Department of the city, Ald. Gordon spoke of the great work done by this department during the past years, and of the efficiency of the police department. The toast was ably responded to by Messrs. S. R. Armstrong and T. A. S. Hay, and Fire Chief Howard, who all spoke of the good work being carried on by the police department.

ONE OF THE FEW SURVIVORS

Mr. W. R. Skitch Recognizes His Picture in Group Photo.

Mr. W. R. Skitch of Lindsay, is the guest of his son, Mr. W. F. Skitch Mr. Skitch Sr., while in conversation with a Review reporter this morning, looked over the Xmas Edition of The Review in which appeared a picture of the teachers and members of George Street Sunday School, 1864, and he found his own picture among the group. "Why that is fine," was the verdict of Mr. Skitch, who added that Mr. Dumble and he and one or two others were about the only survivors.

MILD WEATHER THROUGHOUT WEST

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan 2.—Exceptionally mild weather prevailed all over the west for New Year's Day.

YOUNG GIRL ILL TREATED

Police Make One Arrest and Are Looking for Another Man

Screams of Girl Attracted Man Living Near Golf Links

While the police were feasting on Wednesday night, a most dastardly and horrible outrage was committed on an East City girl, near the Golf Links, and as a result, John Burns, a young man is in the cell of the police station. This morning he appeared before Magistrate Dumble, but owing to the precarious condition of the girl, he was remanded for a week. G. N. Gordon is defending the prisoner.

The charge against Burns at present is indecent assault, and while as yet the other man has not been apprehend, the police have him spotted, and before long he will be in the cells.

It is alleged that the two men took the girl for a drive on Wednesday evening, going by the way of the Golf links, where the outrage was committed.

The screams of the girl attracted a near-by resident to the scene and during his altercation with the men the horse started for home with the girl lying in the bottom of the cutter, unconscious from exhaustion, caused by her struggles with the men.

The horse returned home, while the girl was thrown from the cutter on Concession Street, where after considerable difficulty she managed to crawl to her home, a block or so away, where she received medical aid.

Bail was set at $1,000.

GALWAY COUNCIL

Reeve Coben and the council of Galway have been returned by acclamation. The members of the council are John Clark, Jas. Allen, John Molymeaux, and John McKinley.

MEMBERS OF REGIMENT HAD BIG AFTERNOON'S SPORT

The annual New Year's Day program of sports held for the 57th Regiment, took place yesterday afternoon in the armouries. There was a large number of the members of the regiment present, and over two hundred visitors. The program more than delighted the spectators and to say that everything was carried out in the usual orderly way would not do justice to those in charge, for it was really delightful to see the business-like way the sports were handled.

Col. Sergt. Succeef pres. of the committee, Col. Sergt. Howarth, secretary of the same deserve the great[illegible] of credit for the way they discharged their duties. The other officials were Judges: Col. Clegg, Major Mills, Staff Sergt Cottrell, Col. Sergt. Dodds and Col. Sergt. Dum[illegible].

Clerk of Course—Mr. J. J. Thomp[illegible].

Starter—Sergt Inspector Dunker[illegible], R. C. R.

Official scorers—Sergt Bevan and Sergt. Dawes.

Referee of boxing bouts—Mr. C. [illegible] Graham.

Referee of wrestling matches—[illegible] Forbes.

In the Sergeants' Room refreshments were served, which aided in making the afternoon a most enjoyable one. After the program was completed, the participants and spectators assembled in the Recreation room, and after a short speech of welcome by Major Mills, the following prizes for the events were given ont by Col. Sergt. Succee, assisted by Col. Sergt. Dodds:

Obstacle race— 1st, Sergt Foster, pair of gloves; 2nd, Sergt Brown, a tie.

Three legged race—Privates Fleet and Morgan, pair of military watch fobs.

Boxing—Mutt and Jeff, (exhibition). Pte. Roberts and Pte. Scates.

Pillow fight (exhibition), Col. Sergt. Brown.

WRECKAGE OF FISHERMEN'S HOMES AT SEABRIGHT, N.J.

Damage estimated at more than $1,000,000 was done recently by a northeast gale which swept the New Jersey coast.

Sea Bright, N. J., where the gale attained a maximum velocity of ninety-eight miles, was almost devastated by the wind and the highest tide ever known there. Handsome cottages were swept into the sea, miles of boardwalk and bulkheads destroyed and the streets torn up for yards inland.

OTTAWA EXPRESS CRASHED INTO STANDING TRAIN

Two Coaches Telescoped Through mishap at Havelock

HAVELOCK, Jan. 2.—What might have been a serious accident except for the fact that the last two cars were unoccupied, except for the porter, occurred here early yesterday morning, when the east bound Montreal train while standing at the local station, about to depart, was crashed into by the east bound Ottawa express.

The engine of the Ottawa train drove itself several feet into the last car of the Montreal train, while the two last cars were quite badly telescoped. It took several hours to separate the tangle and as a result the train was delayed for some time.

The porter on one of the smashed cars escaped with but slight injuries. Owing to the heavy holiday traffic, the Montreal train was running behind schedule time.

A YOUNG ARTIST OF GREAT PROMISE

Miss Wilson's Work to be on View at the Public Library Studio.

It may be of interest to the people of Peterboro to learn that we have in our city a young artist of most brilliant promise, in the person of Miss Kate Taylor, daughter of Mr. Wilson Taylor, of the Collegiate Institute staff.

Although this young lady has since childhood, made art her chosen work, it is only within the last two years that she has had the advantages of study at the art schools of Detroit and Toronto, and already her teachers are prophesying great things of her.

At present she is under the tuition of J. W. Beatty, R. C. A., of the Toronto School of Art.

Being at home for the holiday season, Miss Wilson has kindly consented to place on view a considerable number of her studies, at the studio in the Public Library, under the patronage of the Women's Art Association, of Peterboro, and all who are interested are cordially invited to visit the studio this afternoon or evening from three to six o'clock, or from eight to ten o'clock.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS; NEW TEACHERS

Pupils Return to Their Studies on Monday Morning.

The public schools will re-open on Monday, at 9 a.m. New teachers on the staff are: Miss Sisson, at the King Edward School; Miss Kirkwood, at the South Central, and Miss Walker, at the Ashburnham school.

MR. OKE RETIRES

Mr. Oke, who was nominated as alderman in the East Ward, in opposition to Ald. J. C. Anderson, told The Review to-day that he had decided to withdraw from the contest.

A NEW YEAR RESOLUTION

By F. A. Connors
Pastor, Park St. Baptist

In this New Year, I am resolved
To my best self be true;
In all that I shall undertake
To speak or plan or do;
If I with others cannot agree,
In what they do or say,
I'll still to my best self be true,
And differ honestly.
I may find in the end I'm wrong,
If so, I'll then confess;
And if they hate, I'll not hate back,
And when they curse I'll bless.
I shall remember I'm but a man,
And will always endeavor
To myself and my God be true
Forever and forever.
I'll try in others to see the good,
As through this world I go,
And manifest a brother's love,
Alike to friend and foe.
When troubles and temptations come
I'll try still to be cheerful,
Amid the gloom I'll brave the fight
And not be faint or fearful.
In short, I'll try to rule myself,
Amid life's ill appalling
And always seek the Saviour's Grace,
To keep my feet from falling;
And whether the world applaud or hiss,
The people curse or bless,
I'll always, to the wrong say "No,"
And to the right say "Yes."

MANY CITIZENS ATTENDED OPENING AT HOSPITAL

A Big Step Forward is Made by the Board of Management

COST $60,000

Fully five hundred people visited the new $60,000 wing of the Nicholl's hospital, which was formally opened yesterday afternoon. The building is most up-to-date, and modern, making the Nicholl's hospital one of the best equipped in Ontario.

Among the numerous and many features prominent in the new hos- is that it is fire proof. Contractors Langford and Sheehy constructed the building.

The structure is four storeys with accommodations for over fifty beds, giving the whole hospital accommodation for fully one hundred beds. A number of private wards have been equipped to meet the requirements of special cases which necessitate considerable attention. These wards are beautifully furnished with every convenience for the patients' comfort.

The fan system is used in the ventilation system, giving a change of air every eight minutes without raising a window. A similar system is in use at the Normal school.

One of the innovations which makes the new wing very prominent is the installation of a large electric elevator, supplied by the firm of J. B. Stevens, of Glasgow. An up-to-date sterilizing room, fully equipped, is among the new features. bath room and wash rooms have been fitted up for the doctors. The two large operating rooms on the top floor, have the latest devices in the medical profession, while the two large skylights give ample light for surgical work in the day time without artificial light. The anaesthetic room is also a marked innovation with its various fixtures. A handsomely fitted recovery room presents a beautiful appearance, with everything possible for the comfort of the convalescent patient.

Silent Signals

The wards are fitted with a cork matting, while the new system of silent signals for the patients bespeaks of enterprise on the part of the trustees. A children's ward is included among the wards. There is also a large sun room at the south of the new wing on the first and second floors.

Some of the people of Peterboro may not be aware of the fact that the Nicholl's hospital is operated without one cent of cost to the ratepayers. This is due to the munificence of the late Mrs. Nicholls, who left sufficient endowments for the upkeep of the hospital.

DIVISION COURT.

The monthly session of Division Court was held to-day before Judge Huycke, when various claims were disposed of.

ENTERTAINED AT IDYL WILDE

Mr. and Mrs. James Seymour, of Cavan Had Many Guests.

Idyl Wilde, the home of Mr. Jas. Seymour, Cavan, was the scene of a pleasant family gathering Xmas Day.

Nothing could exceed the genial hospitality extended by Mr. and Mrs. Seymour to their guests.

The beautiful home was thrown open and hospitable indeed it looked with its wide hall with drawing room on either side, with open fire places, and spacious dining room, beautifully festooned with Xmas decorations. Covers were laid for thirty, and a thirty-pound turkey graced the board. After partaking of the elaborately prepared dinner the guests one and all agreed that being a gold medalist in fine arts does not lessen Mrs. Seymour's ability in culinary arts. After dinner all repaired to the den upstairs where Santa Claus unloaded a beautiful Xmas tree from which each one of the party were well remembered.

During the afternoon an informal program was given, including piano selections, readings and appropriate songs.

The gentlemen of the party were then shown around the stables and Mr. Seymour's stable of eighteen horses were admired, and his very fine herd of thoroughbred holstein cattle.

Luncheon was then served and enjoyed after which the genial host and hostess were toasted to which Mr. Seymour replied. After singing a parting song, a number of the party enjoyed a sleigh drive to catch the C. P. R. going east.

THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR ROSS MEMORIAL

Hospital Benefits Through Loss of a Wager.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—Through the loss of a wager, the Ross Memorial Hospital at Lindsay will benefit to the extent of $1,000. The statement was made in Toronto that during last year, one Toronto firm of liquor dealers, shipped into the local option town of Orillia 69,000 bottles and 7,000 gallons of intoxicating liquor. Mr. Miller of Orillia disputed the statement, which by inspection of the company's books, has been proved to be correct. He will therefore have to hand over the $1,000 to the hospital as be attached the provision that if he was wrong, he would pay this sum to any charity.

Fine of $10

Thos. Tucker, local young man, charged with being drunk while on the black list, was fined the usual $10 by Magistrate Dumble this morning. Tucker claimed that he got his booze from a cutter.

Army Officers Here

Salvation Army officers, namely: Major Clayton, of Toronto, Major Jennings of Montreal, and Major Dyer of London, Eng., are in the city today on business.

Adjutant McElheney would not devulge the nature of the business.

NEW LAW FIRM IS ANNOUNCED

Mr. R. E. Wood Forms Partnership With Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A.

Mr. Joseph Wearing M.A., a young lawyer of Toronto, has associated himself with Mr. R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, and the legal business will be carried on under the firm's name of Wood and Wearing.

Mr. Wearing is a native of Ora, Simcoe County and has graduated from Woodstock College, McMaster University and the law school at Osgoode Hall.

He begins a professional career in this city, with splendid recommendations and not without considerable experience. Before he studied law, Mr. Wearing was engaged in educational work along the Canadian frontier, and his name has appeared under a number of well written articles in magazines.

KEEN INTEREST IN THE ELECTIONS FOR HAVELOCK

Two Candidates for Reeve and Six for the Council

MEETING TO-NIGHT

Engineer Will Explain Hydro Electric Matters to the Ratepayers

HAVELOCK, Jan. 2.—Interest in the local municipal elections is at the high water mark, and is expected to become even greater before the elections go to the polls on Monday next. The chief tussle is for the reeveship. Dr. H. C. Kindred last year's reeve, being opposed by S. S. Joyce. There are seven in the field for councillors, with four to be elected. The aspirants are W. T. Curtis, J. Howe, J. Wright, S. Higley, Jas. Scott, P. J. Hill and J. Boylan.

For school trustees for a two year's term there are five running, namely: J. Coon, W. Jackson, W. J. Brown, Dr. Thompson, S. and Stan Barlow. Jas. Barlow and W. H. Weese will battle it out for the pleasure of sitting one year on the board, to take the place of R. Walton recently resigned.

Havelock Wants Hydro

The Hydro Power by-law is one that the ratepayers will have the opportunity of deciding on next Monday. For some time now, the need of more electric power in Havelock has been felt. Not only is the present lighting inadequate during certain seasons of the year, but it is felt that if plenty of electric power was available, that it would be the means of inducing some manufacturing industries to locate here, as otherwise Havelock has other appreciable advantages to offer for the location of certain industries; at least, the council has felt it important enough to pnt a by-law before the people.

A meeting of the ratepayers is being held in the Town Hall tonight to discuss the question, when an engineer of the Hydro Commission will explain the details of the proposed service.

News Jottings

Local skaters had their first spin on Thursday when the rink in the park opened.

A LEVEE AT OTTAWA

Duke of Connaught Receives Dominion Officials

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—An exceptionally large attendance was present yesterday at the New Year's levee of H.R.H. the Governor-General, held in his offices in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Wearing the brilliant uniform of a field marshal in the British army, the duke received his callers in his private suite and shook hands with over eight hundred men of all walks of life during the hour of the reception.

Among those who paid their respects to His Royal Highness were Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. W. T. White, Hon. T. W. Crothers, Hon. Robert Rogers, Hon. Martin Burrell, Mgr. Stagni, papal delegate, Archbishop Hamilton, Archbishop Gauthier, Vicar-Gen. Routhier.

WITH ROBERT HICKS.

Mr. George W. Henderson, of this city, has taken charge of one of the departments in Mr. R. Hick's office. Mr. Henderson was formerly employed by the Grand Trunk Railway and the Peterborough Light and Power Co.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING DAY

An Address and Gifts for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Teney.

At Cobourg Mr. and Mrs. Robert Agnew Teney, two well-known and highly esteemed residents, celebrated their golden wedding day at their residence, Sydenham Street, by a family gathering, at which covers were laid for 34 guests. This was followed by an At Home, the following afternoon and evening, when very many friends called to tender congratulations and good wishes. Mr. Teney and his bride, Miss Elizabeth Elliott, were married in 1863 in Haldimand Township, by Rev. Robert Sanderson, Methodist clergyman. They have two daughters, Mrs. Montgomery of Haldimand, and Mrs. Charles Mitchell of Cobourg, and 10 grandchildren. Among the family guests present were Mrs. Elliott's four brothers, Mr. Wm. Elliott and wife, Lucan; Mr. J. F. Elliott, Baltimore; Mr. John C. Elliott, London, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Elliott, Peterboro. The bride and bridegroom of 50 years were presented with an appreciative address on behalf of the family and with many gifts of gold, including $125 in gold coin and a gold watch. A program of addresses was carried out at the family gathering, presided over by Rev. John Garbutt, pastor of the Methodist church, and the bride's four brothers sang a number of quartettes.

A DISTRICT TERRORIZED

Phantom Bandits in France Fire on Villa

CANNES, France, Jan. 2.—A further daring attempt at assassination was made Wednesday night by the criminals known as the "Phantom bandits" who are infesting the country districts around Cannes. They fired two shots through a window of a large villa in the suburb of Ranguin belonging to a prominent Parisian banker, and the bullets just missed two ladies seated at a table. The bandits then disappeared.

No further trace of them was discovered, although the district swarms with detectives specially detailed from Paris and Marseilles.

The terror inspired by these mysterious night outrages of the criminals who recently killed one farmer and shot at another has attained such proportions that nothing will induce the peasants to leave their houses after dark. Doors and windows have been heavily barricaded everywhere in the vicinity, and the prevailing fear is spreading even among the foreign visitors in this winter resort.

The police authorities believe the bandits form part of the gang which terrorized the district for years and whose operations were stopped about a year ago by the arrest of several of their leaders who are now awaiting trial.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE MRS. GUIREY.

Mrs. Guirey, an invalid at the House of Providence, died this morning. The late Mrs. Guirey came from North Bay and she had no relatives here.

The funeral will be held Saturday morning from the House of Providence to St. Peter's cemetery.

THE LATE ALFRED ARGUE.

Alfred Argue, aged 39 years, passed away last evening at his home, 135 Rubidge street, after an illness of some six months, due to stomach trouble. Deceased was born in Manvers, but has lived in this city for the past thirteen years. He was employed on the switch board department of the C. G. R. and was extremely popular with all whom he came in contact. He is survived by a wife and a three-year-old daughter; also his mother [illegible] brothers, who reside in Manvers and one sister, Mrs. R. B. [illegible], of this city.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon, at one o'clock, interment taking place at Ida cemetery, Cavan.

A GOOD ATTRACTION

The usual large holiday crowds attended Vaudeville at the Grand yesterday. The presentation of the Mile-a-Minute Musical Melange was exceptionally good and made a big hit with the audiences.

The song hits numbering 22, were up-to-date, and [illegible], while the work of the Pierrots provided [illegible] laughs.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY JANUARY 2, 1913.

LOOKING BACKWARD AND LOOKING FORWARD.

IT IS NATURAL at the close of a year, before venturing upon the new, to look back. What do we see as we glance over the way we have come? Individually we, no doubt, see many changes. Some have had many losses and crosses during the year. Some have had one great trial or sorrow which overshadows all the lesser ones that others complain so much about.

But whether small or great, whether it be the loss of a husband, wife or other near and beloved relative or friend ;or whether it be the loss of money, property or position; or again, whether it be but some petty domestic trouble—we all think our own sorrows are the hardest to be borne. A person with the toothache is hard to convince that he is not suffering the "hell o' all diseases."

From the individual we turn to the community and what do we see there? What has happened during the months and weeks and days of 1913 in this city of Peterborough?

Calamities of more or less seriousness come to all cities in the course of a year. But perhaps the most terrible that has ever visited Peterborough was the collapse of the Turnbull building. This disaster will not soon be forgotten by those who witnessed it or its results. It will never be forgotten by those who were involved in it, either directly or indirectly, in the loss of life or the loss of money and business. All citizens will join in wishing these unfortunate sufferers a happier year to come than the one that is gone.

But the year 1913 was not all cloud for Peterborough. We have not anything to boast about, but we have much to be thankful for. The year, on the whole, was a happy and prosperous one. Trade has flourished in all departments. The south end of the city has been converted from poor pasture land into a colony of happy industrious people. Houses have gone up at a rate unknown in Peterborough before, and would still be going up but for the weather. Peterborough has reason to be proud of its industries, and so far as employment is concerned, our factories compare well with other cities of a larger size.

Working men and their wives must prepare for the winter and the slackness that it brings. A true Canadian has to have some of the squirrel in his nature and put away some of the nuts that he gathered in the days of his prosperity.

Those who come from the old land suffer most because they have not acquired this winter thrift. They never had to prepare a cellar in the Old Land and it is not easy to acquire the habit in the New Land. But they must acquire it if they are to become happy Canadians. It will save them from the rigors of the winter and give them a sense of security and independence. A large part of the sufferings of the poor does not come from starvation so much as from a sense of dependence and pauperism. What is called "charity" often degrades while it assists. If Canadian cities are to escape slumdom they must, while providing work for their people, also teach them how to take care of themselves. An ounce of Self Help is worth a ton of "Charity."

Here then is a resolution for the New Year. Let the City Council, or the Council of Women, for that matter, take up this question of educating the people in methods of thrift. What is more fitting for the women than to get the confidence of the working mothers and encourage them along these lines. There are many ways of doing this.

One of the first moves would be for our banks to invite the deposit of small amounts in the busy months. There is no reason why the Council should not have a Winter Savings Bank, call it the "Squirrel," or the "Chipmunk Fund." A prize might be offered for the best-stocked cellar to house wives who have to subsist upon a salary of, say, ten or fifteen dollars per week.

This is merely a suggestion, and may be a wild one, but it may suggest other practical methods of dealing with the question of adequate provision for winter among those work people who are liable to suffer from slackness of trade in the cold months.

this one as to thrift of time and money might wel

As a resolution for the New Year, among the many others that one may be making as a city, this one as to thrift of time and money might well be put at the head of the list.

THE LOW HIGHLANDER.

THE MONTREAL TELEGRAPH says::—"Mr. J. M. Bulloch, a literateur Aberdeen, who edits 'The Graphic,' returns to a favorite subject of his, the height of Scots. Mr. Bulloch says there is reason to believe that Scotsmen were smaller long ago than they are to-day. In 1794 the average height of the recruits for the Gordons was 5 feet 5 ½ inches. Bulloch remarks that that does not make the Highlander the giant we have been lead to believe, not even if we adopt the suggestion that the Scots ell was 37¼ inches against the English yard of 36 inches. The Jacobite prisoners as measured by the English Government—presumably not with the Scots ell—came out at 5 feet 6.45 inches, and it must be remembered that most of them were 'gentlemen,' and not laborers or artisans like the Gordon recruits."

This information as to the shortness of the Highland Scot will come as a surprise to many of us who have always regarded the Highlander as proportionate to the highlands from whence he came. Mr. Bulloch being a Scotsman and coming from a direct line of Scots, ought to be an authority upon the subject. But it may be that Mr. Bulloch himself claims Highland descent and is a little prejudiced in the matter. Those acquainted with Mr. Bulloch of the Graphic, know him to be of short but sturdy proportions. He certainly would not be acceptable as a recruit for the Gordons to-day, although he would undoubtedly make a fine warrior, for his views of life are akin to Burns:

"Wha' would be a traitor knave,
Wha's sae base to be a slave,
Let him turn and flee!"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MOST NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS are, like pie crusts, made to be broken.

THE HOLIDAYS are now over. We can straightway forget all about good will toward men and begin to fight and swear as usual.

MOST BABIES ARE born without teeth, but this 1914 youngster bit pretty sharp this morning for a child one day old!

WE ARE NOW told that the police are after Stefansson. Some doubt has been thrown upon the character of the explorer. But there is hardly any likelihood of him running away with the Pole.

SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY says that he is looking for a general upward trend in the financial world now that we have entered the new year. Not a boom, but a steady movement.

THE STORIES PRINTED in the United States to the effect that Great Britain and Germany had "concluded an understanding," are said to be "pure invention." And a very good invention too!

JOHN LIND has so far evaded the Mexican bullets, and is taking a trip home to discuss the situation in Mexico with his President. If discussion could have solved the Mexican problem the United States Cabinet could have done it.

THE CHURCH IN SWITZERLAND has admitted women to the faculty of theology, so that they can now enter the ministry on an equality with the men, and perform the rites and duties of clergymen. This has been accomplished without having recourse to the hammer and torch methods of Mr. Pankhurst. The church has had its fathers, it will now have its mothers.

A SAD CASE of drowning, through venturing upon thin ice, occurred in the Toronto bay the other evening. Three youths were skating and one ventured on a dangerous part, despite the warning of his companions, and disappeared through the ice and did not rise again. The unfortunate youth was the victim of his own bravado, dare-devil spirit. It is a strange parable of life. We may always be sure that we are skating upon thin ice when we get the braggart spirit on us.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Doleful Editors.

Kingston Standard.

The news columns of the Liberal press can usually be relied upon to contradict the "doleful dismals" of the editorial department.

The Test of Adversity.

Brockville Times.

A few pessimists are wailing about alleged "hard times" in Canada as though business depression was going to kill the country entirely and for all time. Such lugubrious talk is unworthy of Canadians. It is a poor type of Canadian who cannot stand a measure of adversity, and Canada would be but a poor country if it could not survive a period of depression. But we all know that the men who have made Canada what it is to-day were not cast down by reverses or discouragements or obstacles. They stuck pluckily to their guns and kept fighting on, and a splendid victory they won at last. The nation, like the individual, must have its character tested by adversity. Adversity brings out the best that lies within the man or the nation.

The Last Use For X-Rays.

Westminster Gazette.

Announcements come from Birmingham that Dr. Hall-Edwards, well known as a radiologist, who is also a victim to dermatitis caused by X-rays, has been applying a German process to the radiography of plants and insects. It seems that the use of very soft rays from very low tubes under certain conditions may produce images of such transparent objects as flowers and paper, and experiments indicate that growth of diseases in plants may thus be observed, letters written in ink (if made with a metal basis) can be read through an envelope, and the structure of insects examined without dissection. Clearly, as the Hospital remarks, not only botanists and detectives, are likely to benefit by this latest development of radiology.

Love's Answer.

Westminster Gazette.

Dost thou grow old? Doth time, the daring thief,
Filch from thy cheek, even thine, the beauteous rose?
Alas, the morn of all fair things is brief,
Yet chide him not that calls it to its close.

He doth but change the red rose for the white,
Doth but a little shade the intenser sun,
And shield us from the sharpness of that light
Whereby our peace was troubled; 'tis well done.

Thou growest old? Dear Love, it should be so,
That even thy heart should feel the graver touch
Of his wise hand, and thou still dearer grow
To us who change. I mourn not overmuch.

Nay, rather, praise him, who, by leading thee
The road I go, must keep thee close to me.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MR. BURNHAM ANSWERS.

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,As your correspondents who have commented upon my letters on Economics, are quite plainly genuine workingmen, I will, with your permission, briefly explain:—

1.—The world moves and society develops. If it did not, we might well say, "God help the underdog." People who are fully satisfied with any trade theory are hard to find nowadays.

2.—Britain since the forties has been "free trade." All the other great powers are high protection. What are we to make out of that? It proves nothing absolutely, I admit. It is just a sign to take note of. If, however, protection is fatal and free trade what we used to think it was, why have the other powers done so well and why has Britain not out-distanced them? The answer is that she did so until they compelled home development by protection, when they at once drew abreast of her great as she is and great as she ever will be. Free trade clearly develops a country on one side. Protection by putting up a wall, compels home commerce and balance.

3.—These things, however, are not what I wished to dwell upon. What I wished to say is that what alone will make a great and happy people is that the lowest order of labor shall be pair a regular and living wage and others accordingly. It is not necessary, I hope, to dwell upon the present unbalanced condition of modern life. We have times of extraordinary bounty becoming the direct cause of scarcity. Over-production surely should not produce starvation, misery, riots, strikes, etc., etc. That is plain. What would you do? "Let things alone" (free trade" as they are or try to learn the best way to correct them? Is it not plain that nation-wide governmental management is the best way to correct these absurdities? But control (management) and free trade are opposites. The very moment you interpose to prevent the natural flow of trade end labor, that moment you violate the whole principle of free trade. Protection is not a remedy. I did not say it was. It is not a remedy for the distress above named, but as I showed in paragraph two, it was used to promote the development of nations since become great, and appears to have succeeded. How then you ask, does it improve upon free trade? Only in this. Protection is a phase of control, (management). It admits the principle. Free trade by its very name and history defies and denies that principle. Is that not true?

We are on the eve of a great change. Those who oppose any change have been preparing for some time. If you think that they are right then help them to shout, "Laisseyfaire." (Let things alone) let trade alone, let the labor market alone, let money alone, let waste alone.) But if you are in favor of the most far-reaching advance of both industry and labor ever known you will take a bird's-eye view of the situation as from a great height. you will see how easy it really ought to be to feed the hungry, adequately to pay the worker his hire, fully to recompense the capitalist, the captain of industry, the doctor, the artist, etc., etc. It is all done by putting the nation on the same basis of management as a great industry. It has taken centuries for the world to rise to this conception, but it is nearing it rapidly. No more starvation because of over-production. No more slums because of having to live under absolutely unnecessary conditions of torture. No more waste. That is the word. Waste, waste of life, waste of energy, waste of money, waste of production. It is plain then, that we have immense opportunities for improvement. Don't you think so? If you do think so sink your party prejudices and face the facts. No one have a monopoly of improvement, but we can all try unless hopelessly "wedded to our idols" and cruelly contemptuous of the over-increasing world of the slums.

J. H. BURNHAM.

A CANDIDATE'S REPLY

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—

In reply to the letter which appeared in The Review of Dc. 31st, signed by Ratepayer, and referring to my position in regard to Hydro Electric, I wish to say that I have advocated a municipal lighting system, also municipal ownership of public utilities, and must therefore of necessity, be in favor of Hydro Electric. My nominator, Mr. E. F. Mason, is a strong advocate of municipal ownership, and is fully cognizant of my position in respect to Hydro Electric. My policy is such as to justify the vote and influence of every elector in the Centre Ward.

I might also state that my election card which has been before the public for several days, substantiates my claim as a supporter of this important measure.

Hydro Electric can hardly be characterized as an issue in the present election, as it was unanimously endorsed by the ratepayers on year ago, therefore it devolves upon subsequent councils to see that the wishes of the people are carried out to a successful conclusion. If elected, I will do my best to see that the wishes of the electors are fulfilled.

Yours truly,
A. M. STRATTON.

Seeking Overthrow of Morris.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 2.—Petitions designed to overturn the majority by which the Premier, Sir Edward Morris, will control the new Legislature to be convened on Jan. 14, have been filed by members of the Opposition headed by Sir Robert Bond. The unseating of seven People's party members of the Assembly supporting the Premier, is sought through allegations of illegal election practices. The people's party has a majority of six in the Legislature.

DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service of all such.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

Would Not Pay at All.

"B" ball means [illegible] limit and [illegible] paid players. ould give the larger cities [illegible] chance than they have in ent class "C" league to get ball teams than the smaller and it would not be long be- een like St. Thomas, Peter- erlin, Guelph and Brantford drop out altogether. Even ilton class "C" ball has not paying proposition and with ded expense that a class "B" club would entail, Hamilton could never be made to pay. Practically the only clubs in the league who could stand the higher class article are London and Ottawa, and these clubs are opposed to it. Consequently there is little chance of the Canadian League seeking a higher classification in the event of Erie coming in.

Would Double Expenses

Director George H. O'Neill of the London club, voiced the sentiments of the London management when he stated to The Advertiser recently that the Canadian League could not stand a higher classification than it has at present. It would practically double the expenses of each club without insuring any greater patronage, and there is no doubt that it would be a losing proposition from the start.

Cheaper Managers

The salary limit for class "C" clubs next season will include half the salary of the manager, so that the Canadian League clubs will have to draw a tighter line in the amounts payed to players. This will mean that the more you pay your managers, the less you will have to pay your players, so cheap managers may be the rule in the league next season instead of the exception as formerly.

NBOAT SMITH WON IN FIFTEENTH ROUND

Francisco, Jan. 2.—"Gun- Smith, the California heavy- t, scored a decisive victory yes- , when he knocked out Arthur , the Canadian fighter, in the th round of their "white hope" onship battle in the Daly City air amphitheatre. The sailor strong favorite in the betting ds of 7 to 10.

th's aggressiveness culminated clean-cut right to the chin, and perior all around work in all wo or three rounds, did much ve his way to victory. Pelky a keen disappointment, be- low and seldom taking the fight is shiftier opponent.

fight opened with the Gunner ng matters with snappy lefts to ; but Pelky making his best ing, drove in several hard rights body and face that staggered and sent him to his corner ling from the mouth. The d cheered the Canadian, and were made at evens that he ld win.

the second round Smith scored ily to the jaw, and in the third y clouted his man viciously ov- the kidneys. Rounds four and were without feature, but in the Smith forged to the front and after was never in danger. In round he fought the Canadian a standstill with left uppercuts, ing him to his corner, dazed bleeding from the mouth.

mith continued to gain confidence as the fight progressed, and, dancing around his bulkier opponent, worked his left to great advantage and forced Pelky to clinch for shelter.

After thirty seconds' fighting in the fifteenth round, Smith feinted with his left, then swung his right with lightning rapidity. The blow landed with a crash on Pelky's unsupported jaw. Pelky dropped with his eyes glassy. Mechanically he struggled to his feet at the count of nine, and unsteadily assumed his fighting pose. A left and right applied similarly topped him on his back, and he was out when Referee Griffin awarded the fight to Smith.

In a day Smith has climbed out of the "white hope" brigade into championship material, but it cannot be said his performance was satisfactory. San Francisco fans never saw "Gunboat" Smith miss as many times as he missed today. Time and again when he did land, the blow would find Pelky in bad shape, and yet the "Gunner" failed to assume the aggressive.

FIRST O.H.A. GAME AT BROCK RINK TO-NIGHT

Whitby and Local Intermediates to Start Away at 8.30

The hockey season opens tonight with the local intermediates in battle against the fast Whitby seven.

Flowers will likely guard the nets for the Petes, and Fred Kelly, Giroux, and Maurice Park will be on the job again, to make the argument an interesting one for the visitors.

The ice is in great shape, and while the fans will not expect to see mid winter hockey they will witness an interesting game. Lawson Whitehead will referee.

The Juniors will practice after the game and also on Saturday evening.

Denison to Return

Fred Denison is remaining with the Ottawa team in their trip across the line, but he will return to his old job on the defence within the next few days.

CURLERS ARE BUSY

Schedule Games Will Commence on Wednesday Night

The cold weather which has predominated during the past few days, gave the Curling Club an opportunity to begin the winter's sport and yesterday afternoon and evening several exhibition matches were played.

If the cold weather continues, the schedule will open on Monday, Jan. 5th. The following will be the rinks that will open the schedule:

W. G. Ferguson, F. M. Dela Fosse.
H. F. Foot, vs. C. R. Cameron.
W. H. Denham vs. John Crane.
W. D. Campbell vs. J. E. A. Fitzgerald.
T. Brightman vs. D. Davidson.

The schedule matches will be played on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evening, while Wednesday and Saturday evening will be open to all members of the Curling Club.

PEG CURLERS LEAVE TO-NIGHT

Coming East to Play in the Ontario Competitions.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Jan. 2.—Two rinks of curlers leave for Ontario to-night to be absent three weeks and they expect to return with many eastern scalps. The rinks are:—Vic. Wood, Jack Ingram, Howard Wood, D. M. Braden, Jack Lenfesty, Dr. Coghlan, Jack Kress, Cassidy and Rochon.

Open Verdict Returned.

CALUMET, Mich., Jan. 2. — An open verdict, including a finding that the Christmas Eve panic which cost 72 lives in Italian Hall, was caused by an alarm of fire raised within the hall, was returned last night by the coroner's jury after three days' hearing of the evidence of participants in the disaster.

Every allegation that enemies of the Western Federation of Miners were responsible for starting the panic was rejected by the jury.

Saw Overturned Schooner.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—A large schooner, floating bottom up about 200 miles south of Nantucket, was reported yesterday by officers of the British freighter Honorius, which arrived from South American ports. The derelict was said to be a menace to shipping.

BLAZING SHIPS.

Trivial Causes of Terrible Catastrophes on High Seas.

It would seem almost impossible to set fire to and burn to the water's edge a big modern ship, built, as such vessels almost invariably are now, of steel or iron, with transverse bulkheads of the same metal.

Experience, however, has shown otherwise, for the catastrophe that happened to the Volturno a short time ago is not by any means a solitary example of its kind.

It is extraordinary, too, how little a thing will start the biggest and most devastating of ocean fires. Thus the carelessness of a member of the crew, who dropped a lighted oil-lamp on the forecastle floor, was responsible for the burning in mid-ocean of the big emigrant ship Cospatrick on November 18th, 1874, when no fewer than 465 lives were lost.

The fate of these poor people was exactly what would have been that of those on board the Volturno if wireless telegraphy had not been invented. They fought the flames with the frenzy of despair until overpowered, then they perished. A few—about five or six—got away in a boat, and were picked up ten days later half dead from starvation and exposure. These were the sole survivors.

One of the most thrilling stories of fires at sea, the burning of the Sarah Sands, had a similar origin—the careless handling of a naked lamp in a lazaretto filled with Government stores. She had 800 soldiers on board, and these worked like heroes removing and throwing overboard the gunpowder, of which there was a large quantity stored in the hold.

One barrel did explode, blowing up the entire port quarter of the ship. Nevertheless, after weeks of dreadful anxiety, the still smouldering hulk was navigated safely to the Mauritius, without losing a single life.

Ships are frequently fired owing to the spontaneous combustion of their cargoes. A striking example was afforded by the case of the Micronesia, bound from South America for Antwerp, with nitrate in bags. The flames burned every scrap of woodwork in the skin of the vessel, causing the nitrate to become fused, owing to the terrific heat, so that from a soft and powdery substance it was transformed into a species of liquid cement, which ran down into the lower hold and held together the plates that had previously started, thereby preventing her from sinking. She was picked up eventually—a red-hot hulk—by a tug and beached at Deal. Her passengers and crew escaped in the boats.

Oil in barrels is fearfully dangerous. A few years ago a big iron ship, the Blengfell, of Liverpool, was proceeding up Channel with the pilot on board when she suddenly burst into flames from some unexplained cause, and every soul on her perished. No trace of the bodies was ever found, nor could any craft approach anywhere near the blazing vessel, owing to the intense heat, while the stench of the burning oil was said to have been well-nigh intolerable.

Bells of Aberdovey.

Aberdovey has been made famous by the "Bells of Aberdovey," and the townsfolk are hard put to it to explain how that song ever came to be written, for Aberdovey has no bells worth mentioning and until forty years since had not even a church. Some suggest that the old song was a metaphorical allusion to maidens' voices floating across the water. Another tale runs of a giant, perhaps Idris himself, who carried a huge bell in his hand and was wont to wade across the estuary at low tide. One day he was overwhelmed by a tidal wave and drowned, but his bell still sounds over the sounds at certain hours and seasons.—London Chronicle.

Handel's Big Earnings.

Handel made more money from his works than any composer before his time. For a "Te Deum" and a "Jubilate," written to celebrate the treaty of Utrecht, he was awarded a pension of $1,000 a year. This was doubled by George I. soon after his accession and confirmed by George II., so that Handel drew the pension until his death in 1759. Altogether for these two compositions Handel received over $90,000. Although he lost thousands of dollars running opera at Covent Garden, Handel died worth $100,000—a sum, allowing for the difference in the value of money, equal to $300,000 nowadays.—London Mail.

Reorganizing Regiment.

SARNIA, Jan. 2.—The 27th Regiment, St. Clair Borderers, is now being reorganized by Col. Kelly of Watford. Sarnia will have three companies and Point Edward one. The local organization work is being done by Capt. Robertson.

CHEATING A TREATY.

Recession of Glacier Will Give Canada a Harbor.

A collision between natural law and man-made law is apt to result in the nullification of the latter, whether the lawyers like it or not. The eminent legal experts who drew up the Alaskan boundary agreement between Great Britain and the United States decided that Canada should have no access to the Pacific through Alaska, no matter how far inland the fiords in that region should run. But in providing that the boundary should keep away from the salt water, they assumed that the coast-line was stationary—which it is not. In certain places it consists of the frontal walls of great glaciers, which are always protruding or retreating. At present they are mostly drawing back, so that the water which replaces them is now in some cases within Canadian territory. The question of the boundary at these points is of great interest. Ought it to be redetermined and based on the new coast-line? Or shall Canada enjoy her new harbors with the possibility of transit through U. S. territory to the Pacific?

A recent writer on the subject points out that the United States can hardly insist on a moving boundary line even to satisfy a treaty.

The boundary, however, was settled in 1903, for all time. It is ten marine leagues, or about 35 miles from the coast. Certain glacier fronts have had advances and recessions of 20 to 60 miles; and as these glaciers, rather than the solid land, determined the coasts, an element enters into the situation which was not considered by the joint boundary commission of Great Britain and the United States.

Most of the glaciers in the world are oscillating at the terminus, sometimes moving forward to a more advanced position, sometimes melting back . . . . Such oscillations are always taking place. Evidently a glacier is too variable a feature to be used in determining an international boundary.

[illegible] ers, and Canada's newly-gained harbor will eventually be lost again through advance of the glacier. This scientists know from the ancient and modern advances of ice tongues in this very region.

Clearly the international boundary should not be shifted with every such fluctuation of a glacier, nor should coastal boundaries in glaciated mountains be located without knowledge of and regard for such glacial oscillations.

If the international boundary had been fixed a century ago, Canada would have made up for its loss of territory near Mount St. Elias by the addition to British Columbia of a part of what is now Alaska, in the region east and north of Russell Fiord.

Even this give-and-take as a result of differences in the coast-line, in connection with the advance and recession of glaciers, would have been unfair, for neither the emaciated glacier coast nor the advanced glacier coast marks a permanent condition. See what has just happened. Hidden Glacier continued the recession of the nineteenth century during the period of recent observations from 1890 to 1906. But between 1906 and 1909 this ice tongue advanced two miles, probably in 1907.

All of these observations show the unfitness of the temporary terminus of a tidal glacier to be considered the head of a bay, especially in cases where the coast-line bears an important relationship to the determination of an international boundary. The events of the last century in the vicinity of Mount St. Elias, Russell Fiord, and Glacier Bay have demonstrated this clearly."

Vedrines May Fly to Cape.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—The National Aerial League has telegraphed to Jules Vedrines at Cairo asking him to make a flight to the Cape instead of to Australia. The route proposed is up the Nile to Lake Albert and Victoria Nyanza, Mombassa, Beira, Bulawayo and Kimberley, a total distance of more than 6,000 miles.

Stricken While on Train.

NORTH BAY, Jan. 2.—Herbert Davidson, a prominent business man of Winnipeg, who had been on a business trip to Toronto and was on his way home, was taken suddenly ill on the train with appendicitis. He was taken to the hospital here for treatment.

Negro Pleads Guilty.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 2. — William Murray, the negro who ran amuck with a gun, again appeared before Magistrate Livingstone Wednesday. Six charges were brought against him, and to each he pleaded guilty. He elected to be tried summarily.

Murray was charged with shooting with intent at M. Sears, with robbery from J. O'Neill, with shooting at Wesley Turner, with unlawfully shooting at Joe Hartley and Mrs. Saunders and with unlawfully wounding Emma Jones. The offences were committed on the early morning of Dec. 24. The charge of shooting and wounding P. C. Cobden was not presented.

All the cases were adjourned for a week.

John Pinckneil Is Dead.

PARIS, Ont., Jan. 2.—The passing of Mr. John Pinckneil at an early hour yesterday morning removed a well-known and highly-respected citizen from Paris and vicinity. He was born in Somersetshire, Eng., in 1841, and came to this country 54 years ago, first working as a farmer just outside of this town for upwards of forty years, and conducting a market garden at Falkland, three miles west of Paris, and for the past quarter century he has resided in town.

Winnipeg School Trouble.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 2. — Winnipeg Public School Board has refused to take over the Catholic schools of the city to be operated a public schools with Catholic teachers in charge, and no provision to be made restraining teachers from wearing garb of religious orders. Negotiations have been proceeding for several months, the Catholic ratepayers finally making a concrete proposal that the Catholic schools be taken over as outlined. Last night the Public School Board decided that as a public body and representing no particular class or sect, it could not operate the Catholic schools on the basis proposed.

HONORS ON NEW YEARS

Six Canadians are Included in List of Distinctions

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The following Canadians appear among the New Year's honors, the official list of which were published yesterday:

K.C.M.G.: His Honor Sir Francois Charles Stanislaus Langelier, LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec.

His Honor Douglas Colin Cameron, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Manitoba.

C.M.G.: Charles Jerome Jones, I.S.O., assistant secretary to the Governor-General of Canada.

Aubrey White, Esq., Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, Ontario.

Knight Bachelor: Hon. Horace Archambault, Chief Justice of Court of King's Bench, Quebec.

Henry Kelly Egan, Esq., Ottawa.

Of all the names which figure in the New Year's honors list, the most distingushed perhaps is that of Hon. James Bryce, who becomes a viscount. The other four peers are Sir Rufus Isaacs and Alexander Ure, who were recently raised to the headships of the English and Scottish judicial benches respectively. Sir Charles Cripps, M.P., who is thus honored by his political opponents, and Sir Harold Harmsworth, who thus provides the interesting and rare spectacle of two brothers receiving peerages during the lifetime of both. Sir Harold is a brother of Lord Northcliffe.

The honors list comprises five peerages, five privy councillorships, six baronetcies, twenty-two knighthoods and an enormous number of decorations and promotions to the various orders in the home, Indian and colonial and civil services.

The single appointment to the order of merit goes to Sir Archibald Geikie, ex-president of the Royal Society. Literature and the arts are rather conspicuously neglected, the only noticeable names being James Bryce.

Sir Archibald Geikie, Owen Seaman, editor of Punch, and Ernest Rutherford, director of the physical laboratory of the University of Manchester, and a writer on physicial and philosophical subjects, who is knighted.

Work by any other name wouldn't make a hit with lazy people.

SHE TOOK A LONG TRIP

Polack Girl Finds Aunt After Venturesome Journey.

NORTH BAY, Jan. 2.—Annie Souchon, a little Polack girl, 12 years old, bright and intelligent looking, with pleasing features and a very scant knowledge of the English language, has been the ward of Chief of Police Rayner for several days, on account of having had the nerve to start out on a 500-mile journey to find her parents.

The little girl was left with a relative at a settlement on the Transcontinental Railway, west of Cochrane, by her parents, who went to Ottawa, and she became lonesome among strangers that she started out on the long journey to find her father and mother. She made her way to Cochrane on a construction train and then boarded the T. & N.O. Railway express, and although she had no money the conductors looked after her and brought her through to North Bay, where she was taken charge of by Chief Rayner, who finally located an aunt in Ottawa.

Mayor Lee furnished a ticket for the little girl and she went away happy.

HOUSEBOAT LOST; CREW IS SAVED

BEAUFORT, N.C., Jan. 2.—News was received here late yesterday of the loss of the power houseboat Lunari and rescue of her crew of Georgetown, S.C. The vessel, recently completed and on her first trip south, with only the crew aboard, went on a bar in a northeast gale and was beaten to pieces. She was worth probably $40,000.

The quantity of cattle in this country has decreased in recent years, while the poultry flock has grown larger.

HUERTA'S ARMY ALL BUT DEFEATED AT OJINOGA

Long and Desperate Battle is Almost at an End, With the Northern Division of the Government Troops Starting Across the Border.

PRESIDIO, Texas., Jan. 2. — The northern division of the Mexican Federal army at Ojinaga, Mexico, with its eleven generals, other officers and about 4,000 soldiers, after a merciless three-days' attack by Gen. Ortega's 6,000 rebels, last night appeared to be on the verge of fleeing in disorder across the river into the U. S.

With a line of struggling wounded at the border to indicate the extent of the carnage, the deserters already appearing in numbers, Major M. N. McNamee, commanding the border patrol, made every plan in anticipation of the fight.

Less than 500 cavalrymen form the border patrol here. To this small body of American soldiers would fall the task of surrounding and disarming perhaps 6,000 Mexican soldiers.

"I expect at any time during the fight that the greater part of the Federal army, possibly two or three thousand, may be forced across the river. I have made arrangements to disarm and hold them if this takes place."

This was the message that Major McNamee sent out yesterday. As careful an estimate as could be obtained of the wounded on both sides was one thousand. Most of these were left on the battlefield. The less disabled succeeded in reaching the river, and were cared for by the Red Cross on this side.

Scores of uninjured Federal deserters in defiance of the American patrol crossed with their arms. All these were disarmed and forced back to the Mexican side.

More than 200 rifles, other arms and ammunition thus were taken from the fugitives. It was impossible to learn accurately the number of dead, and the belief that it would be great was based on the number of wounded. Many were believed to have died through lack of medical attention, as neither Federals nor rebels are equipped with any field hospital service, and the Red Cross officials on this side were not permitted to ford the river, even under a Red Cross flag.

Supplies of bandages and hospital equipment were needed. It was expected this want would be relieved by the arrival of more Red Cross nurses and physicians who were coming from Marfa, the nearest railway station, 67 miles away.

As for the battle at Ojinaga, one mile back from the river, it proceeded uninterruptedly with the Federals confined in and fighting from the adobe huts in the village, while the rebels, always drawing closer, fired artillery and small guns from the hills and approaches. Soon after daylight the Federals made a desperate attempt to rally. They even extended their line of fire outward, but this brought only an increased firing by the rebels that sent the defenders back to their inner defence. Thereafter the relative position of the opposing forces remained much the same with Gen. Ortega driving in shot and shell from three sides, while Gen. Francisco Castro's Federals fired from what vantage points they had within the horse corral, the customs house and trenches.

Mexican Rebels Burned Bridge.

VERA CRUZ, Jan. 2.—The Inter-Oceanic Railway has suspended traffic for three days in order to repair a bridge which was burned by rebels on Tuesday when they attacked a troop train.

Quiet in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Jan. 2.—Few surprises were sprung at yesterday's elections, which were among the quietest yet held here. The lack of interest shown is explained by the fact that there was no mayoralty contest and no very important bylaws before the people. The following is the new council:

Controllers—W. H. Cooper, T. W. Jutten, G. W. Gardner, T. S. Morris.

Hydro Commissioners — W. Ellis, T. J. Stewart.

Aldermen—Ward 1, C. Walters, J. W. Tyrrell; Ward 2, T. B. McQuesten, T. W. Wright; Ward 3, David Garson, R. M. Roy; Ward 4, J. E. Davey, H. A. E. Cox; Ward 5, Fred. Money bylaws aggregating expenditures of $760,000 were passed.

Graham London's Mayor.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 2.—Charles M. R. Graham is again mayor of this city after defeating by a majority of 704 Ald. J. G. Richter. Mayor Graham now enters upon his third term.

The campaign was fought on the principle of public ownership, Mayor Graham being a strong advocate of the policies of Adam Beck. London's first board of control, consisting of four members, was selected from a field of nine candidates. They are: J. P. Moore, W. G. Coles, H. Ashplant, and G. E. Rose.

School trustees—E. R. Dennis, A. M. Hunt, A. E. Silverwood, Thomas Rowe, W. J. Teasdall, W. G. Young, L. H. Martin.

Aldermen—Messrs. White, Mitchell, Stein, Haney, Tancock, Donnelly, Merryfield, Gwalchmai, Wilson, Leah, Wlader and McDonald, elected in the forgoing order.

A bylaw to give the City Council power to authorize Sunday street cars was indorsed strongly by the ratepayers. This was one of the biggest issues of the campaign, having been fought strenuously in the pulpits throughout the city. The vote was 4,894 for, 2,207 against; majority 2,687.

CONVICTS TO BE GOOD

Resolution is Little Late But VeryPromising

AUBURN, N.Y., Jan. 2.—The convicts of Auburn Prison have adopted a New Year's resolution pledging themselves to good conduct. To make the resolution effective, they have organized a Good Conduct League by means of which they will have a share in maintaining prison discipline. Convict public opinion is the weapon by which it is expected that good discipline will be enforced.

The organization of the league was perfected, it was announced, by a committee of fifty convicts, elected by ballot, which met last Sunday in the prison chapel and adopted the resolution. The scheme, which is an experimental one, was suggested by Thomas Mott Osborne, chairman of the State Committee for Prison Reform, who was recently a voluntary inmate of Auburn, and instituted by John B. Riley, State Superintendent of Prisons.

All convicts will be admitted to the league, but, under its rules, bad conduct will forfeit membership and certain privileges. The aim of the organization, as set forth in the resolution, is "mental, moral, and civic betterment" for those "who for so many years have been considered without the pale of human kinship."

"Resolved," the document continues, "that we, individually and as representatives of all inmates of Auburn Prison, hereby pledge our best honest endeavor and constant attention to the ultimate success of all such efforts as the said Hon. John B Riley has already made or which he shall hereafter undertake looking to the general uplift and progressive regeneration of men and methods in the walls of Auburn Prison."

EMBARGO IS STRICT.

U. S. Secretary Announces Terms of Potato Import.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Regulations of the most exacting character, restricting the importation of potatoes into the United States to guard against potato disease, were laid down by Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture yesterday in the form of an official decision. Provisions requiring importers to notify the Department of all shipments from countries not at present under the absolute quarantine ban and the enforcement of a rigid inspection upon entry by the Department's agents, are contained in the order.

The regulations also provide for lifting, under certain conditions, the quarantine now enforced against most of the potato growing sections of the world. Upon the presentation of satisfactory evidence to the Secretary of Agriculture that a country is free from injurious potato disease and insect pests, potatoes will be admitted from that country in accordance with the regulations governing the importations from countries not now quarantined against.

The countries now barred from import are: Newfoundland, the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, Great Britain, including England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, the nations of continental Europe and the Dominion of Canada. Department officials are confident that some of these countries may, in the near future, be permitted to send in potatoes, if they adhere strictly to the Department's rules.

POLICE CONSENT NEEDED.

You Cannot Even Speak at Friend's Funeral In Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—For a layman to make an address at the grave of a friend in Prussia without the permission of the police is a punishable offence, according to the decision of a court of appeals just rendered at Cologne. A privy commercial councillor, Heidermann, a manufacturer, had died, and his friend, Commercial Councillor Hagen, made some remarks at the funeral without having taken the precaution to get the consent of the police. Before the lowest court Hagen was acquitted, but the prosecuting attorney declared that the case was "one of fundamental importance" and carried it to the court of appeals, which fined Hagen seventy-two cents.

AVIATOR AT JERUSALEM.

Gen. Bonnier Makes Long Flight In Paris-Cairo Trip.

JERUSALEM, Palestine, Jan. 2.—Gen. Francois Xavier Bonnier, another French aviator making the flight from Paris to Cairo, landed near the Pool of Siloam on New Year's Eve. The arrival of Gen. Bonnier's aeroplane, the first ever seen by the inhabitants of the Holy City, created the greatest bewilderment, and practically the entire population turned out to see the machine and to welcome the airman.

Gen. Bonnier is probably the oldest aviator in the game and was commander of the French colonial troops in West Africa. He received his certificate as an aerial pilot in July, 1910.

MONTREAL FIREMEN AGAIN HELPLESS TO STOP FIRE

Seven Families in Apartment Made Homeless While Firemen Stood By Unable To Do Anything for Them.

Volunteers Helped Shovel Snow on Flames---Water Piped From River.

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—Seven families living in the three-storey apartment houses from No. 26 to No. 30 St. Louis Square, which is within the water famine district were dispossessed yesterday afternoon when a fire completely gutted three substantial residential structures. It was forty minutes after the firemen arrived on the scene before a line of hose nearly a mile long sent the first dribbling stream into the flames. A second and third stream followed in the next half hour, entailing the use of about 15,000 feet of hose. In the meantime firemen and volunteers shoveled snow from the surrounding streets and cast it through windows into the seething mass of flames.

Chief Thembiay had a supply of dynamite on hand, but the heroic work of the firemen in cutting away inflammable material in the path of the flames made its use unnecessary.

Mrs. Ernest Cote was rescued from her home at No. 30 by firemen who carried her to the street. She is suffering from shock, but her condition is not regarded as serious.

Joseph McKinnon, 23 years of age, of Philadelphia, who was visiting at No. 32, jumped from the top floor to a gallery on the second floor. He was badly shaken up, and is now in the hospital. His condition is not serious, however.

The fire loss will probably reach $100,000, only partially covered by insurance.

At one time it appeared as though the entire block bounded by St. Louis Square, Laval avenue, Sherbrooke street and Boulevard St. Denis was doomed as the water pressure at best was very weak. It gave out entirely when the firemen had the conflagration well under control and the flames burst forth with renewed vigor.

It was one of the most spectacular fires ever seen in Montreal. The burned structures faced upon an open square and fully 15,000 persons crowded into the square and the surrounding streets watching the apparently fruitless efforts of the firemen to smother the flames, which were shooting high into the air.

Many narrow escapes among the firemen were recorded, but when the fire was finally under control, after a four hours' fight, Mrs. Cote and McKinnon were the only persons reported with injuries necessitating medical attention.

A JOURNALISTIC JEST.

Parisian Paper Proved That Budget Was Void.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Everybody in Paris except the city councillors is still enjoying a New Year's joke played on the city by an enterprising newspaper. Suspecting that the city budget, involving the expenditure of $86,000,000, would not be passed before the hour of midnight on Dec. 31, as required by law, the editor of the newspaper posted a lawyer in the city hall, where the councillors were in session, and when the final vote was taken at 12.45 in the morning, the lawyer drew up a statutory declaration duly signed and witnessed to that effect, thus rendering invalid all expenditures made by the city in the event of anybody testing the point before the courts.

The newspaper magnanimously announced yesterday, however, that it will refrain from bringing the entire civic system of Paris to a halt by obtaining the nullification of the budget, and says it merely published its declaration of the facts for the edification of its readers.

No Hope of Salvage.

SARNIA, Jan. 2.—Another trip was made to the steamer Charles S. Price yesterday and eight descents were made by Diver Henry Wathela. It has been definitely settled that the boat is the Price, as the steering pole and a piece of rail was sent up by the diver. The starboard anchor was out and several hundred feet of chain, showing that she dragged her anchor down the lake. It is practically certain that the boat turned over where she now rests. The diver could not force his way into the vessel and he believes that she cannot be salvaged. Her forecastle has been crushed by the weight of the boat. It is thought that the bodies cannot be recovered.

Liner Had Hard Trip.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Seas that washed one man from the bridge to the deck and swept two others aft from the bow of the vessel, were met by the American liner New York on Christmas Eve, after leaving Queenstown. When the New York came into port yesterday her quartermaster was laid up with a broken leg and an able seaman was just recovering from an ugly scalp wound, the injuries being sustained as a big wave hurled them against a railing. The passengers made up a purse of $58 for the disabled seamen.

Eight Die In Tenement Fire.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Eight persons, five men and three women, were killed in the early morning tenement house fire at 96 Monroe street, in the crowded east side district, Wednesday. Fifteen persons were injured, four seriously, by jumping from fire escapes. The police and firemen made many rescues. The fire started in the hall on the ground floor, cutting off escape by the stairway.

COMPANY OF NOTE COMING

To "The Grand" Headed by Tom Terriss

Mr. Tom Terriss, the eminent English actor, who is to appear at the Grand next Monday, Jan. 5th, for one performance, is bringing with him a company of repertoire players to present the work of Charles Dickens, in a manner never yet before attempted. Mr. Terriss is of course, well fitted for such a task as he has known the Dickens family intimately and is a student and author as well as an actor. He has taken enormous pains to make his present productions noteworthy, and has exactly copied all his scenery and costumes from the works and engravings of every notable authority, Cruickshanks, Phiz, Leach, and Harry Furniss. Every detail has been studiously considered and is absolutely perfect, the result of these painstaking efforts resulting in a series of productions the like of which has never been presented, or even imagined in the history of the British theatre. Mr. Terriss, who of course, depicts most of its leading characters himself, has surrounded himself with a company of really first-class English artists, for instance there is Fredric Annerley, (an associate of Cyril Maude and Oscar Asche), Mary Relph, who has played through America with Sir Johnston, Forbes Robertson and Olga Nethersole, Edward Beecher, with the late Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum theatre, London, Frederick Goodwin, of Sir George Alexander's Company, Olaf Hylten, Lois Carruthers, Eileen Terrence, Viola Bevans, Lionel Roach, and in fact, a company comprising actors and actresses who have all "done something" worthy of their association with a theatrical organization of this magnitude.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

THE CHARITY BALL

The first important social event of the New Year, that of the Charity Ball, held in the Conservatory of Music Hall, last night, was a distinct success, and in this success the Grand Opera House orchestra share to a large extent.

The ball is held annually by the King's Daughters and they are to be congratulated. The responses to invitations numbered three hundred and the gathering included many out of town guests.

The ball room was in gay attire. Union Jacks were prominent in the decorations and the scene was as might be expected, with the handsomely gowned ladies and their gallant partners, many of whom were in uniform.

Warm praise was expressed on the music supplied by the orchestra, which was of a high order and not stinted in quality. Hoopers catered to the satisfaction of all. Mr. G. K. Rackham was honorary secretary.

Among the dancers the following were noticed:

Lieut. Col. E. B. Clegg and Mrs. Clegg, Lieut. Col. Stevenson and Mrs. Stevenson, Major L. M. Hayes and Mrs. Hayes, Mayor Bradburn and Mrs. Bradburn, Mrs. A. Elliott, Dr. Scott, Galt, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. A. Hall, Miss Bernice Giroux, Mr. H. Giroux, Mr. Frank O'Hearn, Miss Eleanor Morrow, Mr. Leo. WEDDING BELLS

HALL—MACKENZIE.

St. Paul's Presbyterian church was the scene of an exceptionally charming New Year's wedding yesterday, when Gwendlyn Fraser, youngest daughter of Jas. A Hall, Sheriff of the County of Peterborough, was united in bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. Robert Pogue, to Mr. Tom Percival Mackenzie, of the Canadian Ban kof Commerce staff. Toronto, and son of Mr. David Mackenzie, of Durmformala, Scotland.

The bride looked charming in a handsome travelling gown of blue alice silk, with a beautiful picture hat to match and she carried a large bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley, while Mrs. P. G. C. Campbell, of Kingston, who assisted her, was gowned in a beautiful blue silk gown, with a black velvet hat trimmed with white, carrying an exquisite bouquet of Richmond roses.

The groom was ably assisted by Mr. R. H. Marlow, of Toronto.

After an extended honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie will reside in Toronto.

McKINLEY—CUTHBERTSON

The home fo Mr. and Mrs. McKinley, 255 Wolfe St., was the scene of a quiet wedding yesterday afternoon, when their son Alexander M. McKinley, was united in bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. H. G. Keith, to Miss Isabella O. Cuthbertson, both formerly of Scotland. They were assisted by Miss M. McKinley, and Mr. J. Victor, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. McKinley will reside on Wolfe Street.

LOWES-McGILL

Mr. Wellington Lowes of Bethel, and Miss Mary Ann McGill, daughter of Mr. J. J. McGill, 83 Aylmer Street, were united in marriage at the home of the bride, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. J. N. Clarry officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowes will reside at Bethel.

Boarder Brought Back.

NORTH BAY, Jan. 2.—John Clive, chief of police of Moose Jaw, arrived in town with a prisoner named Jacob White, whom he arrested at Moose Jaw upon a warrant sent by the local police on charges arising out of White's departure from town with a married woman and her child. White had been a boarder in the home at North Bay, and when he left town the woman and child also disappeared.

The case was taken up by the police, and the husband started west, arriving in Moose Jaw shortly after White's arrest. He found his wife and child and brought them home.

White was arraigned before Magistrate Weegar, pleaded not guilty and was remanded for eight days.

When boiling potatoes try putting a cloth over them before putting on the lid. They will take much less cooking and be much more mealy.

Glasses and Good Vision

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.

Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. are long experienced and have a wide and enviable reputation for ability. Our equipment is one of the most complete in Canada and we know how to use it.

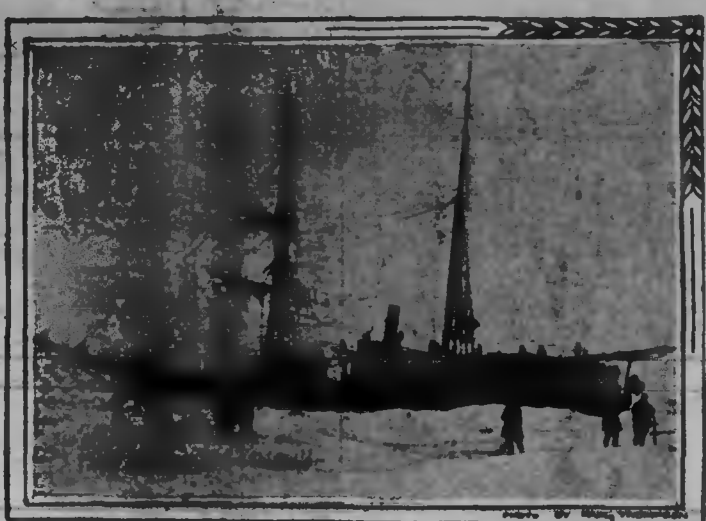
EXPLORING VESSEL WHICH HAS DISAPPEARED IN ARCTIC REGIONS



THE KARLUK FROZEN IN THE ICE WITH SOME OF HER CREW IN FOREGROUND.

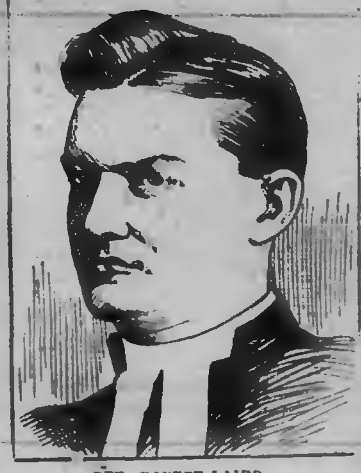
The Canadian exploring vessel Karluk, with Captain Robert Bartlett, Peary's North Pole navigator, has disappeared in the Arctic Ocean. Snared in the grinding ice that is ever drifting into the unknown region, the Karluk, it is believed, is wandering through the ancient graveyard of the north, and it is feared will never be seen again. She is provisioned for three years and has on board the largest scientific staff ever taken on an Arctic expedition.

FINANCING A CHURCH

REV. ROBT. LAIRD UNDERTAKES A BIG TASK.

New Secretary of the Board of Finance is Another of the Men From Nova Scotia Who Do Things in Religious and Educational Lines—He Was Made Professor of Queen's in 1905.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada is rich in men of organising ability. The new secretary of the Board of Finance is the most recent example. The Rev. Robert Laird, of Kingston, is yet one more of the bright young men from Nova Scotia, which is the cradle of so many of Canada's big men. Mr. Laird sustains the tradition for the province, for he is big in every sense of the word. He has ministered at Campbellford, N.B.; Brockville, Ont.; and Vancouver. In 1905 he was appointed to the chair of practical theology in Queen's University, one more notable contribution from the premier maritime province to the educational life of the Dominion. The Presbyterian describes him as being "a born organizer, and abundantly endowed with the grace of perseverance."



REV. ROBERT LAIRD.

At the Finance Board, he will have scope for the exercise of his ability as an organizer. The Presbyterian Church is fortunate in its possession of men of the type of Robert Laird. Incidentally, Mr. Laird is a brother of the manager of the Canadian branch of the National Cash Register Co., another "born organizer"—Canadian Courier.

A Widely-Known Lawyer.

Mr. George Lynch-Staunton, K.C., of Hamilton, who is mentioned as a possible successor to Hon. J. J. Foy as Attorney-General of Ontario in the event of the latter going to the Senate, has rightly been called one of the most experienced and capable lawyers of the Province of Ontario. As a lecturer he has won for himself a wide reputation. George Lynch-Staunton was born at Kingston, Ont., fifty-five years ago, received his education at St. Mary's College, Montreal, and the Upper Canada College, and was then called to the Bar. He is a bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada and one of the leaders of the Bar, having won especial distinction in criminal cases. He practices both in Toronto and Hamilton. He is a member of the public library board of Hamilton and Fort William Navigation Co. He was presented to the late King Edward in June, 1905. Mr. Lynch-Staunton is a Roman Catholic and one of the Grand Trustees of the C.M.B.A.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Silk Hat Caused Riot.

On Jan. 15, 1797, when John Hetherington emerged from his London haberdashery shop in the Strand wearing a silk hat, he was surrounded by a mob of such proportions that he was arrested and charged before the Lord Mayor with inciting a riot. The constable who arrested him testified that "Hetherington appeared upon the public highway wearing a tall structure, which he called a silk hat, having a shiny lustre, and calculated to frighten timid people. Several women fainted, children screamed, dogs yelped and a young son of Cordwainer Thomas was thrown down by the crowd and broke his right arm." The defendant pleaded that, as an Englishman, he was free to wear any hat he chose, but, nevertheless, was bound over in $2,500 to keep the peace.

Forgery In the Old Days.

It was not until 1832 that the death penalty in England for forgery was replaced by transportation, though even then an exception was made in the case of forging or altering a will. This exception was not removed from the statute book until 1837. In the days of good Queen Bess a forger of deeds was very severely dealt with. He had to stand in the pillory; his ears were cut off; his nose slit, and he was branded with hot irons. If he survived these ordeals he was doomed to imprisonment for the rest of his days, and everything he possessed in the world was forfeited to the crown. Surely death would have been far more merciful.

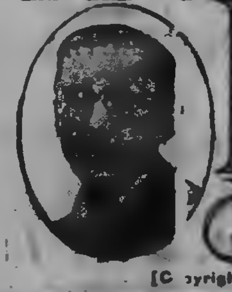
A SPLENDID HAZARD



By HAROLD MacGRATH

[Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company.]

She dropped her arms and turned. The tone agitated and alarmed her strangely. "Why, yes. With plenty of money you could devote all your time to writing, and I am sure you would write splendid stories."

"That was not my exact thought," he replied, resolutely pulling himself together. "But it will serve." By George, he thought, that was close enough.

She did not ask him what his exact thought was, but she suspected it. There was a little shock of pleasure and disappointment, the one rising from the fact that he had stopped where he did and the other that he had not gone on. And she grew angry over his second expression. She liked him. She had never met a young man whom she liked more. But liking is never loving, and her heart was as free and unburdened as the wind.

• • • • • • •

One day they dropped anchor in the sapphire bay of Funchal, in the summer calm, hot and glaring—Funchal, with its dense tropical growth, its cloud wreathed mountains, its amethystine sisters in the faded southeast. And for two days while Captain Flanagan recoaled they played like children, jolting round in the low bullock carts, climbing the mountains or bumping down the corduroy road. It was the strangest treasure hunt that ever left a home port. It was more like a page out of a boy's frolic than a sober quest by grownups. That danger, menace and death hid in covert would have appealed to them (those who knew) as ridiculous, impossible, obsolete. The story of cutlass and pistol and high boots had been molding in archives these eighty odd years. Dangers? From whom? From what direction? No one suggested the possibility, even in jest, and the only man who could have advanced with reasonable assurance that danger, real and serious, existed was too busy apparently with his butterfly net. Still, he had not yet been consulted. He was not supposed to know that this cruise was weighted with something more than pleasure.

Fitzgerald waited with an impatience which often choked him. A secret agent had not so adroitly joined this expedition for the pleasure of seeing a treasure dug up from some re-instant grave. What was he after? If indeed Breitmann was directly concerned, if he knew of the treasure's existence, of what benefit now would be his knowledge? A share in the finding at most. And was Breitmann one who was conditioned of such easy stuff that he would rather be sure and share than to strike out for all the treasure and all the risks? The more he gave his thought to Breitmann the more that gentleman retreated into the fog, as it were. On several occasions he had noticed signs of a preoccupation, of suppressed excitement, of silence and moroseness. Fitzgerald could join certain squares of the puzzle, but this led forward scarce a step. Breitmann had entered the employ of the admiral for the very purpose for which M. Ferraud had journeyed sundrily into the cellar and beaten futilely on the chimney. It resolved to one thing, and that was the secretary had arrived too late. He was sure that Breitmann had no suspicion regarding M. Ferraud. But for a casual glance at the little man's hands neither would he have had any. He determined to prod M. Ferraud. He was well trained in repression. So, while he often lost patience, there was never any external sign of it. Besides, there was another affair which overshadowed it and at times engulfed it.

Love. The crosstides of sense and sentiment made a pretty disturbance. And, still further, there was another countertide. Love does not necessarily make a young man keen sighted, but it generally highly develops his talent for suspicion. By subtle gradations Breitmann had shifted in Fitzgerald's mind from a possible friend to a probable rival. Breitmann did not now court his society when the smoking bouts came round or when the steward brought the whisky and soda after the ladies had retired. Breitmann was moody, and whatever variance his moods had they retained the gray tone. This Fitzgerald saw and dilated upon, and it rankled when he thought that this hypocritical adventurer had rights, level and equal to his, always supposing he had any.

In this state of mind he drooped idly over the rail as the yacht drew out of the bay the evening of the second day.

"Well, my boy," said Cathewe, lounging affectionately against Fitzgerald, "here we are, rolled over again."

"What?"

Cathewe described a circle with his finger lazily.

"Oh!" said Fitzgerald, listless. "Another day more or less crowded into the past doesn't matter."

"Maybe. If we could only have the full days and deposit the others and draw as we need them, but we can't do it. And yet each day means something. There ought always to be a little of it worth remembering."

"Old parson!" cried Fitzgerald with a jab of his elbow.

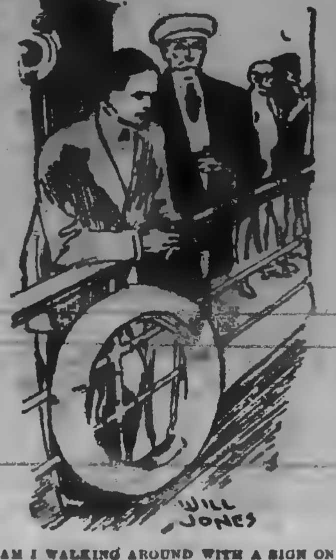
"All bally rot, eh? I wish I could look at it that way. Yet when a man mopes as you are doing, when this sunset"—

"New one every day."

"What's the difficulty, Jack?"

"Am I walking around with a sign on my back?" testily.

"Of a kind, yes."



"AM I WALKING AROUND WITH A SIGN ON MY BACK?"

"Suppose," said Fitzgerald in a low voice, "suppose"— But he couldn't go on.

"Yes, suppose," said Cathewe, taking up the broken thread, "suppose there was a person who had a heap of money or will have some day, and suppose there's another person who has but little and may have less in days to come. Is that the supposition, Jack?"

"That's the supposition."

"Well, money counts only when you buy horses and yachts and houses. It never really matters in anything else."

"It is easy to say that."

"It is also easy to learn that it is true."

"Isn't there a good deal of buying these days where there should be giving?"

"Not among real people. You have had enough experience with both types to be competent to distinguish the one from the other. You have birth and brains and industry. You're a decent sort of chap besides," genially. "Can money buy these things when grounded on self respect as they are in you? Come along now, for the admiral sent me after you."

When one has journeyed for days on the unquiet sea, a touch of land underfoot renews, Antaeuswise, one's strength and mental activity, so a festive spirit presided at the dinner table. The admiral determined to vault the enforced repression of his secret. Inasmuch as it must be told, the present seemed a propitious moment. He signed for the attendants to leave the salon and then rapped on the table for silence. He obtained it easily enough.

"My friends," he began, "where do you think this boat is really going?"

"Marseilles," answered Coldfield.

"Where else?" cried M. Ferraud, as if diversion from that course was something of an improbability.

"Corsica. We can leave you at Marseilles, M. Ferraud, if you wish, but I advise you to remain with us. It will be something to tell in your old age."

Cathewe glanced across to Fitzgerald as if to ask: "Do you know anything about this?" Fitzgerald, catching the sense of this mute inquiry, nodded affirmatively.

"Corsica is a beautiful place," said Hildegarde. "I spent a spring in Ajaccio."

"Well, that is our port," confessed the admiral, laying his precious documents on the table. "The fact is, we are going to dig up a treasure," with a flourish.

Laughter and incredulous exclamations followed this statement.

"Just a moment," the admiral requested patiently. "I know it smells fishy. Laura, go ahead and read the documents to the unbelievers. Mr. Fitzgerald knows and so does Mr. Breitmann."

Laura unfolded the story, and when she came to the end the excitement was hot and Babylonic. Napoleon! What a word! A treasure put together to rescue him from St. Helena! Gold—French gold, English gold, Spanish and Austrian gold—all mildewing in a rotting chest somewhere back of Ajaccio. It was unbelievable, fantastic as one of those cinematograph pictures, running backward.

"But what are you going to do with it when you find it?"

"Findings is keepings," quoted the admiral.

"Perhaps divide it, perhaps turn it over to France, providing France agrees to use it for charitable purposes."

"A fine plan, is it not, Mr. Breitmann?" said M. Ferraud.

"Findings is keepings," repeated Breitmann with a pale smile.

The eyes of Hildegarde von Mitter burned and burned. Could she but read what lay behind that impassive face! And he took it all with a smile. What would he do? What would he do now?" kept recurring in her mind. She knew the man, or at least she thought she did, and she was aware that there existed in his soul dark caverns which she had never dared to explore. Yes, what would he do now? How would he put his hand upon this gold? She trembled with apprehension.

And later, when she found the courage to put the question boldly, he answered with a laugh so low and yet so wild with fury that she drew away from him in dumb terror.

CHAPTER XV.

BREITMANN MAKES HIS FIRST BLUNDER.

THE secretary nerved himself and waited, and yet he knew what her reply would be even before she framed it.

"Mr. Breitmann, I am sorry. I never dreamed of this." Nor had she. She had forgotten Europeans seldom understand the American girl as she is or believe that the natural buoyancy of spirit is as free from purpose or intent as the play of a child. But in this moment she remembered her little and perfectly inconsequent attentions toward this man, and, seeing them from this viewpoint, she readily forgave him. Abroad she was always on guard, but here among her own compatriots who accepted her as she was she had excusably forgotten. "I am sorry if you have misunderstood me in any way."

"I could no more help loving you than that those stars should cease to shine tonight," his voice heavy with emotion.

"I am sorry," she could only repeat. Men had spoken to her like this before, and always had the speech been new to her, and always had a great and tender pity charged her heart. And perhaps her pity for this one was greater than any she had previously known. He seemed so lonely.

"Sorry, sorry! Does that mean there is no hope?"

"None, Mr. Breitmann; none."

"Is there another?" his throat wailing. But before she could answer: "Pardon me. I did not mean that. I have no right to ask such a question."

"And I should not have answered it to any but my father, Mr. Breitmann." She extended her hand. "Let us forget that you have spoken. I should like you for a friend."

Without a word he took the hand and kissed it. He made no effort to hold it, and it slipped from his clasp easily.

"Good night."

"Good night." And he never lost sight of her till she entered the salon cabin. He saw a star fall out of nothing into nothing. She was sorry! The moment brewed a thousand wild suggestions. To abduct her, to carry her away into the mountains, to cast his dream to the four winds, to take her in spite of herself. He laid his hand on the teak railing, wondering at the sudden racking pain, a pain which unlinked coherent thought and left his mind stagnant and inert. For the first time he realized that his pain was a recurrence of former similar ones. Why? He did not know. He only remembered that he had had the pain at the back of his head and that it was generally followed by a burning fury, a rage to rend and destroy things. What was the matter?

To have humbled himself thus before this American girl and to be snubbed for his pains! But, patience! Two million francs and his friends awaiting the word from him. She was sorry! He laughed, and the laughter was not unlike that which a few nights gone had startled the ears of the other woman to whom he had once appealed in passionate tones and not without success.

"Karl!"

The sight of Hildegarde at this moment neither angered nor pleased him. He permitted her hand to lay upon his arm.

"My head aches," he said, as if replying to the unspoken question in her eyes.

"Karl, why not give it up?" she pleaded.

"Give it up? What, when I have come this far, when I have gone through what I have? Oh, no! Do not think so little of me as that."

"But it is a dream!"

He shook off her hand angrily. "If there is to be any reckoning I shall pay, never fear. But it will not, shall not fail!"

She would have liked to weep for him. "I would gladly give you my eyes, Karl, if you might see it all as I see it. Ruin, ruin! Can you touch this money without violence? Ah, my God, what has blinded you to the real issues?"

"I have not asked you to share the difficulties."

"No; you have not been that kind to me."

Tonight there were no places in his armor for any sentiment but his own. "I want nothing but revenge."

"I think I can read," her own bitterness getting the better of her tongue. "Miss Killigrew has declined."

"You have been listening?" with a snarl.

"It has not been necessary to listen. I need only to watch."

"Well, what is it to you?"

"Take care, Karl! You cannot talk to me like that."

"Don't drive me, then. Oh," with a sudden turn of mind, "I am sorry that you cannot understand."

"If I hadn't I should never have given you my promise not to speak. There was a time when you had right on your side, but that time ceased to be when you lied to me. How little you understood me! Had you spoken frankly and generously at the start, God knows I shouldn't have refused you. But you set out to walk over my heart to get that miserable slip of paper. Ah, had I but known! I say to you you will fall utterly and miserably. You are either blind or mad."

Without a word in reply to this prophecy he turned and left her, and as soon as he had vanished she kissed the spot on the rail where his hand had rested and laid her own there.

• • • • • • • •

"Now there," began Fitzgerald, taking M. Ferraud firmly by the sleeve. "I have come to the end of my patience. What has Breitmann to do with all this business?"

"Ah, Mr. Fitzgerald! This Breitmann is what you call 'poor devil,' is it not? At dinner tonight I shall tell a story, at once marvelous, past belief and pathetic. I shall tell this story against my best convictions because I wish him no harm, because I should like to save him from black ruin. But attend me. My efforts shall be as wind blowing upon stone, and I shall not save him. An alienist could tell you better than I can. Listen! You have watched him, have you not? To you he seems like any other man. Yes, keen witted, gifted, a bit of a musician, a good deal of a scholar. Well, had I found that paper first there would have been no treasure hunt. I should have torn it into one thousand pieces. I should have saved him in spite of himself and have done my duty also. He is mad, mad as a whirlwind, as a tempest, as a fire, as a sandstorm."

"About what?"

"Tonight! Tonight!"

And the wiry little man released himself and bustled away to his chair, where he became buried in rugs and magazines.

• • • • • • •

"Corsica tomorrow," said the admiral.

"Napoleon," said Laura.

"Romance," said Cathewe.

"Treasures," said M. Ferraud.

Hildegarde felt uneasy. Breitmann toyed with the bread crumbs. He was inattentive besides.

"Napoleon. There is an old scandal," mused M. Ferraud. "I don't think that any of you have heard it."

"That will interest me," Fitzgerald cried. "Tell it."

"I say to you at once that the tale is known to few and has never had any publicity and must never have any. Remember that, if you please, Mr. Fitzgerald, and you also, Mr. Breitmann."

"I beg your pardon," said Breitmann. "I was not listening."

M. Ferraud repeated his request clearly.

"I am no longer a newspaper writer," Breitmann affirmed, clearing the fog out of his head. "A story about Napoleon. Will it be true?"

To be continued.

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. Peoria, Ill.—"I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night.

"After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured.

"You may publish this if you wish."—Miss CLARA L. GAUWITZ, R.R. No. 4, Box 62, Peoria, Ill.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

WINTER RESORT STYLES

because fashion has so long rms and shoulders, even though een done by transparent materials, the reversal of this vogue startles tiated observer.

arm and shoulder is the last physical charm to fade, this new fashion is equally attractive for d old. Long gloves must necessarily return to replace sleeves. Despite the fact that some of the social leaders, both abroad and here, have followed the fad of gloveless hands and arms with evening apparel both last winter and this, it has yet to become a general fashion, as it has met with much vigorous criticism.

Beyond the peculiar detail that evening gowns lack sleeves there is but little similarity among them. Corsages are usually cut very low and V shaped, but the manner of composing the corsage to get this effect varies. A square cut to the low necked gown is newer even than a décolleté in point. These two are sometimes combined in one gown, pointed in front and square in the back, or square in front, with a point descending in the back almost or to the waist line.

Over the arms in lieu of sleeves fall odd little arm ruffles that might seem at first glance to be shoulder ruffles that had become displaced and slipped down over the arms. Or shoulder ruffles and bretelles are arranged far enough over the shoulder so that they hang a bit over the arm.

One Paris model, a green velvet evening gown, has a most extraordinary corsage. It really has no upper part at all, the lower corsage being held on by several rhinestone strands over each shoulder. Of black tulle over pale pink chiffon, this swathing of the belt seems little more than a wide girdle; it is edged with black lace and adorned with a passementerie band of gold lace studded with glistening colored stones. Narrow black tulle ruffles, headed with strass make soft little arm bracelets. Over the dark green velvet skirt falls a short tunic of black tulle that is an extension of this mentio corsage, held on by a cut jet belt. Edged with skunk fur, the skirt is draped upward and forward; this makes it fall in long folds, to ankle depth only, in front.

Another of these new sleeveless evening gowns, of rose pink satin, has an original disposition of black tulle. This veils the entire corsage and descends below the belt in tunic form, in front only, where it forms a puff that fits in the space between the girdle and the upper of the two curved lace flounces of the skirt. At the back a long tenuous scarf of the black tulle hangs in a festoon from one shoulder to the other, dropping in the centre below the skirt hem and weighted by a heavy silk ornament that is slipped over it. In front another silk ornament catches up the skirt drapery just above the slash, the end dropping a bit below the lower lace ruffle. Under the slash a fine lace ruffle is discerned, veiling the ankles.

One very artistic white satin gown with the décolleté pointed in front surprises by its square cut in the back. The sleeveless tunic is crossed by a wide draped sash, that lengthens the waist line by its peculiar placing below it. Bright green [illegible] figures are embroidered on this girdle, and a green and black thistle of extra large size gives a special color note to this gown. Skirt train and tunic edge both take the same direction, curving downward in the [illegible] movement of the garment to a point in the back. In front the skirt slash is cut away in a rounding curve, so that, unless one of the new lace underskirts is worn with it, the ankles show more than in an ordinary slash.

Blue Velvet Hat.

A hat for those who lean toward the [illegible] velvet, with a soft crown and [illegible] drooping brim. It is very simply trimmed, with a [illegible] velvet bow posed on the [illegible] and has a band of skunk fur [illegible] it is noticeable [illegible] is brought over the forehead, [illegible] the eyebrows and pulled [illegible] over the cheeks. With these [illegible] placing of the jeweled [illegible] in the bow knot [illegible] an important detail. One [illegible] each side of the knot.

The New Blouse.

A [illegible] example of the contrasting corsage is one with an evequie violet satin blouse combined with a black satin skirt.

The black of the skirt is repeated in the corsage at the elbows by an inset band in the velvet belt and in the crossed velvet ribbon in front. The vest is of white satin, as is the collar with a point in the back, the last feature in waists. Little black buttons and buttonholes trim the little coat-tail additions below the belt. The corsage is kimono shaped.

Fur edges the lapels. The vest is finished with tiny silk buttons and a new kind of simulated buttonhole, like that used on the back. The sleeves reach over the hand considerably.

THE POET'S TROUBLES.

The crescent moon hangs o'er the sleeping town,
A shred of cloud caught on her lower cusp.
Through filmy mist her tenuous rays come down,
And— (No rime for "cusp." Have to start again.)

Sickly the moonlight shines upon the plain,
Dim, like a half wornout electric bulb.
Heaven's eyes are full of unshed tears of rain,
And— (This is a fool language anyhow.)

The changing moon would fain avoid the task
Of ushering in a sad autumnal month.
She hides her face behind a cloudy mask.
And— (This is one of the delights of being a poet.)

The moon's aweary of the deeds she doth—
Weakly she shines on heaps of dust and culm.
And - (Good night!)
—Ted Robinson in Judge.

The Confession.

Ida Black had retired from the most select colored circles for a brief space on account of a slight difficulty connected with a gentleman's poultry yard. Her mother was being consoled by a white friend.

"Why, Aunt Esther, I was mighty sorry to hear about Ida"—

"Marse John, Ida ain't nuvver tuk dem chickens. Ida wouldn't do such a thing! Ida wouldn't demeange herse'f to rob nobody's hen roost—and, any way, the old chickens warn't nothing 't all but feathers when we picked 'em."—Lippincott's.

An Old Saw.

The attorney entered the condemned man's cell.

"Prepare yourself for some good news," he said. "That is, if you consider it good news—some would not. Your sentence has been commuted from hanging to life imprisonment."

The prisoner took it philosophically.

"Well," he said, "the old proverb says that 'no noose is good news.'"

This is what caused the governor to reconsider his clemency.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hopeful.

"How do you like your new cook?"

"Very much," replied Mr. Crosslots. "She is very kind and obliging, and I think that if I get some new talking machine records and teach her how to run the automobile she'll stay quite awhile."—Washington Star.

Motherly Old Hen.

The contention that the hen is the most compassionate thing in creation is strikingly illustrated by a case of motherhood in nature related in Country Life. A correspondent tells how in a farmyard were two puppies, for whom the mother had no affection; so an old hen took pity on them, and when she went to roost they followed her. Squatting in a corner of a cart-shed she lifted a wing and the two youngster crawled under for the night, her chicks slumbering on the backs o the puppies.

STILL A MYSTERY.

Mother City of Chichen Itza In Yucatan Probably Built by Toltecs.

"Just who were the builders of those ancient cities whose ruins are now strewn over the surface of Yucatan," says Edward H. Thompson, the well-known archaeologist, "is as much a question to-day as it was in the days of Von Humboldt and Brasseur de Bourbourg.

"Whether the ancestors of these ancient builders, with their undecipherable glyphs, their ornaments and tools of jade, came from Asia by way of the Behring Strait, were broken branches of a lost Atlantic stem, or grew up by actual evolution from purely indigenous roots, we may not know, but we do know that in ancient times—ancient even as science now interprets the word—civilized races were born in the Americas; that these races lived out their days and then sank back into he dust whence they came, leaving faint traces of their having been to mock our ignorance. No one wise in the knowledge of these things even thinks to name, much less to fix by time, the origin of these most ancient, long-forgotten and temple-building races of America.

"The last of these earlier races was the one from whose fast dying fires the Aztecs and allied people kindled the fierce flames of their civilization. This earlier race—call it Toltec, if you will—probably was the one that built the now ruined cities of Yucatan of which Chichen Itza was the great mother city.

"Altogether eight structures still rear their sculptured walls in Chichen Itza, while hundreds of other buildings lie prostrate, their carved walls but hopeless heaps of stone, lime and fallen columns. The greatest structure of this city, which was probably the most important in all the area influenced by that distinctively American civilization which students now call Maya, was its great pyramid temple, with its four broad stairways and nine parallel terraces, which rises from the midst of an artificial plain and looms against the sky in massive grandeur.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Stiff Joints.

People who have stiff joints resulting from rheumatism, arthritis, etc., should be encouraged to practice passive use until they can be brought into active service. Massage greatly helps to restore functions and hasten absorption and elimination of diseased products which have been left in the wake of rheumatism, etc. It not only does this, but it gives tone to the muscles. Where it is desired to employ exercise for the restoration of the function of an arm, a hand or a limb a well defined plan of exercise procedure should be followed. The exercise treatment of one extremity or joint does not materially differ from that to be employed in treating another. When doing exercise one should do his best to accomplish something. Where a hand or wrist, for instance, is crippled as the result of arthritis effort should be made each day to make it a little more useful. Try to move each finger just a trifle more each day. Use gripping exercises and note the increased strength and mobility. In the beginning these efforts will present many discouragements, but by persistent application and effort better use of the part affected will be your ultimate reward.

Brevity.

"Too many words are wearisome," said Kwoter. "Brevity is the soul of wit."

"Not always," replied the observer. "But in any event it is always commendable."

German Army Autos.

The German army has 825 subsidized road trains. These are powerful automobiles pulling several cars.

The Making of a Song.

"I understand you have taken to song writing."

"Yes," replied the versatile man. "I'm told that there is a demand for something in accord with the tendency of the time; something simple and homely that shows the dominant force of the feminine nature, and which nevertheless depicts woman as claiming deep devotion."

"Have you done anything in those lines?"

"Yes; I have the finish of the chorus. It is as follows:

" 'She hit me with a fence rail, but I love her just the same'."

Ivory Knife Handles.

All ivory knife handles are apt to become discolored and to go a slight yellowy color after long use and exposure to the air. The first thing to be done to restore the color is to scrape the handle with a sharp steel scraper. The scraper should be sharpened by holding it in a vertical position and rubbing it on an oil stone until a wire edge comes on. Scrape the handle until quite white and all signs of discoloration have disappeared and then rub with No. 0 sandpaper until all scratches become invisible.

NTING WITH CAMERA

SPORT QUITE AS EXCITING AS EVER OLD WAS.

nals Are Now Snapshotted In Their Native Haunts and the Photographer's Risks Are Immense—Two Englishmen Have Been Doing Lions and Lionesses in the African Jungles.

ch diverse subjects as children wild animals provide some strik illustrations of the wonderful de pment of modern photography. ne are the days when a photo her tells a youngster to laugh look happy, in order to secure od picture," says a London photo pher. "A child in its normal con n of high spirits, and even htiness, is better for my purpose any amount of goodness faked or the occasion," while animals no longer snapshotted at the Zoo, strong iron bars to protect the ers and operator, but in their na haunts, and are even made to ograph themselves.

ameras are set instead of traps, the ingenuity of the hunter of e with the camera is illustrated he manner in which pictures were of some wild deer. An old weathered box was placed on a log, little clearing, baited with cab leaves and turnips. It was left the deer fed around it without icion. A hole was then cut in the and the camera placed within it, ring from the flashlight stretch across the feeding place. When came to feed, the deer trod on string and several unique photo phs were the immediate result.

ut this was tame business com d with the daring photographic of Mr. Cherry Kearton and Mr. rt Wyndham. The latter returned his country a short time ago with ollection of photographs show African lions and lionesses in native haunts. On one occasion ounded lioness sought refuge in a ket. Ultimately Mr. Wyndham his companion—the latter armed a gun—came up with the nded beast, who with a savage turned on the operator. "She med about to spring," says Mr. ndham, "as my companion shot standing at five yards, clean be n the eyes. The camera clicked he same instant, and at about the distance. The animal, which dead at our feet, proved a uty, measuring from nose tip to tip eight feet 11 1-2 inches."

How he took cinematograph pic of a lion is thus graphically de bed by that intrepid photograph Mr. Cherry Kearton, whose pic of wild life in the Indian jun and the swamps of Borneo have ved such an attractive feature of the music halls. Mr. Kearton on occasion photographed a lion at een yards after the natives, by om he was accompanied, had given a running fight for about half a le. The animal charged into some shes, and thinking it would make short cut Mr. Kearton dashed after with his camera.

"I looked into the bush," he says, nd saw the lion's tail rolling round. llowing up the tail, I became con ous of two great eyes and a mouth de open, revealing a terrible set of th. The animal was growling rcely, and I came to the conclusion at I must look it straight in the e and not flinch. I did so for sev seconds, and backed with my mera. After several seconds of onizing suspense, on glancing out the corner of my eye, I was over yed to see the natives charging with eir spears. The lion at that mo ent sprang out, but was knocked wn within four yards of me. It rang up again, however, and laid t four men. The fact that one of y men threw a spear clean through e lion's body and through the arm a man the lion had pinned down ill show you with what force the tive can throw this weapon."

In one respect, at any rate, the otographing of wild animals might compared with the photographing children, for in each case strategy required. "The best results," says e of the most successful photo raphers of children in the London are obtained when the youngsters allowed to run about the studios if it were their own nursery, en tained with games and toys, the that they are to be photographed ing carefully concealed. Immedi tely a child notices that its photo ph is to be taken it puts on a ained, unnatural expression which ults in a bad likeness.

"Again, the most delightful and cturesque photographs of children obtained when the youngsters are essed in any old garments. The otographer of to-day is well aware at elaborately-dressed children sel om make a good picture. Usually hildren come to the studio in stiff d starched dresses. These I pro to shed by degrees, as various are suggested, and often the t photograph in the case of tiny is nature unadorned. I prefer almost any dress or the absence of it to what is known as 'the Sunday best'."

That's the Reason!

"I cannot understand why my second husband is so fastidious," confessed a woman to her bosom friend. "He scarcely eats anything. My first husband, who died, used to eat everything I cooked for him."

"Did you tell your present husband that?"

"Yes."

Unchanging Man.

Mortal man offers but little difference in spite of the diversity of race and climate, and in analyzing the Egyptian we almost find ourselves reproduced. Intellectual man also manifests a singular identity of aspiration and belief from the Nile to the Ganges and from the Eurotas to the Arno.—Mercure de France.

In the Evening Shadow.

Silver Glitter of the Sardines.

The decline of the sardine packing industry in Brittany will in time reduce the world's available beauty. A sardine factory is not a particularly beautiful object, but a sardine boat certainly is, and to see the sardine fleet coming in the brave little port of Le Croisic over the tumbling waters of the bay was a sheer delight. Hardly less beautiful are the boats in port when the fine sardine nets, of an almost ethereal blue, flutter from the masts to dry. And a boat with a cargo of sardines is as delightful to the eye as a cargo of herrings. You don't think about death in that silver glitter..

Magnetic Locks.

Magnetic locks, which have no keyholes and no keys, but can be opened when taken to a special electric magnet, are the modern solution of the problem of safety lamps for coal miners. With these lamps a miner cannot tamper when he is below ground, and so there is no possibility of gas coming in contact with the fire of an open lamp in the mine. The magnet to open the lock is kept above ground, of course. Not only are the locks controlled by electricity, but the wicks are lighted by an electric spark applied above ground by a current of electricity before the miner goes to work.

Ladies and Cricket.

Ladies' cricket matches were not uncommon in the eighteenth century and were apparently highly popular. In 1747 a game between the Maids of Charlton and the Maids of Singleton on the artillery ground, London, attracted "the greatest number of spectators ever seen at any publick diversion." In fact, the finish of the game had to be postponed owing to the breaking in of "the company" whereby "some of the players were very much frightened." In 1768, too, at Upham, in Wilts, eleven married played eleven single women for a plum cake and a barrel of ale. The cake and ale went to those who lacked husbands.—London Chronicle.

An Inexpensive Son-in-Law.

The old gentleman showed a good deal of displeasure. "It seems to me," he exclaimed testily, "rather presumptuous for a youth in your position to ask for my daughter's hand. Can you advance any good reason why I should give my consent?"

"Certainly, sir!" promptly replied the suitor.

"What?" pressed the old man.

"I am comparatively modest and economical in my personal expenditure," replied the suitor, "and I think, sir, that altogether you will find me less costly to maintain than almost any other son-in-law you could select."

Lightning and Thunder.

By counting the number of seconds in the interval between lightning and thunder it is possible to figure approximately how far from the observer is the scene of the storm. Sound travels 1,100 feet a second. Multiply the number of seconds by 1,100 and it will give the distance in feet from the point where the lightning flashed. For example, if ten seconds have elapsed the distance away will be 11,000 feet, or a little over two miles. It might be added that, as light and lightning travel so much faster than sound, if a man survives after hearing the crashing peal he can be sure he is safe. Remembrance of this will dissipate terror

Duel by Avalanche.

A curious duel by avalanche is reported from Courmayeur, on the Italian side of Mont Blanc. The young men, one a guide, who were in love with an Italian girl named Altino, quarrelled, and decided that one of them should depart from this world.

They chose a novel method. As there were many avalanches they agreed to stand in turn for several hours in the most exposed places. Eventually the young guide was swept away by an avalanche over 100 feet in area, but was only injured. The rivals will be obliged to use other means for deciding their contest for the girl's affections.

Lion and Unicorn.

The animosity which was supposed to exist between the lion and the unicorn, as referred to by Spenser in his "Faerie Queene," is allegorical of the deep-rooted ill will which anciently existed between England and Scotland. Ever since 1603 the royal arms have been supported, as now, by the English lion and the Scottish unicorn in token of the fact that St. George and St. Andrew had at last shaken hands and forgotten their old difference.—Westminster Gazette.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

EAST WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am again a candidate for Alderman in No. 5 Ward and respectfully solicit your support on my record in Council.

I have served you for the past 3 years as Alderman and in that time I have gained a knowledge of city affairs, city finances and the problems now before the Council, which fits me to deal with them in a capable and intelligent manner.

I have given close attention to my duties and have carefully looked after the interests of the East Ward in particular and the city as a whole.

I trust my services in the past meet with your approval and if so I ask your hearty support.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

J. C. ANDERSON

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

NORTH WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

When casting your ballot on Monday I would ask you all to consider the results of last year's work of the council—a tax rate of 25 mills, and the Hydro tangle, which must be straightened out.

If you elect me as your representative, I will do all in my power to at least prevent a further increase in the rate and if possible, to reduce it and to assist in bringing about a speedy and satisfactory settlement of the Hydro trouble.

I am strongly in favor of the Hydro system, controlled absolutely by the city, and until this matter is settled, I am not in favor of the other expenditure for the new bridge and chemical engine.

I will keep the welfare of our ward constantly in mind and will see that we in the north, get our just due.

Wishing you all the compliments of the season, I remain,

Your Servant,
W. T. HOLLOWAY

ACTIVITIES ARE GROWING.

Canada's Trade and Immigration Show a Big Increase.

In spite of the world-wide depression of which Canada is getting her share, or perhaps a little less, the year has been a record one in almost every department of the national life.

That this is Canada's century is shown by the marvellous growth in the volume of trade. Figures just compiled for the twelve months ending Oct. 1 show that the total trade of Canada was $1,113,997,253. This is an increase for the corresponding period of 1910, only four years ago, of nearly four hundred million dollars.

Of this enormous total $688,292,457 was imports, and $425,704,796 exports, so that the balance of trade is still greatly against Canada, though the past year has seen a large increase in exports as against imports. Our exports in manufactures are particularly growing, increasing from $39,047,906 in 1912 to $50,280,990 in 1913.

For the eight months of the present fiscal year, ending November last, the exports of agricultural produce easily take the lead. During this period domestic agricultural exports were $142,338,000; for the corresponding eight months of the last fiscal year, domestic agricultural exports were $96,349,000. During the eight months of the present fiscal year the exports of domestic animals and their produce was $38,834,000, compared with $33,949,000 for the corresponding period of 1912. The fisheries were never in a more flourishing condition. For the eight months of the present fiscal year Canada exported of domestic fish $13,556,000, compared with $10,499,000 for the corresponding eight months of 1912.

In many instances the rapid growth of the country has required that any former surplus stock should be sold at home. The cattle export trade is steadily decreasing. In 1905, 1,000,000 head of cattle were sent out; in 1912, the figure had dropped to less than one-twentieth with 49,000 exported, while in 1913 it was much lower.

The influx of new citizens into the Dominion has gone ahead by leaps and bounds. The total immigration to Canada during the first eight months, April to November, of the present fiscal year was 340,399; made up of 132,461 British, 86,272 American and 122,166 from all other countries.

During the eight corresponding months of the last fiscal year the total number was 321,058, composed of 124,813 British, 108,035 American and 88,210 from all other countries. The increase is six per cent.

With these two factors of increased population and smaller supply of necessities the natural result has been the now dominant problem of the high cost of living. The index at Ottawa, where statistics are kept, is creeping up. In October the tell-tale pointer stood at 136.8. At the end of November it read 138.4. The increase was due to the advance in the prices of grains and fodder, beef, sheep, dairy products, (especially eggs), and fresh vegetables. These increases, however, were somewhat offset by declines in flour, glucose, honey, raw cotton and silk, coke iron, pipe, linseed oil, resin and raw rubber.

The level was higher than a year ago in animals and meats, dairy products, textiles, hides, leathers, boots and shoes, lumber, miscellaneous building materials, furniture and crockery. A lower level than last year appeared in grains and fodders, fish and paints and oils. Fruits and vegetables were slightly higher, but miscellaneous groceries were somewhat lower than last year.

The feature of the month in retail prices was the advance in eggs, but the movement was also upward in butter, potatoes, coal, milk and prunes. Beef, veal and mutton advanced in some localities, but fresh pork and lard declined in a number of Canadian cities.

Mozart's Requiem Manuscript.

The Imperial library in Vienna preserves among its most valuable treasures the original manuscript of Mozart's famous "Requiem" that was finished by his pupil Sussmayr, who penetrated so perfectly into the spirit of the master that the controversy as to which part is by him and which by Mozart is not yet settled.

The Artful Widow.

Mother—Tom, my dear boy, how could you go and get engaged to that young widow without my consent?

Tom—Don't know, mother. I guess I did it without my own consent too.

Riches.

It is not what we have, but what we can do without, that makes us rich. Socrates, seeing a large load of valuables pass one day, exclaimed, "I am most happy, for there are so many things that I do not want!"

The Glass Snake.

The slowworm is the snake which country people tell you has the peculiar poverty of breaking itself into bits, each piece afterward surviving. The truth differs slightly from the legend. The slowworm is a timid creature and when first captured tightens all its muscles, thus reducing itself to a remarkably rigid state, in which condition it will no doubt snap like a dry twig; but, needless to say, only the upper and vital portions survive the ordeal. — London Globe.

Not Far To Go.

The reporter hurried up to the scene of the accident. A workman engaged on some scaffolding had missed his footing and had fallen many feet into the street below. Then the reporter went off to interview the unfortunate man, who luckily had escaped with a very severe shaking and a few nasty bruises, and asked sympathetically:

"Did you have vertigo, my man?"

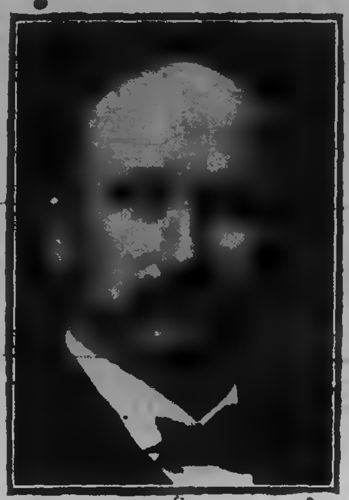
"Oh, no, sir; only thirty-five feet. Quite far enough for me, though."

"Kipper" and Red Herring.

The kipper is a split herring cured in smoke. The late Mr. John Woodger of Newcastle-on-Tyne and Yarmouth was the fortunate discoverer of this method of treating the herring. The process of producing the red herring is analogous to that of the bloater, the difference being in degree. The "red" variety is more thoroughly salted and smoke dried. The one advantage of this method lies in the preservative quality thereby developed.—Westminster Gazette.

Siberia Beats Pole.

Much lower temperatures have been noted in Siberia than those recorded by the Mawson expedition.



HYDRO-JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the North Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterboro, all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the city council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honor of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric System into the city, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of this confidence by again electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the people. Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your council of 1913, I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality, and being run in the interests of the people and not in the interests of a monopoly.

W. J. JOHNSTON.

TO THE RATEPAYERS

— OF —

Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Should not your Council for 1914 have your support, without reservation, on the city's light and power enterprise. It is to your interest.

Have your candidates pledged to this. Let no man in who, so far as you can judge, will trifle with the question or flirt with the opposition.

Get the candidate's assurance that he is right. If he isn't, leave him at home.

I am flatly and wholly in favor of the city's Hydro-Municipal operation as planned out. It will come out all right in the end, temporary blocking will not hinder the result.

Yours respectfully,
FRANK H. DOBBIN.

MR. GILLESPIE'S CONFIDENT APPEAL TO THE ELECTORS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address and my further public statements made on Nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions effecting the interests of the city, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

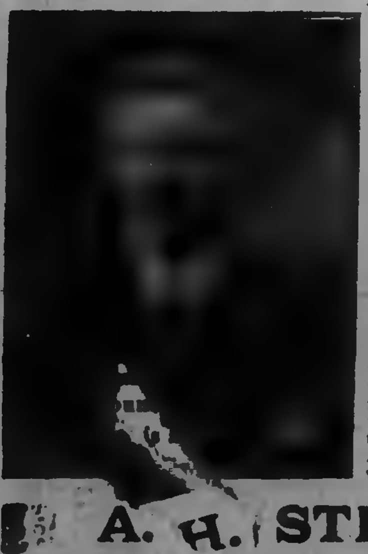
With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the city's affairs during the past five years as your alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous New Year,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

Business Management of City's Business

TO THE ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD



In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live go-ahead man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the low water marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufacturers and endeavor to bring in new industries. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favors it he is especially in favor of business-like management of the enterprise of seeing that the people who voted so, almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it, at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working men and find employment for them at good wages helps the business man and thereby helps to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. A Final Message from Robert Hicks

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your voluntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have sought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing city.

The valuation put upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the city should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my usefulness, and if I am favored with your confidence I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,
ROBERT HICKS.

ESTABLISHED 1879. PETERBOROUGH, ONT., SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1914. PRICE 2 CENTS

ALD. BULLER'S CLAIM FOR HIS ELECTION AS MAYOR

He Has Seen Seven Years' Service in Council and Has Given His Best Efforts

Electors of the City of Peterborough:—

I have served you in your City Council for seven years. Served you faithfully, earnestly, unsparingly — given of my time without stint, and in full measure. I went into the Council determined to do my duty to the ratepayers and I think I have done it. I base my claim for your vote on what I have done for you.

It is an honorable ambition for any man to aspire to the position of Mayor of your City. It is not presumptuous for me to do so. I have lived my life right here among you. Such business success as I have gained has been the result of hard and earnest work, and the best man to handle your business is one who has made a success of his own.

Here is a calendar of my place in your City Council since I entered your service.

First Year—I was there to learn what was required and how to accomplish it.

Second Year—Chairman Fire and Water and Light Committee.

Third Year—Chairman Power Committee.

Fourth and Fifth Years—Chairman Manufacturer's Committee.

Sixth and Seventh Years — Chairman of Board of Works Committee.

As Chairman of the Manufacturer's Committee I was identified with the work and endeavor that brought to us four fine industries, The Bonner-Worth Co., The DeLaval Co., The Henry Hope Co., and The Vermont Marble Co. The Bonner-Worth Co., have, since starting, doubled their capacity. The DeLaval Co. has expended double the capital promised to be expended, and greatly enlarged their premises. The other two industries are beginning manufacturing and will prove to be exceedingly helpful to our city's growth.

In the seven years of my service I have missed — and through unavoidable reasons only four meetings, so that I have been touch with everything going on in Council. Having served the city in many Chairmanships I feel I have such a grip of affairs as only comes from familiarity with actual work. I defy any man to point to any case in which public money has been mis-applied. I have done nothing but what any common-sense man would do were he in the Council.

The cry of economy is a misleading one. Anything that has been done in public works has been because necessary. Sewers, pavements and paving and such utilities have been built, laid and finished because they have been asked for, petitioned for in the usual way. We cannot have progress without expenditure. Modern conditions and modern progress demand these things, and even with what we have done the ratepayers are asking for more. If we stop these works we will effect some false economy. Repairs must be made. There is always upkeep to consider. Stop our municipal works and we will throw the workingman out of work, and thus deprive many ratepayers of an opportunity of earning a living.

In the past the City has executed public works by day labor, and I, where it is in the best interest of the people, will follow this course. It has given us good results in the past and will, I am sure, do so in the future.

The last two years of my aldermanic career found me officiating as Chairman of the biggest and most important of Council's Committees — the Board of Works—involving the expenditure of more personal time and labor than called for from any other member of the Council, excepting His Worship the Mayor. In this capacity, recognizing that the city's phenomenal growth demanded the management of this Committee's work in a most approved business-like manner, I inaugurated the new policy of meeting in business session regularly every Wednesday each week throughout the whole year, thereby assuring strict and systematic attention to the important work for which the Board of Works is responsible. By this means, and with the co-operation of my esteemed colleagues, the work of the city's biggest committee was carried out during the past two years in a manner gratifying to all concerned, and the needs of ratepayers promptly considered, irrespective of personality, class or creed.

As Chairman of the Board of Works, I agitated for and secured the beginning of street paving in this city—the only modern road construction for a modern city. The benefit of this work is apparent to all; it meets with general approval and will be continued next spring.

In coming before you, ladies and gentlemen, as a candidate for the position of Mayor, I offer myself as THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE, first,last and always, with an earnest determination if elected, to carry out the above policy in the fullest possible manner. I pledge myself to see to it that local conditions generally are maintained in the best interests of ALL CITIZENS ALIKE. As to Hydro-Electric, the system in Eastern Ontario is but in its early stages, and is naturally being keenly contested by financiers on every hand. This scheme means a vast deal to the comfort and welfare of the public, both industrially and at home. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary that Peterborough's Mayor should be in aggressive sympathy with the movement, and such sympathy has been and will in the future be found in

Yours truly,
WILLIAM H. BULLER.

WHAT I FAVOR AND WILL EARNESTLY WORK FOR

1—Cheap Hydro-Electric Power. This I have always advocated, and will do all in my power to bring about.

2—A Belt Line Street Railway and cheap transportation. Modern conditions and modern facilities for an up-to-date people. In this connection longer hours of street car service at the use of the public.

3—Revision of our assessments and publication of the roll that all ratepayers may be advised of the facts.

4—Rigid inspection of such functions as make for the public health and better living conditions for our people.

5—Fullest publicity of work of Council so that the electors may always know what is going on, notwithstanding the indifference of many who affect to take no interest in municipal affairs.

6—Seeing that citizens get what they pay for and pay only for what they get.

7—More ample supply of cheap water.

8—Pure ice, and plenty of it, that this necessity of life be served to the public clean and free from contaminating conditions.

9—A Woman Police Officer.

10—A local medical dispensary where those unable to pay can get free medical service, with nurse inspectress to help out conditions.

11—Looking into facilities for a free market to bring producer and consumer together to mutual advantage.

12—I am in favor of having the city governed by a commission, and if the ratepayers manifest a desire, will take steps to ascertain the facts and put before the people details of such a scheme.

POLICE WOMAN IS APPOINTED AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Ottawa's first policewoman was appointed to the force this morning. The new addition to the force is Miss Flora A. Campbell.

For some time Miss Campbell has been acting as a probation officer. She has been for some time superintendent of the Women's hostel, and has been connected with the Traveller's Aid Society.

Miss Campbell will be under the orders of the police department and will be stationed at the station. She will thus be prepared for anything that comes along, in a sense her duties will be similar to those of other policewomen.

WEDDING BELLS

JACKSON-HENRY

On New Year's Day the residence of Mr. C. Jackson, 75 St. Patrick St., Lindsay, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Lillian Henry was united in marriage to Mr. Jackson, by Rev. Mr. McMullen, pastor of Queen Street Church.

The bridesmaid was Miss E. Stenton, of Peterboro, and the groomsman Mr. Victor Henry, of Peterboro.

The groom's present to the bride was a mesh purse. The groomsman was presented with a gold stick pin and the bridamaid with a ruby and pearl brooch.

The presents were very numerous and costly, attesting to the popularity of bride and groom. They included a well filled purse from the parents of the bride. Some forty-five guests were present, including Mrs. W. J. Allen, of Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. H. Finley, of Peterboro, Mr. and Mrs. T. Lee and daughter.

WILL WE WALK OR HAVE TO SWIM ?

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—It is to be hoped that on Monday next the By-law will pass in favor of the Dalhousie street bridge. It is a want that has been felt for many years. There is a lot of land in Ashburnham close to the centre of the city, and also in close proximity to many of the manufactories, a part of the city where many would like to live had they a bridge to cross the river. Why should not Ashburnham be developed? She has always helped on the west side, not only by her vote, but also by her trade. Why are so many flocking into North Monaghan and paying their taxes there instead of to the city? Put a good bridge across the river from Dalhousie street, with extension piers, in preparation for the street railway in (we hope) the near future; then watch Ashburnham go ahead, and watch the taxes coming in, instead of going out, as they are doing at the present time. Vote for the Mayor and Aldermen who have the welfare of the city at heart, not men who are looking around to see how they can best advance themselves, and are so narrowminded and blind, that they cannot see what a big asset Ashburnham could be, and how quickly it could develop had it proper facilities.

Yours truly,
PROGRESS.

MAYOR BRADBURN RIPS UP THE BACK THE STATEMENTS BY "OVERBURDENED TAXPAYER" GIVEN IN THE EXAMINER

Ratepayers, Read This Fair and Truthful Statement of Your City's Position, Made by the Chief Magistrate

You Honored Him With Your Confidence for Two Years; Why Not Believe Him Now?

To the Editor of the Review:

Sir,—I have seen in the local papers, a letter from one who signs himself "a Burdened Ratepayer,, in which he savagely and most unfairly attacked the members of the City Council for the past six years.

He magnifies the debt of the city, and the way he does it is cool. He is not satisfied with taking the amount of the outstanding liabilities, but assumes that $600,000, for the Peterboro Light and Power Company and a number of other large items will be added, and then counts them as if they were already added. He has great confidence in the Power Trust as well as a liking for it, although he has little or no confidence in the Council or City, and assumes that everything the Trust says must be true and be carried out. On such assumptions that as he has made, as to what will or may be done, the debt could be easily stated at the figure he pleases.

He takes 1907 as a starting point. Very well. The item in the increase of the debt, including work done for which debentures are not yet issued, since the close of the year 1907 are as follows :—

Waterworks	$200,000.
Schools	181,923.24
Sewers	99,583.69
Concrete Walks	117,986.05
Bridges	42,000.
Isolation Hospital	12,500.
Protestant Home	10,000.
Street Paving	22,302.21
Incinerator	10,000.
Industries	55,000.
Parks	3,000.
Street Extensions	21,500.
	$775,795.19

Have these not all been expenditures for the benefit of the ratepayers? Some might question the expenditures for industries, but these were all voted by the people and carried by very large majorities, so that very few will find fault.

Of the increase in debt given above the $200,000, for waterworks is carried by the business of the department both as to interest and sinking fund and it is "no burden" to the ratepayer. $12,000 of the amount expended under the head of industries will be returned, as it was a loan. These two items should be deducted to make a fair statement, and the result shows that the writer overstated the per cent. of increase in the debt by 138 per cent.

Another misstatement is that as the debentures issued at three, three and one half and three quarters per cent.are being paid off the City has to replace them with bonds bearing five per cent. All these debentures are taken care of by the sinking fund and will not have to be replaced but will be paid off as they mature. To give the impression that there is not proper sinking fund to meet these debentures is a most unfair attack upon the standing and the credit of the City.

"The City's credit decreases in inverse ratio to its increasing debts," says this writer. Suppose we take him at his word, and compare the standing of Peterborough's credit with that of other cities? This week a Toronto brokerage house advertised Peterborough debentures to net the purchaser five per cent., and in the same advertisement offered debentures of Belleville and other cities to net the purchaser five and one-quarter per cent. and over. These men of the money markets understand finance, and they rate Peterborough's credit high, in spite of the knocks of irresponsible critics.

But a debt to provide for an investment that is revenue producing does not injure credit. The purchase and improvement of the water-works system increased the City's debt, but the revenue from the waterworks pays both the interest and the sinking fund, and its possession, notwithstanding the increase in the debt, improves the credit of the City.

In the same way the Hydro-Electric debt will be carried by the Hydro-Electric business, as to interest and sinking fund, and will improve the credit of the City as well as giving cheaper light and power.

In making an estimate of the interest paid by the City this writer includes, as he does in the debt, the interest paid on the debentures issued to pay for and improve the waterworks and which is paid by the waterworks business.

This "ratepayer" also says: "It is usually difficult to give instances of extravagance because they are covered up and concealed by a compact family of councillors that mutually admire each other and hermetically seal in the City vaults the evidences of their joint and several extravagances."

There is only one fitting way to characterize that statement; it is a malicious falsehood, born of the malice and meanness of the person who wrote it. Every document is open to any ratepayer and always has been.

What spite this person, who in a cowardly manner hides behind a nom de plume, has against myself and Mr. W. G. Morrow and Mr. H. Rush and others, who have served in the City Council in the past six years, I do not know certainly, but I believe the attitude of the Council in regard to Hydro-Electric Power is at the bottom of this malicious work.

Yours truly,
W. H. BRADBURN,
Mayor.

A LETTER ON THE WEST WARD CONTEST

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—

In these days of hand grasping and back slapping, we scarcely get time to think for ourselves. The papers are full of addresses, and good wishes, telling us what the would-be aspirants for office are going to do. Few can boast of what they have done.

Ald. Duffus, in No. 3 Ward, is going to do a great deal. He sees very little of No. 3 Ward, and pays little attention to it after Election Day. He is a member of the Board of Works. Can he explain why be has never taken any interest in the McDonnell Street sewer, petitioned for over two years ago? Practically all the contagious disease in the Ward is confined to the area where this sewer and water works is asked for.

What about the beaver dams and swale created on Gilmour St., after each rain? The Board of Works knows all about this. Will he tell us too what was done regarding a petition for curb and gutter construction on Gilmour Street? Was it thrown in the waste paper basket? He speaks of civic conduits. Why does he talk of these after the Hydro Electric underground work is done in a make-shift way without conduits and the permanent pavement is largely completed in the business section without mention of Mr. Duffus' bright thought being expressed? Does he purpose tearing this up again for civic conduits?

We all know the would-be alderman have wide visions previous to Election Day, but these visions fade and narrow down to the point of their own business after election.

Give us new blood in the council, giv us business men, young, energetic end enterprising. I believe we have an opportunity in this election to make a change.

Truly yours,
N. F. SAID.

BUSINESS MERIT IN THE NORTH WARD

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—

Re a letter appearing in recent issue, signed by Mr. Boucher.

As a voter in No. 4 Ward, I think it would be much more satisfactory to have a contest between Alderman Johnston and Dr. Holloway decided on the business merit of the two men. Who is this Mr. Boucher? He does not appear on the Assessment Roll, or Voters' List. If he is not a taxpayer, what inspires him to get so "wrought up?" It is whispered that Dr. Holloway has been put in the field by interests opposed to hydro electric and Mr. Boucher's helping hand goes to sustain suspicion. Few bonifida ratepayers flat footedly oppose hydro electric, and wrapped up in it as the city is at the present time, it would mean sure defeat for any would-be alderman to come out with opposition as his platform. Dr. Holloway is playing good politics, in his present stand, but what will he do in the mix-up, bound to come, if elected?

To Ald. Johnston we owe a great deal regarding the Hydro Electric. To the council in general, from the Mayor to the City Solicitor, we owe the muddle we are in now, but Ald. Johnston as chairman of the power committee, has been handed the burden of fault to carry, and it is not right. Let Hydro Electric difficulties be straightened out by the men best qualified to do it, the makers.

Truly yours,
N. F. SAID.

Peterboro, Jan. 3, 1914.

ABOUT THE MOTOR DRIVEN ENGINE

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—

In the consideration of this important subject, several points have suggested themselves which have not been mentioned by the respective gentlemen who are doing stunts in order that we will be willing to have them become our city fathers.

Question 1—

Granted we buy an $8,000 fire engine how many cents will it be worth after one trip over the pitch holes at the end of Smith Street bridge, or the lower end of Park Street, or even George Street in numerous locations.

Question 2—

Is an equipment worth while, good for only nine months a year? Will we have double equipment, (horses and motors), for nine or none for the three?

Question 3—

Have the committee obtained Police Magistrate Dumble's permission to run this new wagon on the streets at over six miles an hour. They probably do not realise what a terribly huge momentous question this is. By what kind of short-sightedness can they imagine that Police Magistrate Dumble, who demands absolute justice for all alike, rich and poor, will permit the Fire Water and Light Committee to run their big red $8,000 forty miles an hour devil motor car which will take half a block to stop, which will crush all before it like caterpillars, that he will allow them without his expressed permission, to run in this way over the streets for which he has made laws, just to put out a burning chimney, when he will not allow the physicians to travel faster than six miles an hour to save our valuable lives. We would hate to see Chief Howard on the carpet for overspeeding.

Question 4—

Will we need a new bridge to carry this heavy toy over to Ashburnham?

Question 5—

If we divide this $8,000 over a space of years, will it not build new houses for the workingman in place of those burned.

FAVORS THE BY-LAW GIVING INCREASED FIRE PROTECTION

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—

I would like to call to the attention of the ratepayers of this city, the by-law which is being submitted for their approval, of an expenditure of eight thousand dollars (8,000), for the purchase of a new hose, ladder and chemical waggon.

Being intensely interested in adequate fire protection for the property of our company, I want to endorse this by-law in the most emphatic manner, and shall support this by-law by voting for the same.

The city of Peterboro covers such a wide area that one fire station is not sufficient. If a fire broke out in one extreme end of the city, and another at another extremity, it would be almost impossible for a horse drawn vehicle to properly serve and protect the property of the citizens.

I understand that last year there were one hundred and ninety-six (196) alarms of fire, and that there were only small losses is to be considered most fortunate, largely due probably to an efficiently managed fire department, but as the city grows year after year, we cannot expect to get along with the same fire equipment.

I think the motor driven apparatus, which the city have submitted to the ratepayers for their approval, will be one that will keep down the fire losses, at the outlying portions of the city, because of its ability to cover the ground rapidly, and I think it is more in the interests of the small property owners than the large concerns.

Peterboro is an industrial city and it will continue to grow. One of the first questions a prospective manufacturer will consider in seeking a location for a new factory, is—How efficient is the fire protection? In general, I should say that we have not adequate fire equipmnet, and I am sure that this fact, of adding to our equipment, as per this by-law, will tend to keep up our rat-

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JAN. 3, 1913.

ALDERMAN BULLER'S RECORD.

ON ANOTHER PAGE Alderman Buller presents his claims for election as Mayor, an honest, straight statement of what he has done and what he proposes to accomplish without making any extravagant promises. The detail of his municipal service is laid before the ratepayers for their approval. That he will be approved there is no doubt.

In fairness, in justice, even if other claims were not made, Alderman Buller is entitled to election on the basis of long service. Entering the Council seven years ago, he has been successively chairman of the most important committee of the Council. The direction of civic work has been in his hands and has been well done. He has given unlimited time to getting for the city new industries, and has, assisted by the work of other members and the municipal officials, been most successful.

Such growth as the city has made both on the lines of added enterprise and civic improvement has been accomplished while he has been concerned in these efforts.

It is a laudable ambition that an alderman who has been in the harness for seven years, should aspire to the Mayor's chair, and one that in this case should be recognized. If elected, and the ratepayers will fall short of doing a duty if he be not, there is assurance that all that energy, good ability, common-sense and thorough familiarity with every detail will be brought to bear in our service. It is no inexperienced man the electors are asked to support but a veteran of the municipal field.

Alderman Buller should be supported, unless the ratepayers wish it understood that a man may serve the city as a councillor, but must give up hope of being Mayor. That any ratepayer takes such view we know is not the case.

USEFUL GLOBE-TROTTING.

HON. GEO. E. FOSTER, whose globe-trotting is rousing the envy and chagrin of certain Liberal editors, is evidently making good use of his excursions. Since taking office he has been directing his efforts to the promotion of Canadian trade by various means. He has a plan whereby at regular intervals trade commissioners will make tours of Canada to widen their knowledge of the country and come into closer personal contact with Canadian manufacturers. He has appointed Mr. Watson Griffin who was lately a Montreal journalist, to represent conditions abroad to Canadian business men, to gather data and prepare regular reports and articles on the possibilities of Canadian trade outside of Canada. Mr. Griffin left the other day for a tour of the West Indies with the object in view of extending our trade in that part of the world.

SNOW AND ITS USES.

IT HAS BEEN PUT OUT that the people of Montreal, in the absence of water, have taken to the snow-bath. It is said that some of the citizens have taken quite a liking to an early morning "cold plunge into a bank of beautiful white snow—that the momentary thrill, as the soft blanket of snow covers us and clings to us, and then, the inspiration of the often clear morning breezes as we skip lightly up-stairs for a good rub and come down smiling and hungry for breakfast." The Montreal Mail says that this is all an illusion, that it never knew of any Canadian outside a lunatic asylum taking a snow bath. "We prefer to remain unbathed to plunging naked into the snow. Ouch! We can't do it!" Snow is not as good an element for bathing purposes as water; even the poet who wrote: "Beautiful Snow" would not carry his rapture so far as to take a header into a snow bank clothed in nothing but his skin.

It is really questionable whether snow is good for anything at all, and why it was ever invented is a mystery. Our grandmothers used to recommend snow for making pan-cakes, that is, of course, mixed with flour. The only real excuse for it is that in the winter it makes a soft covering for the hard ground—and above all, makes grand fun for the boys with the bob-sleighs.

THE LOGIC OF HEROISM.

MR. DAN CRAWFORD, the missionary, is a good man, but he is not quite logical. He is reported to have said that we are spoiled and petted children of civilization. That, in many respects, the black man of Africa is superior to the white man. The former relies entirely on the gifts nature gave him in the struggle of life. He does not have social distinctions civilization suffers from, therefore he does not know the meaning of snobbery, a trait that Mr. Crawford scorned. He thought snobbery hindered Christianity by its supercilious acceptance of the truth.

Mr. Crawford concluded with an eloquent appeal for aid in propagating the spread of the doctrine of Christ in heathen lands.

Where Mr. Crawford is illogical is in making an eloquent appeal for aid in propagating the spread of this civilization, which he so much despises and abjures. We are open to admit this missionary's self-abnegation and sacrifice, but if he likes the society of Central Africans better than that of England or America, then it rather discounts the supposed sacrifice.

Furthermore, he is—unconsciously perhaps—rather insincere when he waxes eloquent in pleading for the spoiling of the "natural gifts" and "the absence of snobbery," which distinguishes the natives of Central Africa. Surely if these natives are so Arcadian and desirable and have these graces which Mr. Crawford attributes to them Mr. Crawford ought not to keep that earthly paradise all to himself. He might send out a few black missionaries to uncivilize some of us; or, at least, come out himself a little oftener and cure us of our snobbery.

There can be no doubt at all, but that we are a lot of snobs and rather fancy ourselves on being distinguished. But Mr. Dan Crawford is himself a white man and is not altogether without the white man's failing. When one comes to think of it, there is more than a touch of the thing which make snobs of us all in Mr. Crawford, when he declares to the world that he is going into Africa to die.

But no one need pity him, for he is escaping the social distinctions and snobbery of Christian civilization. There are times when we all feel like getting out of the mad struggle for a decent social existence, but the mood passes off and we are glad to stick to our idols. Let us hope that Mr. Dan Crawford's renunciation is only a mood and that we may yet hear of his second and third and many returns to the wilds of civilization. He really must not stay in Africa for ever, he is too good and interesting a man for to be buried alive. Let him display a little Christian self-sacrifice in the direction of denying himself the pleasure of the society of the savage.

If we thought we could dissuade Mr. Crawford from dying in Africa we would continue in this strain and labor the point, after the fashion of Tennyson's reluctant parting with the old year, and say:

Dan Crawford, you must not die;
Too short has been your stay with us,
Do come again and play with us,
Dear Dan, you shall not die!

We wish our heroes were a little more logical—but then, what hero ever was?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A READER would like The Review to print a list of the stockholders in the local Electric Power Companies.—Ah, there's the rub!

THE POWER OF THE PRESS is rather at a discount in Toronto just now—after all the ink-slinging of the last six-months, the ballot did what it thought itself.

THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC has been exploited by the "movies" in the United States to such an extent that they are becoming a greater source of evil than the thing they are pretending to put down. There is too much of this kind of stuff at picture shows.

IT IS NOT GENERALLY known that Robert Service, the well-known Canadian poet, is not a Canadian at all, except by adoption. He was born in Preston, England; and was educated in Glasgow. He was in the Bank of Commerce, but left that business for poetry. It is generally "the other way round" with poets. He is at present touring Europe.

HAMILTON as well as Peterborough, has its anti-Hydro men. The Hamilton Herald puts it to them thus:—

"Local anti-Hydro men who were wont to boast they would soon 'see the finish' of the Hydor project in Hamilton, should note the fact that the local Hydro system ends the year with a net surplus of $15,000—and this while the plant is still under construction. Our friends who expected to see the finish of the system should lay in a large stock of patience, else the attitude of 'watchful waiting' will surely grow irksome.'

ATTENTION IS DIRECTED in the interests of fair play—to a letter from Alderman Gillespie, one of the candidates for Mayor. He refers to certain charges which are in circulation relative to him, and makes denial. It should not be necessary for an honorable man, such as Alderman Gillespie, to do so. His business life is known to most of us, and he is respected by all, as he should be. It is a queer commentary on the fact, men wishing to serve the public—gratuitously—have to deny such foolish assertions. The Review is free to make these remarks in justice to Alderman Gillespie, though The Review is supporting Alderman Buller, and we believe Alderman Buller, who is as decent and square as they make them, is the last one to hope to profit by such things as are denied by Alderman Gillespie.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

All Club Gossip.

Toronto Globe.

The folk who are going to jail as vagrants because they have no work and no money will be pleased to learn that "there is more of hard times in club gossip than there is in actual business conditions."

Still Running.

Lethbridge Herald.

Arthur Hawkes is going to keep on running. The fact that he obtained a mere handful of votes in South Lanark is not worrying Arthur. He is now going to tackle the proposition in York, N.B. Mr. Hawkes considers himself the forerunner of a new political gospel. He is a runner all right.

Eloquence or Conviction?

Catholic Register.

The Christian Guardian believes that a lack of "eloquence" accounts for a good deal of the emptiness in the pew. But how can clergymen be eloquent when they have no very positive convictions as to what they are to be eloquent about? If noise were eloquence the big drum of Pekin would be the world's greatest orator. Eloquence represents conviction and empty pews amongst our separated brethren represent, we fear, a lack of conviction in those who occupy the pulpit.

THE MARKET AT MONTREAL

From Montreal Mail.

Is is possible that there exists any place in Montreal where food can be had for a reasonable price? Where the price of eggs is still beneath that of rubies and the cost of beef and mutton makes it possible for the ordinary householder to consider them as articles of daily diet for a hungry family?

Producer and Purchaser.

Fortunately there are still one or two places in this city of growing burdens, the reason, I take it to be, because the producer is brought into actual contact with the consumer, without the intervention of the middleman or the withering blight of the trust-monger.

A well known politician has just given his benediction to the high price of eggs and expresses a hope that the farmers' earnings may never grow less. Be it so. May the farmer gain and the politician's shadow never grow less. We accept. But the gains of the middleman, of the "cornerer", of the maker of trusts do not go into the farmer's pocket. So let us meet the farmer face to face.

A Picturesque Scene This.

There they are. A whole row of them on Jacques Cartier square standing in front of a line of sleighs laden with provisions; the grey, wintry sky above, the wind whistling up from the river, chilling to the bone. In the enclosure at the side of the roadway the patient horses are waiting. There is a sleigh full of butcher's meat, others with barrels of tight green cabbages, leeks, home-grown tobacco.

The hardy countryfolk, with their weather-tanned faces, hardly seem to feel the cold. They are dressed more in woolen and cloth than in fur. They stamp their feet a bit and blow on their bare fingers but, as a topic of conversation, the weather is not worth considering.

Things Just Half Price.

The Jacques Cartier market is a branch of the "Bons Secours," the large building over the way, a little lower down, with its arcades, staircase and upper galleries. Generally speaking, vegetables in the market are about half the price that they are in the St. Catharine street shops. That is to say, a large cabbage priced at 10 cents uptown can be had for 5 cents in the market and fresh into the bargain; or you might get three smaller ones for ten cents. This is distinctly worth while, even though a cabbage has not yet gone quite up to the price of a bunch of "American Beauty" roses. Other vegetables are in the same ratio.

RE-ENTER THE BUSTLE!

But the Fair Wearer Was Liberally Hissed and Hooted.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 3—Hooted from its position of popularity among the modish dressed women of an earlier decade, and thrown into the discard, the "bustle" has come back, or at least one of them. Adorning one of the latest creations of the Parisian modiste's art, it arrived here yesterday and was placed on display by a beautiful young miss who passed down Fifth avenue, the cynosure of thousands of eyes and to the accompaniment of an ever-increasing babble of voices, hoots and hisses. When Miss Collingwood turned into Fifth avenue from Smithfield street yesterday afternoon there was a gasp from the crowd on the busy thoroughfare and then a simultaneous "It's a bustle."

By the time the fair young dame had traveled a block Pittsburg's fashionable thoroughfare was congested with a wildly curious mob of men and women, eager, as one of the latter species said, for "just one glimpse." Two big corner policemen finally took Miss Collingwood in tow and urged her i. to one of the avenue's big banking houses. Later she was whisked away in a big motor car, bustle and all.

PUNISH MAD MULLAH.

British Expedition Into Wilds of Somaliland Planned.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A punitive expedition to operate against the Mad Mullah in the British protectorate of Somaliland is being organized, according to an evening newspaper.

Since a camel corps of British native troops was cut up by the Mad Mullah and his followers on Aug. 12 last year, the dervishes have devastated the country of the friendly tribes to such an extent that thousands have fled to the coast.

In the engagement in August, a white British officer was killed and wounded, while there were 50 casualties among their native troopers.

It is assumed that the expedition will consist of seasoned troops from British India and that it will be of considerable strength, as the Mad Mullah's successes have attracted thousands from the desert hordes to his banner.

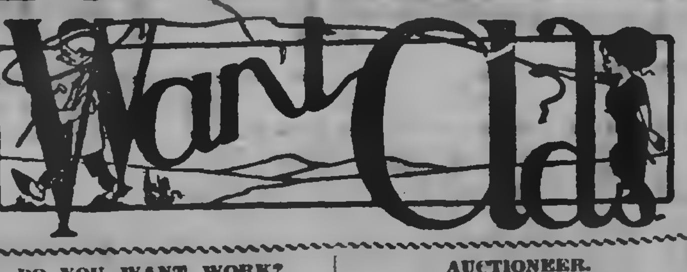
Abused Woman Gets Ranch.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—A ghastly tale of a husband's ill-treatment of his wife appears in the usually staid columns of this week's Canada Gazette. It is detailed in the form of an order-in-council exempting from the customary homestead duties Mrs. Anna Haven, now Mrs. Orfensen, a Saskatchewan settler.

Some months ago, Mrs. Ofensen was deserted by her husband and left penniless with one child. Last winter, with both feet badly frozen, she was admitted to the Moose Jaw hospital, and both limbs were amputated.

New Assurance Company.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The World Assurance Company is the title of a new fire insurance company with headquarters at Vancouver, for which incorporation is being sought. The Empire Life Insurance Company is seeking extension of time for obtaining a license to carry on business.



DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service of all such.

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By HAROLD McGRATH

(Copyright 1910 by Bobbs-Merill Company.)

"Every word of it." M. Ferraud folded his arms and sat back.

During the pause Hildegarde shivered. Something made her desire madly to thrust a hand out and cover M. Ferraud's mouth.

"We have all read much about Napoleon. The emperor as a soldier was the peer of all the Caesars. As a husband he was vastly inferior to any of them. This story does not concern him as emperor. If in my narrative there occurs anything offensive correct me instantly. I speak English fluently, but there are still some idioms I trip on."

"I'll trust you to steer straight enough," said the admiral.

"Thank you. Well, then, once upon a time Napoleon was in Bavaria. The country was at that time his ablest ally. There was a pretty peasant girl."

A knife clattered to the floor. "Pardon!" whispered Hildegarde to Cathewe. "I am clumsy." She was as white as the linen.

Breitmann went on with his crumbs.

"I believe," continued M. Ferraud, "that it was in the year 1813 that the emperor received a peculiar letter. It begged that a title be conferred upon a pretty little peasant boy. The emperor was a grim humorist, I may say in passing, and for this infant he created a baronetcy, threw in a parcel of land and a purse. That was the end of it as far as it related to the emperor. Waterloo came and with it vanished the empire, and it would be a long time before a baron of the empire returned to any degree of popularity. For years the matter was forgotten. The documents in the case, the letters of patent, the deeds and titles to the land and a single Napoleonic scrawl, these gathered dust in the loft. When I heard this tale the thing which appealed to me most keenly was the thought that over in Bavaria there exists the only real, direct strain of Napoleonic blood—a Teuton, one of those who had brought about the downfall of the empire."

"You say exists?" interjected Cathewe.

"Exists," laconically.

"You have proofs?" demanded Fitzgerald.

"The very best in the world. I have not only seen those patents, but I have seen the man."

"Very interesting," agreed Breitmann, brushing the crumbs into his hand and dropping them on his plate. "But go on."

"What a man!" breathed Fitzgerald, who began to see the drift of things.

"I proceed, then. Two generations passed. I doubt if the third generation of this family has ever heard of the affair. One day the last of his race, in clearing up the salable things in his house—for he had decided to lease it—stumbled on the scant history of his forebears. He was at school then, a promising youngster, brave, cheerful, full of adventure and curiosity. Contrary to the natural sequence of events he chose the navy, where he did very well. But in some way Germany found out what France already knew.

"Here was a fine chance for a stroke of politics. France had always watched; without fear, however, but with half formed wonder. Germany considered the case. Why not turn this young fellow loose on France, to worry and to harry her? So, quietly Germany bore on the youth in that cold blooded, Teutonic way she has, and forced him out of the navy.

"He was poor, and poverty among German officers, in either branch, is a bad thing. Our young friend did not penetrate the cause of this at first, for he had no intention of utilizing his papers, save to dream over them. The blood of his great forebear refused to let him bow under this unjust stroke. He sought a craft, an interesting one. The net again closed in on him. He began to grow desperate, and desperation was what Germany desired. Desperation would make a tool of the young fellow. But our young Napoleon was not without wit. He plotted, but so cleverly and secretly that never a hand could reach out to stay him. Germany finally offered him an immense bribe. He threw it back, for now he hated Germany more than he hated France. You wonder why he hated France? If France had not discarded her empire—I do not refer to the second empire—he would have been a great personage today. At least this must be one of his ideas.

"And there you are"—abruptly. "Here we have a Napoleon, indeed, with all the patience of his great forebear. If Germany had left him alone he would today have been a good citizen, who would never have permitted futile dreams to enter his head, and who would have contemplated his greatness with the smile of a philosopher. And who can say where this will end? It is pitiful."

"Pitiful?" repeated Breitmann. "Why that?"—calmly.

M. Ferraud repressed the admiration in his eyes. It was a singular duel. "When we see a madman rushing blindly over a precipice it is a human instinct to reach out a hand to save him."

"But how do you know he is rushing blindly?" Breitmann smiled this question.

Hildegarde sent him a terrified glance. But for the stiff back of her chair she must have fallen.

M. Ferraud demolished an olive before he answered the question. "He has allied himself with some of the noblest houses in France—that is to say, with the most heartless spendthrifts in Europe. Napoleon IV.! They are laughing behind his back this very minute. They are making a catspaw of his really magnificent fight for their own ignoble ends, the Orleanist party. To wreak petty vengeance on France, for which none of them has any love; to embroil the government and the army that they may tell of it in the boudoirs. This is the aim they have in view. What is it to them that they break a strong man's heart? What is it to them if he be given over to perpetual imprisonment? Did a Bourbon ever love France as a country? Has not France always represented to them a purse, into which they might thrust their dishonest hands to pay for their base pleasures? Oh, beware of the conspirator, whose sole portion in life is that of pleasure! I wish that I could see this young man and tell him all I know. If I could only warn him!"

Breitmann brushed his sleeve. "I am really disappointed in your climax, M. Ferraud."

"I said nothing about a climax," returned M. Ferraud. "That has yet to be enacted."

"Ah!"

"A descendant of Napoleon direct! Poor devil!" The admiral was thunderstruck. "Why, the very spirit of Napoleon is dead. Nothing could ever revive it. It would not live even a hundred days."

"Less than that many hours," said M. Ferraud. "He will be arrested the moment he touches a French port."

"Father," cried Laura with a burst of generosity which not only warmed her heart, but her cheeks, "why not find this poor, deluded young man and give him the treasure?"

"What, and ruin him morally as well as politically? No, Laura; with money he might become a menace."

"On the contrary," put in M. Ferraud; "with money he might be made to put away his mad dream. But I'm afraid that my story has made you all gloomy."

"It has made me sad," Laura admitted. "Think of the struggle, the self denial, and never a soul to tell him he is mad."

The scars faded a little, but Breitmann's eyes never wavered.

"The man hasn't a ghost of a chance." To Fitzgerald it was now no puzzle why Breitmann's resemblance to some one else had haunted him. He was rather bewildered, for he had not expected so large an order upon M. Ferraud's promise. "Fifty years ago"—

"Ah! Fifty years ago," interrupted M. Ferraud eagerly, "I should have thrown my little to the cause. Men and times were different then. The world was less sordid and more romantic."

"Well, I shall always hold that we have no right to that treasure."

"Fiddlesticks, Laura! This is no time for sentiment. The questions buzzing in my head are, Does this man know of the treasure's existence? Might he not already have put his hand upon it?"

"Your own papers discredit that supposition," replied Cathewe. "A stunning yarn, and rather hard to believe in these skeptical times. What is it?" he asked softly, noting the dead white on Hildegarde's cheeks.

"Perhaps it is the smoke," she answered with a brave attempt at a smile.

The admiral in his excitement had lighted a heavy cigar and was consuming it with jerky puffs.

"I should like to know the end of the story," said Breitmann musingly.

"There is time," replied M. Ferraud. And of them all only Fitzgerald caught the sinister undercurrent.

The dinner came to an end, or, rather, the diners rose, the dinner having this hour or more been cleared from the table, and each went to his or her stateroom mastered by various degrees of astonishment. Fitzgerald moved in a kind of waking sleep. Napoleon IV.! That there was her sister did not matter. The dazzle radiated from a single point—a dream of empire. M. Ferraud had not jested. Breitmann was mad, obsessed, a monomaniac. It was grotesque; it troubled the senses as a harlequin's dance troubles the eyes. A great-grandson of Napoleon and plotting to enter France! And, good Lord, with what? Two million francs and half a dozen spendthrifts. Never had there been a wilder, more hopeless dreamer than this. Whatever antagonism or anger he had harbored against Breitmann evaporated. Poor devil, indeed!

He understood M. Ferraud now. Breitmann was mad, but till he made a decisive stroke no man could stay him. So many things were clear now. He was after the treasure, and he meant to lay his hands upon it, peacefully if he could, violently if no other way opened. Like the admiral, Fitzgerald wished that there were no women on board. There would be a contest of some order going forward where only men would be needed. Pirates! He rolled into his bunk with a dry laugh.

Meantime M. Ferraud walked the deck alone, and finally when Breitmann approached him it was no more than he had been expecting.

"Among other things," began the secretary, with ominous calm, "I should like to see the impression of your thumb."

"That lock was an ingenious contrivance. It was only by the merest accident I discovered it."

"It must be a vile business."

"Serving one's country? I do not agree with you. Wait a moment, Mr. Breitmann. Let us not misunderstand each other. I do not know what fear is, but I do know that I am one of the few living who put above all other things in the world France—France with her wide and beautiful valleys, her splendid mountains, her present peace and prosperity. And my life is nothing if in giving it I may confer a benefit."

"Why did you not tell the whole story? A Frenchman and to deny oneself a climax like this?"

M. Ferraud remained silent.

"If you had not meddled. Well, you have, and these others must bear the brunt with you should anything serious happen."

"Without my permission you will not remain in Ajaccio a single hour. But that would not satisfy me. I wish to prove to you your blindness. I will make you a proposition. Tear up those papers, erase the memory from your mind, and I will place in your hands every franc of those two millions."

Breitmann laughed harshly. "You have said that I am mad. Very well, I am. But I know what I know, and I shall go on to the end. You are clever. I do not know who you are nor why you are here with your warnings. But this I will say to you. To morrow we land, and every hour you are there death shall lurk at your elbow. Do you understand me?"

"Perfectly. So well that I shall let you go freely."

"A warning for each, then, only mine has death in it."

"And mine nothing but good will and peace."

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my fingernails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. MARY EARLEWINE, R.F.D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. HETTIE GREENSTREET, Nebo, Illinois.

AFTER SUMMER HAS GONE.

Excitement Comes to Lonely Pair After Days of Waiting.

The hotel dining room was eighty feet long. A tall man sat eating a lonely breakfast at one end. A stout man was performing the same rite at the other. They passed out together.

"Marooned," murmured one.

"Are we the only inhabitants?"

"With the exception of the help, we are alone."

"These late vacations are awful!"

"Yes; I'll never take another."

Days passed—dull days, lonely days. Sometimes they hobnobbed. At other times they abhorred each other and kept apart.

One morning the tall man sat dreaming on the veranda. He was dreaming of waltzes and of moonlight strolls. The stout man was on the beach. Suddenly he bent over something, and then began to beckon wildly. The tall man sauntered down.

"What have you found?" he languidly inquired.

"Look at that, Robinson Crusoe!" yelled the stout man.

"What is it?"

"Look!"

The tall man looked, then smiled feebly.

It was the print of a girl's shoe in the sand.—William S. Adkins in Judge.

Identification Easy.

"I was going down the street the other day," the fellow said, "and I met a little boy crying. He was a miserable object and seemed to be suffering keenly. So I stopped and spoke to him.

"'What's the matter, son?' says I.

"'A b-b-big boy bit me!' he sobbed.

"'Well, that's a shame. You tell me who the big boy was and I'll give him a talking to that he won't forget.'

"'It was th' Simpkins boy,' answered the abused youngster, with a show of interest. 'He's down there with all those other kids.'

"'Which one of that crowd is he?'

"'You kin tell easy enough. He's the one with th' black eye an' th' bloody nose, an' he's cryin' too!'"—Chicago Daily News.

Wasted Efficiency.

"I shall never forget," said the popular statesman, "the crowd of 10,000 people who cheered me for one solid hour."

"Have you ever thought of your terrible responsibility?" asked the mathematician. "An hour each for 10,000 people represents 10,000 hours, or nearly a year and two months devoted to the exhaustive and unproductive occupation of cheering."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Happy Dad!

"Oh, George!" breathed Janet in eager excitement, "did you tell father that you had saved up $500?"

"Yes, darling."

"And what did he say?"

"He said, 'Fine! You're just the man I'm looking for'"—

"Yes, yes; go on!"

"'Lend it to me, will you?'"—St Louis Post-Dispatch.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

New Method of Reducing Fat

Good News From Paris.

A news item from Paris informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure, is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh a pound a day without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained of any druggist or the makers, the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., for seventy-five cents the large case, which is a decidedly economical price considering the number of tablets each case contains.

GERMANY WILL YIELD MILLIONS FOR ARMY MOST UNWILLINGLY

War Lord's Latest Burden on His People For the Purpose of Increasing the Military Establishment is Now Payable and Citizens Are Groaning.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Every man, woman and child in Germany with an income of over $250 or a fortune in excess of $2,500 is brooding over the new army taxes, which now come formally into effect. Although the tax hits the middle class and others of moderate means only mildly, it permits them three years to pay it. There was never a more unpopular burden imposed upon the people of the fatherland. A total of $250,000,000 requires to be raised for increasing the Kaiser's military establishment. The declarations must be turned in not later than Jan. 20.

High hopes are expressed at the Treasury Department that more taxpayers than ever before will tell the truth on this occasion. General amnesty is conferred upon all persons who hitherto unconsciously or otherwise cheated the Imperial Exchequer.

"The contribution to defence," which is the sugar-coated title of the new tax, is not a respecter of persons. The Kaiser, Kings and Princes must pay their full quota. Royalty hitherto was exempt from taxation in Germany. The army tax law does not specifically assess them, but the Government gave an informal pledge to the country that the ruling sovereign would pay the same proportion as the humblest subject. The Kaiser's fortune is estimated at $35,000,000. His "fortune" tax under the defence contribution will be roundly $500,000 while on an income of $5,500,000, which is the largest in Germany, he will pay eight per cent., or $440,000, making the royal total stipend lose to $1,000,000. Prince Thurn-axis of Bavaria, who is reckoned to be the richest person in Germany, with a fortune of $82,000,000 and an income of $1,250,000, will contribute between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

Frau Bertha Krupp Von Bohlen und Halbach, the "Cannon Queen" of Essen, Europe's richest woman, has an estimated fortune of $71,000,000 and an income of $4,500,000. Her contribution to the "war tax" will be about $1,250,000.

The middle class man worth $25,000 pays a property tax of $62.50. If he has an income of $5,000 a year his income tax will be an additional $70.

Wouldn't Administer Oath.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The papers here say that the judge of a municipal court has refused to administer the oath to witnesses in a court proceeding because they were not members of the church. The judge said he doubted the validity of an oath administered to such persons.

The incident is considered important because of the general movement throughout Germany of member to withdraw from the state church in order to escape payment of compulsory church taxes.

LONG MEXICAN BATTLE AT OJINAGA NOT YET DECIDED

For Lack of Ammunition the Rebel Forces Are Compelled to Withdraw and Await More—Federal Position is Almost Impregnable.

PRESIDIO, Texas, Jan. 3.—After driving a raging cannon fire into the Federal army at Ojinaga, Mexico, for four days Gen. Ortega's rebel army yesterday fell back, it was reported on the American side, to await the arrival of more ammunition. The ammunition is on the way from Chihuahua.

The impregnable position of the 4,000 Federals, entrenched in the heights of the village, from which they command a sweeping range on the advancing rebels, enabled them to held out against superior numbers. Each time the rebels charged they were compelled to fall back. Though they were flanked on three sides and the United States border patrol had prepared for a possible retreat of their whole army to American territory the Federals fought persistently.

It appeared that Gen. Ortega's rebels were drawing the Federal fire merely to exhaust it. The plan of driving out the Federal force by skirmishing would be in line with the usual guerilla tactics of the rebels, who seldom make aggressive charges.

So far the losses have been heaviest on the rebel side, owing to the Federals' superior range. Federal deserters reported that they had fewer than 100 killed with an unknown number of wounded, while the rebel losses would exceed that number. No Americans were permitted to cross the river, and anything like an accurate estimate was lacking.

Few Federal deserters attempted to reach the American side yesterday. The wounded were cared for by the Red Cross.

Besiegers Worsted.

LAREDO, Texas, Jan. 3.—While the desultory fighting last night was indecisive, whatever advantage there was at the end of the second day's battle in the siege of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, seemed with the Federal defenders of the town last night. In the most important engagement yesterday a constitutionalist machine gun detachment of 100 men was dislodged from its position, 1,000 yards from the Federal lines, and the rebels fled after thirty-five of their number had been killed. The number of Federals killed was placed at five. Estimates of the wounded were not available. The main line of the besiegers was unbroken, and the Government held their position. Rebel leaders declared they would prolong the siege indefinitely, and promised a more vigorous attack when the artillery arrives.

Seven constitutionalists were summarily hanged by Federals yesterday "as a warning." It also was reported, but not confirmed, that the Federals had put to death wounded constitutionalists left lying on the field.

One act of barbarism was witnessed from the American side of the river. A captured constitutionalist was trussed up with a rope to the tail of a wild horse, which was then sent plunging across the plain dragging the body behind. The prisoner had been shot, but it was not known whether he was dead.

Someone who saw the incident said the man's head had been severed before the body was tied to the horse.

Another story in general circulation, but unconfirmed, was that a wounded constitutionalist, his arms tied behind his back, and his knees tied to his body, was spitted on a pole and paraded in front of the Federals' line.

OVERWORKED DRESS SUITS.

Diner-Out In London Gives Advice To the Wearers.

This is the end of the close season for the public dinner, says Ivan Heald in The London Daily Express. I know it, because when you go to hire a dress suit it costs two shilling more, and you find trifles of obsolete food in the trousers pockets.

Hired dress suits are terribly overworked at this time of the year. I remember taking one to a public dinner last autumn, and a waiter said it had been there five times that week already. He recognized it, he explained, because he was the very man who had made the tomato soup patch on its left shoulder.

Hardly a man in London escapes being a public diner. The only way to get out of it is to become a waiter. A man passes safely through October and November, and then he has a summons from the Society of Ecclefechan Men in Brook Green, Hammersmith, or the Burdett Road Night School Old Boys, and his wife resigns herself to the worst.

Public dinners would be all right if one could leave one's elbows at home. It is so trying to go with an appetite and find yourself so wedged in that it is only possible to tackle the one-handed courses like soup and asparagus. At the last Lord Mayor's Guildhall banquet the people in my row were so tightly wedged that we could only raise our hands one at a time, and an alderman put the whole combination into confusion by getting out of step with his soup spoon.

Some advice to young public diners may not come amiss from one who has been through it all from soup to nuts. Knives and forks, for instance. Our ancestors used to go round the whole course with one club, but now the diner is given an array of cutlery and told to start at the outside and work inward at each course.

That rule is all right if you start properly, but just go wrong with the hors d'oeuvre and you will be eating soup with a fork, tackling the game with a sherbet spoon, chasing the cheese with a dessert knife, and in the end there will be a fork left over and you will have to start all over again.

Then there is the wine waiter who wears a massive chain, and may easily be mistaken for a provincial mayor. The young diner will always test the chain with a little nitric acid, and if it is real silver or gold the man is a mayor. Thus the young diner saves a shilling tip.

Always be kind to the waiter. When, at the end of the dinner, he leans over and whispers in your ear, "I'm leaving you now, sir!" do not let a curt nod suffice for your farewell. I always rise from my seat, grasp him warmly by his outstretched hand, and say, "Good-bye, old chap. I hope you will have a good time, and don't forget to send me a picture postcard now and again."

The real thing to remember when going to a public dinner is to take a few nice sandwiches with you.

You have a right to think a lot of things you have no right to say.

FAVORS THE BY-LAW GIVING INCREASED FIRE PROTECTION

ing, rather than allow it to decrease. Continued employment depends largely, upon property being kept intact, and I strongly recommend this by-law to the favorable consideration of the ratepayers.

If the citizens vote favorably on the expenditure of eight thousand, ($8,000), and the city council decide not to issue debentures covering the purchase price, and decide to pay for it out of 1914 revenue, which would be raised by taxation, it would mean that on every thousand dollars of assessment, the tax payers would pay seventy-eight cents (78c), so each taxpayer can figure out for himself how small an increase there would be in his taxes, and I am sure that he will conclude that for the increased protection, he will very gladly spend this small amount of money.

These figures were obtained from the city clerk.

Thanking you for the space, I am,
Yours very truly,
E. G. PATTERSON

CITY TEMPERANCE LEAGUE EXPLAINS

To the Editor of The Review.
Sir,—

Criticism having appeared in the daily papers in regard to the endorsement of Mr. Gillespie's candidature by members of the Executive Committee of the City Temperance League, an explanation of the reasons which led to this action being taken may be in order.

Early in the campaign the officers of the League had reason to believe that the anti-temperance forces favored the election of one of the mayoralty candidates. Several prominent temperance supporters interviewed Mr. Hartley. It was pointed out to him that one temperance candidate was already in the field and that if he entered the contest it might have the effect of splitting the temperance vote. Nevertheless, Mr. Hartly thought it best to announce his candidature.

Immediately temperance supporters began to ask which of the candidates should receive their support. A meeting of the officers of the League was called. Regret was expressed that two such strong temperance men were in the field at the same time. It was found that many temperance supporters had promised their support to Mr. Gillespie before Mr. Hartley's candidature had been announced. It was unanimously decided, therefore, in order to keep the temperance vote as intact as possible, to let it be known that Mr. Gillespie was favored at the temperance candidate. A notice to this effect was sent out to a number of the leading temperance workers. Had conditions been reversed, Mr. Hartley would have received the same support.

Beyond recommending Mr. Gillespie as the temperance candidate, the officers of the League do not purpose taking any other part in the campaign beyond what a few of them may do as private individuals interested in Mr. Gillespie's election. No organized effort will be made to get out the temperance vote nor any canvass of electors be made.

In supporting Mr. Gillespie for the mayoralty the officers of the League believe him to be a man eminently well qualified the fill the position with advantage of the city. They feel also that his record as a private citizen and as a member of the council entitle him to receive this honor at the hands of his fellow citizens.

(Signed) H. B. COWAN,
President.

A VOICE FOR ALDERMAN DUFFUS

To the Editor of The Review.
Dear Sir,—

I am glad to note that Alderman Duffus continues to be such an ardent supporter of the Hydro Electric system, and that one of the planks in his platform is that this important matter will have his earnest support towards a speedy completion.

On the other hand, it is a positive fact that Mr. Worth of the Bonner Worth Company, Limited, journeyed to Toronto last spring together with the other sympathizers of our local power companies, who opposed before the Private Bills Committee, the granting of the Private act which the city got allowing them to expropriate the Peterboro Light and Power Company's plant, and therefore to block and injure the scheme outlined by the Hon. Adam Back, which the ratepayers of Peterboro endorsed so highly at the polls last January.

Ald. Duffus is doing good work in the West Ward. If it had not been for his support there would not have been areas restricted from the building of stores, livery stables, boarding stables, etc., which has made this section worth thousands of dollars more as a residential centre. He has always been a very active member of the city council, and it will need just such a man as he to give the West Ward its fair share of attention and assist in solving the important questions which will come before the council of 1914.

Yours truly,
WEST WARD.

STILL HAS DOUBTS OF MR. STRATTON

To the Editor of The Review.
Dear Sir,—

I see by Mr. Stratton's letter in last night's paper that he tries to hoodwink the public to think he is in favor of Hydro Electric, by telling us that his nominator is a strong advocate of municipal ownership. (Mr. A. H. S. deserves credit for such a shrewd trick). He also refers us to his election card to substantiate his claim, and in looking it up, find it written in the third person, and looks like a letter sent to the paper by his friends, (the opposition of the Hydro Electric). Again in his letter mailed to the Elector, he does not even mention Hydro. Therefore who knows how Mr. Stratton stands on anything. Why does he not come out like Ald. Duffus or Johnston and say squarely he wil do all in his power to carry out the Hydro Electric for the city and support it to the best of his ability.

Yours, etc.,
A DOUBTER.

MR. GILLESPIE ANSWERS UNFOUNDED RUMORS

To the Electors:
Ladies and Gentlemen:

In view of a number of unfounded rumors that are afloat intended to affect my election, I desire to make the following brief but emphatic denials of the same:

1st. Subscribing money to the Home Rule Fund.

2nd Monopolizing the milk trade of the city.

3rd—Entering into a butter combine.

4th—Controlling the cheese market.

To each and every one of these charges I desire to publicly record my emphatic denial, and in order to substantiate my denial, I hereby offer $100 to any Charitable Institution in the city if any ratepayer can be found who can furnish proof that any of the above charges are correct.

Let me say with regard to these rumors:

1st I have never been approached regarding Home Rule in any way. In fact I have been entirely ignorant of any such Fund as a Home Rule Fund.

2nd—I confess that I am responsible for introducing an up-to-date sanitary system of handling milk, such as is being demanded by all cities in the Dominion; but if I have been the pioneer of this blessing to Peterboro citizens, I am not guilty of creating a monopoly thereof. There are some forty other milk vendors in the city delivering the raw milk at seven cents per quart, while my price for the pasteurized milk is only one cent more. Had it not been for my being in the milk business, the citizens of Peterboro would today be paying eight cents for raw milk.

No one is compelled to buy milk from me. We have some four hundred customers and I will let them say whether or not I have not given them perfect satisfaction.

3rd I know of no butter combine existing in this city. The Peterboro Creamery has always been able to dispose of all its products at a price entirely controlled by supply and demand. There are a dozen other creameries shipping butter into Peterboro in competition with me, and many of our city grocers do not buy a single pound of butter from the Peterboro Creamery.

4th—It is true I am a heavy buyer of cheese for export; but the local demand and retail price of cheese does not in any way come under my control. The charge that I control the Peterboro Cheese Market is pure imagination.

Any intelligent ratepayer must see that none of these charges can have any bearing upon my actions as Alderman, or, if elected, as Mayor, but that they are only intended to influence the electors against me.

I again appeal to you on my past record as Alderman for five years, and as a citizen of Peterboro for ten years, confidentially believing that the ratepayers are intelligent enough to cast aside any spurious election cries and vote for the man they believe best qualified to fill the position of chief magistrate for the City of Peterboro.

Respectfully yours,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

AN OPEN LETTER TO J. B. McWILLIAMS

Sir,—Why do you say in your election pamphlet that the people who brought me out are in active opposition to Hydro Electric, when you know the statement to be untrue. And when you know further that I have been one of its strongest supporters in this city, which is vouched for by all the members of your city council.

Do you make this statement to answer it after election day?

In your answer explain why if you were so farseeing you sold this Burleigh water power for $2,850.00, since offered to the city at $150,000.00. Is this not also better explained after election day?

Yours, etc.,
ROBERT HICKS.

Peace River Filling Up.

The chief fire ranger in the Peace River district writes to the Department of the Interior telling of the rapid settlement now going on up there. While there was practically no cultivation previous to last March, 500,000 bushels of grain were harvested between Burnt River and Dunvegan this fall. The settlers went in ahead of the railway.

Archaeologists In Session.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3.—Three sessions were held yesterday by members of the Archaeological Institute of America, in annual meeting here, and business and pleasure were judiciously mixed in the program provided. Many interesting and instructive papers were read and discussed, and various committees disposed of matters affecting the different branches of the institute's work.

Buy Your New Car Now

Do not wait until next season to make your purchase. Buy your car now. Have one of the new Hupmobile Models with all the latest improvements. Don't wait until the beginning of next season before placing your order, because you will not get delivery until 1 or 2 months later. All orders are filled in rotation and by ordering now you can specify your delivery date whereas if you delay placing your order you will have to wait your turn.

Or if you find you can't do without your new car don't hesitate to place your order for immediate delivery. Don't put it off until spring because of the discomforts of driving in winter. It might be decidedly uncomfortable driving some cars in winter, but not the Hupmobile. With your car fully enclosed with jiffy curtains it gives you all the comforts of a limousine. Then remember, no cranking. No getting out in the cold slush and sleet to start your car; all you do is press a lever and your motor starts without effort. And when you are overtaken by night you don't have to get out and light up. Just press a button and light up from the seat. There are other features and luxuries for your comfort, which must be seen to be appreciated, which go to make the Hupmobile the ideal all the year round car.

Let us show you the Hupmobile to-day. Or better, let us give you a demonstration. A telephone call will bring a car to your door.

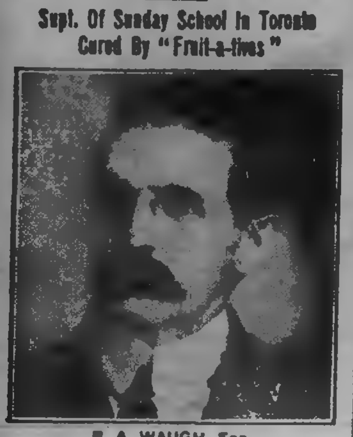
REMARKABLE CURE OF RHEUMATISM

Supt. Of Sunday School In Toronto Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"



R. A. WAUGH, Esq.

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH,
55 DOVERCOURT ROAD.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure even the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism because it is the greatest blood purifier in the world and acts on the bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MISERABLE TRAGEDIES

Soldiers Who Guarded Royal Train Route Perish in Storm

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 3.—Telegrams from wayside stations yesterday tell of a series of miserable tragedies along the Moscow Railway after the passage of the Czar's train, which arrived Thursday evening at the Tsarkoe Selo. For two days and nights before the arrival of the Czar's train the soldiers were posted at a distance of a few yards from one another along the entire road, 400 miles long, between Moscow and St. Petersburg.

Throughout this time a furious storm from Europe racing eastward, to Siberia was raging, in consequence of which the men were numbed and dazed by the cold. After the Imperial train passed they staggered toward their rendezvous, some using the open track where the lines were obliterated under the snow, and the noise of the storm prevented them from hearing the trains. The first message yesterday morning announced that the bodies of two soldiers of the guards were found on the line killed by an ordinary train 45 miles out from St. Petersburg. Other messages report two separate causes of soldiers killed by trains nearer Moscow. The roll-call of soldiers who were employed as sentries is still incomplete.

To give ordinary paint the effect of enamel, take a piece of silicate of potash, the size of a walnut, crush it, and add to it one pound and a half of ordinary varnish paint. This will give a surface like enamel at one-third the cost.

LATEST NEWS OF STEFANSSON

Last Man Out of Arctics Says Southern Section is Well.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Captain L. L. Lane of the schooner Polar Bear has written the Department of Naval Service confirming reports of the safety of the Anderson section of the Stefansson expedition. Captain Lane states he spent four days with Dr. Anderson and his associates, who are safe in winter quarters with the vessels Alaska and Mary Sachs. No further word has been received from Stefansson, but the officers of the Department here have no fears for his welfare.

Captain Lane left his vessel frozen in winter quarters at a point between the ships of the southern section of the Stefansson expedition and Herschel Island, and came ashore, working his way down to Seattle. The Polar Bear carried a party of sportsmen and scientists, who will winter in the north. He declared that reports concerning damage done to the Alaska and Mary Sachs were untrue, and stated that the vessels were undamaged, and the party well and in good spirits.

He had no news of the northern section, which is under the command of Stefansson, who, as previously reported, was ashore with some members of the party, while others were on the Karluk, which had drifted out of their sight.

Captain Lane will proceed north with another ship in the spring.

LANDS WITHDRAWN.

Government to Hold Timber Berths For Power Development.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—An order in Council has been passed amending the regulations governing the granting of licenses and permits to cut timber on Dominion lands in the Prairie Provinces, the Northwest Territories and certain parts of British Columbia. The amendment provides for the withdrawal from timber berths held under license of land required for water-power purposes.

The condition for such withdrawals is that the lessee of the water power pay the licensees of the berth the value of all timber of ten inches and over in diameter at the stump. The Minister of the Interior will fix the value of the timber in case of dispute. The new regulation is said to be in accordance with the Government's new water power policy.

The regulation of water powers by the Government in the west is an indication of the fact that it has no intention of handing over to the provinces their natural resources.

UNEMPLOYED THREATEN.

Regina's Out-of-Works Will Burn City Declares Letter.

REGINA, Sask., Jan. 3.—A strange communication signed "The Chief of the Unemployed Gang" was published here yesterday. It threatens direful things for Regina, nothing less than the immediate and total destruction of the city by fire and dynamite if the "white unemployed" are not found immediate work. The matter was not very seriously regarded but impelled the police to issue a warning to citizens to report any untoward happening as quickly as possible.

The letter states that the "unemployed gang" will take the city by "rioting, shooting and burning property," if some help is not immediately vouchsafed them.

Woman Loops the Loop.

HENDON, Eng., Jan. 3.—Gustave Hamel, for the first time in the history of aviation, yesterday looped the loop in an aeroplane with a woman passenger. The passenger was Miss Mary Trehawke Davies, who had accompanied Hamel on many previous flights, notable among them one from London to Paris. In the Paris flight, Miss Davies gained the distinction of being the first woman to cross the English Channel in a heavier than air machine.

Sentenced for Conspiracy.

NYACK, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Bart Dunn, a Tammany leader; Joseph Fogarty, a former employe of the state department of highways, and the Dunbar Contraction Company, convicted of conspiracy in connection with state road construction in Rockland county, were sentenced yesterday. Dunn got ten months imprisonment and $500 fine; Fogarty ten months without a fine, and the Dunbar Contracting Company $500 fine.

German Soldiers Accused.

ZABERN, Alsace, Germany, Jan. 3.—A local newspaper, The Anzeiger, yesterday printed detailed charges of abuse of soldiers and civilians by Lt. Baron von Forstner, Lieut. Boittge and Sergt. Hoeflich of the 99th Regiment. Capt. Von Kistowsky of the same regiment is also accused by The Anzeiger of insulting and permitting insults to private soldiers.

STARTED NEW RELIGION; FACES CHARGE OF FRAUD

Frank Dalton Jackson is Arrested in Toronto Upon Allegations Made by a 72-Year-Old Woman That He Got Her to Sign Over Her Property to Him.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—Frank Dalton Jackson, who gives as his nom-de-plume Francis H. Wright, and says he is also known as "Theo Horace" and "Theo the God," was arrested at 790 Euclid avenue yesterday afternoon by Detectives Twigg, Taylor, and Plainclothesman McElroy. It is charged "that he did with intent to defraud by restraint, compel Harriet Sharpe to execute three valuable securities in order that they might be afterwards used by him."

The case came to the hands of the police when Mrs. Sharpe, a woman of 72 years of age, with whom Wright lived, disappeared two or three days ago, and while at first the matter was not considered serious the police were eventually called in to investigate, and found the woman living at a friend's house on Clinton street. Questioned, she stated she had run away from Wright because she was afraid of him and that he was mesmerising her. Her nerves were in such a condition that she deserted the place, leaving Wright in possession of the house.

The warrant was then sworn out for Wright's arrest, and he was at once taken into custody. He was found at Mrs. Sharpe's home and was much disturbed when arrested. Questioned by Inspector Kennedy he said: "I belong to the Philadelphian Order, a body which promises immortality to its members. Our Canadian headquarters are at 790 Euclid avenue, and our members are Mrs. Sharpe and myself. The money obtained by promising immortality to Mrs. Sharpe was invested partly in the company and the distributing of our book."

Wright says he is a doctor. To rejuvenate Mrs. Sharpe, he told the inspector, he was massaging her regularly, and declared she was taking the treatment well, and shortly would be immortal. "How old do you think I am?" he asked the inspector. "Well, if you wou'd take off that wig I'd say about 35 years," replied the officer. Not in the least discomfitured by the discovery that he wore a wig in his life of "perpetual youth" Wright rambled on, declaring he might be near a hundred years of age.

Wright is five feet six inches in height, wearing rubber collar and shirt front, low shoes, pink socks, black wig and gray suit. A ticket from England to Canada, gives rise to the theory that he came to this country in August.

1500 ENTRIES FOR THE POULTRY SHOW NEXT WEEK

Exhibits From Many Parts of Ontario for the Market Hall

DEMONSTRATIONS

On Preparing Fowl for the Market and the Table

Entries are coming in thick and fast for the Poultry Snow to be held in the market hall on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. It is expected that fully fifteen hundred birds will be placed on exhibition.

To meet the increase in entries, it has been necessary for the Association to provide new coops and for the coming show, fifty additional coops have been made.

Instead of cards, ribbons denoting the prize, will be placed on the coops. This is something new and keeping with the progressive strides of the Association.

Miss Yates, of the Agricultural College at Guelph, will be present again to give practical demonstrations on killing, plucking and shaving fowl for the market sale and also on boning and carving fowl for the table. Miss Yates wil also give a talk on the subject of Winter Production of Eggs.

The directors feel that the show next week is one worthy of general recognition, and they are looking for a hearty patronage.

MUNICIPAL HOMES

A municipal home has just been opened in Harve, by the local Bureau of Charity, which is said to be the first of its kind in France. The city owns three ancient buildings on the island quarter known as St. Francois and until recently they were insanitary for building and unfit for habitation. For the nominal rent of one franc per annum the city turned them over to the Bureau of Charity, which proceeded at once to put them in complete repair at a cost of only £860.

Each family (a widow with children), has an apartment of three large, well-lighted and ventilated rooms, for which the only charge is 3s. 6d. a month, to pay the cost of supervision.

The simple regulations are that each tenement shall be kept clean; that notice of disease shall be given promptly; regular attendance of children in school, prohibition of the presence of alcoholic beverages and peace among all the residents, of which there are now 15 widows and 80 children.

Useful Insects.

The principal insects used in the commercial world are the cochineal insect (coccus cacti), from which a red dye is made; kermes (scarlet grain of Poland), long a source of crimson dye, and the lac insect (coccus lacca), from which shellac is obtained; the silkworm, for the production of silk; the honey bee, for the making of honey, and blistering beetles, red ants, etc., from which cantharides, formic acid and other medicinal preparations come. Dried flies also also used as fish food.

THE PRICE OF WAR.

Its Chief By-Products Are Widows, Orphans and Costly Pension List.

War is the most costly thing in the world, but if it were the cheapest it would still be too dear. It is sued for the purpose of changing boundary lines, satisfying selfish ambitions, administering punishment, destroying happiness, wrecking hopes, demolishing cities, bringing about general devastation and overthrowing governments.

If war had never been invented Napoleon might have been a truck gardner and William the Conquerer would perhaps have gone in for raising chickens. War is and has ever since the first big battle was fought been the chief cause of burdensome taxation and unmarked graves.

A curious thing about war is that the people who pay for it get the least out of it. War is declared by kings presidents, parliaments and irresponsible persons, and it is carried on by people who do not as a rule know what they are fighting for. Billions of dollars have been invested in wars, but no war has ever produced dividends for the small stockholders or resulted in a reduction of the difficulty of living.

War began when Cain slew Abel. At that time it was considered a wretched business, because neither Cain nor Abel wore a uniform or carried a flag. War has been waged over women, over religion and over a large part of the earth's surface, but never so far as we know, over a question that might not have been settled without it.

Advoactes of war insist that its principal object is to bring about peace. If they are right it is about the slowest process in existence.

War makes colonels, generals, presidents and emperors, and its chief by-products are widows, orphans and pensions.

Grease a Cause of Disease.

Grease in a sink is a very prolific cause of disease. It cannot but accumulate from dishes and utensils, and when small bits of vegetable matter adhere to it a shelter is given to mischievous bacteria. Besides, grease will clog the drain and become a menace and an inconvenience. The surest and simplest cleansing agent is a strong solution of washing soda and boiling water. The sink should first be scrubbed with soapsuds and the hot solution then dashed down the drain. This cleaning should be done at least once a week.—Chicago News.

To the Electors

HYDRO-JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the North Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterboro, all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the city council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honor of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric System into the city, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of this confidence by again electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the people. Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your council of 1913, I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality, and being run in the interests of the people and not in the interests of a monopoly.

W. J. JOHNSTON.

Business Management of City's Business

TO THE ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live go-ahead man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the low water marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufacturers and endeavor to bring in new industries. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favors it he is especially in favor of business-like management of the enterprise of seeing that the people who voted so, almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it, at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working men and find employment for them at good wages helps the business man and thereby helps to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. Be sure and vote for

A. H. STRATTON

Centre Ward

To the Ratepayers

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Just a last word. Monday you will poll your votes.

The most important matter for the city this year is the Municipal Hydro-Electric work. You should see that your Council are a unit on this. I am with the City and Council unreservedly. To your other public works and policies I will give every careful attention. I believe I can be helpful and serve you well.

Yours respetfully,
FRANK H. DOBBIN.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

NORTH WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

When casting your ballot on Monday I would ask you all to consider the results of last year's work of the council—a tax rate of 25 mills, and the Hydro tangle, which must be straightened out.

If you elect me as your representative, I will do all in my power to at least prevent a further increase in the rate and if possible, to reduce it and to assist in bringing about a speedy and satisfactory settlement of the Hydro trouble.

I am strongly in favor of the Hydro system, controlled absolutely by the city, and until this matter is settled, I am not in favor of the other expenditure for the new bridge and chemical engine.

I will keep the welfare of our ward constantly in mind and will see that we in the north, get our just due.

Wishing you all the compliments of the season, I remain,

Your Servant,
W. T. HOLLOWAY

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

EAST WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am again a candidate for Alderman in No. 5 Ward and respectfully solicit your support on my record in Council.

I have served you for the past 2 years as Alderman and in that time I have gained a knowledge of city affairs, city finances and the problems now before the Council, which fits me to deal with them in a capable and intelligent manner.

I have given close attention to my duties and have carefully looked after the interests of the East Ward in particular and the city as a whole.

I trust my services in the past meet with your approval and if so I ask your hearty support.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

MR. GILLESPIE'S CONFIDENT APPEAL TO THE ELECTORS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address and my further public statements made on Nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions effecting the interests of the city, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the city's affairs during tho past five years as your alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous New Year,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

A Final Message from Robert Hicks

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your voluntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have sought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing city.

The valuation put upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the city should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my usefulness, and if I am favored with your confidence I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,
ROBERT HICKS.

THE SPORTING WORLD

A MERRY BATTLE PROVIDED FOR FANS IN THE FIRST GAME OF THE O.H.A. SEASON

Whitby and Locals Were Tied Twice and Visitors Got Winning Tally

SCORE WAS 5-4

Better hockey matches have been seen at Brock Street rink, but few have been more interesting and exciting than the curtain raiser of the O. H. A. season, as staged last night, when before a big crowd, the Whitby Intermediates came to town, turned things upside down, and went away again with the big end of a respectable looking score. The count was 5-4.

What it would have been had Kelly, Denison, and Spratt, been in harness, is another question. Some one remarked last night that the scorers would have to call in an adding machine and a mechanic to make repairs.

Whitby defeated the local lads by the same score last year. The game was close, in fact, the score was 4 4 with but three minutes to play and then Whitby tallied the winning counter. The ice was good and remained that way during the game, but the boys' poor condition was in great evidence. Whitby had two practices on a pond prior to the match, and the locals one on the rink, nevertheless the game never lagged.

Started Early

Both teams appeared to be trying to win the game in the first five minutes, so the pace was terrific. Inside of fifteen minutes every man on the ice with the exception of the goal minders, was "all in."

Great Work in Nets

Walter Flowers made his debut in the Intermediate series last night, and his work was not only steady, but also spectacular. He was cool and turned off shots that appeared to be sure goals.

His defense was continually backing in on him and this didn't give him much chance at some of the shots from close in, but the long ones were "pipe." Percy Bond and Bradshaw on the defense did not play a good defense game, although both rushed well, especially the latter. They had a tendency to forget to come back, necessitating one of the forwards to drop back. Both of them worked hard and were going extra well in the last half.

Captain Giroux

Giroux, who just before the game was elected captain of the local seven, put up a fairly good brand of hockey at rover, and his back checking was a feature. Lack of condition told heavily against him, as it would other players.

Park Was There

Park was easily the best man on the ice. He was in fairly good condition and without him the game would have been a joke. His lone rushes from the face-offs gave the fans a chance to shout and although he had exceedingly hard luck, especially in the last half, he scored three of the four goals. With only 35 seconds to go, he tore up the ice from a face-off below centre and a lucky poke check spoiled his shot. Kennealley at right wing was handicapped, as he is a left hand shot, nevertheless he played good hockey especially in the second period. He was busy in the first part of the game in watching his check, Blanchard, but in the last session he had him worn out and he set out a few fast rushes. His condition was not of the best, and in the middle of the first half his stomach went back on him. A little more practice with the forward line and he should hold down the right wing position to perfection. Tom Lansfield, fresh from a cross examination by the O. H. A. executive, played left wing. His shooting was fairly good, but he appeared very slow, and has a tendency to stop and keep snaking the puck. He is a good stick handler, and uses his weight well.

Two Whitby Stars

For Whitby, Frank Rice, at centre and Blanchard at right wing, were easily the stars. As stated they were not in condition, but Rice is a plugger, and the word "quit" might be blotted from the dictionary as far as he was concerned. Blanchard showed great speed in the first half, but Kennealley was strong in the second perion, and he was held in check. Watson at left wing and Lavery at rover, were good in spots, while the defence, Smith and McIntyre, look very speedy. They step into the man and came through with several good rushes. Any time Jubb, their goal minder, wants a recommend, we'll be pleased to give him one. He was kicking them all ways in the last half and whether it was horse shoes or not, he was there a thousand ways. He was a perfect Gibraltar in the last period.

Lawson Whitehead handled the game and considering the class of hockey that was dished up, he handled it well.

The teams lined up as follows:

Whitby—5		Peterboro 4
Jubb	goal	Flowers
Smith	right defence	Bond
McIntyre	left defence	Bradshaw
Lavery	rover	Giroux
Rice	centre	Park
Watson	left wing	Lansfield
Blanchard	right wing	Kennalley

ARE RESIGNING FROM BOARDS

New York Magnates Set Example in Financial World

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — The withdrawal yesterday of J. P. Morgan & Co. from more than a score of great corporations, and the statement shortly afterwards by George F. Baker, an almost equally dominant figure in American finance, that he soon would take similar action, gave Wall street generally a thrill which almost brought trading on the Stock Exchange to a halt.

While it is probably true that many of the prominent bankers had information foreshadowing this momentous move toward ending interlocking directorates the public and brokers had no advance knowledge of what was taking place in the inner councils of the greatest of all American houses of finance. Wherever telephone and ticker flashed the news about the streets, groups of men gathered to discuss what was the all absorbing topic.

Mr. Morgan, departing from his firm's traditional policy of silence made a public statement announcing the withdrawal of five members of J. P. Morgan & Co. from directorships in twenty-seven corporations and the intention to withdraw from more.

In Wall street that part of Mr Morgan's statement in which he spoke of an apparent change in public sentiment in regard to directorships was referred to as a sign of the times. A well-known international banker said:

"For ten years we have had open antagonism between the public and men of affairs. Our big men have now decided to meet the spirit of unrest on the part of the public by so adjusting their affairs as to comply with public sentiment, and I believe that to-days' announcement and those that will follow will be met by the public in the right spirit. In brief, the events of the past few days regarding corporation affairs have encouraged me more than anything that has happened in many years."

MONTREAL HAS WATER.

Desperate Plight of City Is Mended at Last.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3. — Montreal's water famine, which started on Christmas Day, was ended last night when the city's pumps were set in motion, forcing millions of gallons of water into the mains leading to the famine stricken district.

After repeated tests of the repaired conduit, and a consultation among the engineers, the gateway at the intake in the St. Lawrence river was opened at 6.45 p.m. At 8.10 the water reached the suction well at Point St. Charles and at 8.36 the pumps were started, forcing the water direct into the city mains.

The famine-stricken district embraced what is known as the second level of the city, and it was not until 10 o'clock that a dribbling stream began to flow from the taps. At 11.45 o'clock six of the seven city pumps were in motion, and the water at that hour had reached the highest point of the stricken district.

While the repaired joints of the conduit were leaking slightly at midnight the engineers expressed the opinion that there was no danger of another break, and promised a liberal supply of water from now on.

Deadly Pellagra Not Very Bad.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 3. — That a pellagra is not due to corn and that the disease is by no means as dangerous as the public may believe were two important conclusions reported by the Thompson-McFadden commission yesterday to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. J. S. Siler of the U. S. Medical Corps, senior member of the commission, said he believed that "within a year or two the cause of pellagra will have been discovered or the investigation will have gone so far that we can define precautions for preventing its spread."

Moyer talked during the afternoon with John Mitchell and Clarence Darrow but was unable last night to announce his plans. He said he would endeavor to prepare a statement to-day.

Wife of Lost Professor Examining a Promising Clue Near Chatham.

CHATHAM, Jan. [illegible] —Mrs. A. C. Jack Gillette, a Chatham farmer, reported to the county authorities that about two weeks ago a man answering the description of the missing professor had called at his home one evening and had been supplied with food. The next day, in the city, he again ran across the stranger and bought him his dinner. Since that time he has neither seen nor heard of him. Mrs. Lavell met Mr. Gillette yesterday morning and plied him with numerous questions concerning the stranger's appearance. She admits that the farmer's description tallies almost exactly with that of her husband.

VISCOUNT GOES TO JAIL.

French Nobleman Steals Purse In Order To Get Food and Shelter.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Viscount Charles Enguerrand de Marigny, scion of an old French family, penniless and starving, yesterday snatched a pocketbook from a woman in the street here in order, as he explained to the police commissary, that he might be sent to prison, where he would at least be given food and shelter from the bitter cold. The viscount's father once was very wealthy, but lost his all in a bank failure.

Viscount de Marigny served with the French cavalry force in the Morocco campaign and was awarded a medal. Recently he was discharged from the army, his term of service having expired. He spent all his savings, he said, while vainly seeking employment.

The police commissary complied with the request of de Marigny and sent him to jail.

Cardinal Puts Ban on Tango.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Cardinal Farley started an active fight on the tango here yesterday when he announced through his secretary that he deplored the trend of the present vogue as immodest, and had determined to do all in his power to discourage it. Invitations already out for a dance to be given by the junior auxiliary of the Catholic Institute for the Blind at Delmonico's next Monday night were immediately recalled and the affair abandoned.

A monsignor close to the cardinal further stated that no priest will permit the societies connected with his parish to hold dances while the present vogue of dancing exists, nor will parish charities, schools or other parochial institutions accept funds raised in such a way.

Murderer Is Executed.

WINDSOR, Vt., Jan. 3. — Arthur Bosworth was hanged at the state prison yesterday afternoon for the murder of Mae Labelle at Essex Junction in June, 1911.

Hereafter all murderers condemned to death in Vermont will be electrocuted.

Bosworth shot and fatally wounded Mae Labelle, the 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Labelle, on the platform of the railroad station at Essex Junction on June 7, 1911. She died two days later. Bosworth was immediately arrested and was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

24,000 Executions In Year.

PEKIN, Jan. 3.—It was officially estimated yesterday that 24,000 executions were carried out in the province of Sze-Chuen alone in 1913.

Most of those ordered to be killed were robbers, but in the total were included a large number of political offenders, who had been concerned in various movements during the transition period from an empire to a republic.

It is hinted by officials that the actual figures regarding the executions would, if they could be known, probably exceed the estimate.

Listless, Backward Children
Made Bright and Active
by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Be Goode Wise Care —Not Scolding.

Many a growing boy or girl is set down as constitutionally slow, stupid or lazy when it is really a question of inactive bowels, lazy liver or sluggish kidneys.

The growing child, with a hearty appetite, certainly cannot long remain healthy and bright if the sewers of the body, the bowels and the kidneys, are choked up with impurities that should be thrown off promptly.

The muddy complexion, dragging limbs and dislike for mental or physical effort show plainly that the child needs Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills to stir up the liver and kidneys and regulate the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills do this most effectively, cleansing the whole system, purifying the blood, aiding the digestion and giving plenty of life and activity. As upon the education obtained may depend the success in life of your boy or girl—see to it that the general health of the child is such that study is pleasure and not a hardship.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

By F. M. Dela Fosse.

Part I.

The Letters of Junius.

By F. M. Dela Fosse

In an age when literature is a marked feature of study, not only in our schools and universities, but also in the reading circles of our towns and cities it is hard to realise that many have never heard of the Letters of Junius. Possibly also on some who have heard of them the title has acted as a deterrent and their curiosity has been chilled under the impression that investigation might only lead to the discovery of some musty, fusty old classic of the time of the Caesars.

If these lines should happen to be read by any to whom this applies, let them read the history of the reign of George III. and they will get enlightenment. It was a period resplendent in literature, but notable also for a degradation of manners and morals not far removed from the depths into which the country had descended in the reign of Charles II. Bribery and corruption were rampant; all classes were infected; even the clergy were more noted for their wine-bibbing, sport-loving proclivities than they were for the pursuit of their sacred calling. As the long reign of the monarch progressed, matters became worse. A series of unsuccessful ministries and of weak and obsequious parliaments succeeded in creating discord at home and in earning the contempt of nations abroad. In the year 1767 matters reached a climax owing to the refusal of the government to allow John Wilkes, the elected member for Middlesex, to take his seat. In keeping with this unconstitutional act they appointed Luttrell, one of their own supporters, in his place. It was this disgraceful proceeding that was the immediate cause of the publication of the letters. From the middle of 1767 to the middle of 1772 they continued to appear in the Public Advertiser, the most widely read periodical of the day, and the excitement they created was boundless. To rightly understand the tremendous effect of their publication, one has to have some knowledge of then existent conditions. The press had not yet attained to its full power. Writers who had grievances drove their points home by inference and innuendo rather than by direct onslaughts. The public also were not so well informed of the doings of parliament as they are at the present time, for they were entirely at the mercy of reporters who juggled the debates to suit the policy of their respective papers. Even so honest a man as Dr. Johnson was not above declaring that when he was reporting in the House, he "always took good care not to let the Whig dogs have the best of it."

The Great Unknown

Upon this devil's carnival of unrest and confusion the Letters of Junius descended like bombshells. Nothing like them had ever been seen before. To add to their piquancy nobody knew who was the author. They attracted rich and poor alike; the rich, because they never knew which of their number might next be chosen for the lash of the writer and the poor because they revelled in the novelty of seeing a class from whom they received little else but abuse and injustice getting a well-deserved chastisement. To quote the words of an able writer: The letters 'are remarkable for the classical chastity of their language, the exquisite force and perspicuity of their argument, the keen severity of their reproach, the extensive information they evince, their fearless and decisive tone and above all, for their stern and steady attachment to the purest principles of the constitution. This acquired for them a popularity which no series of letters have ever possessed, nor perhaps ever will; but what is of far greater importance they have diffused among the body of the people a clearer knowledge of their constitutional rights than they had ever before attained and animated them with a more determined spirit to maintain them inviolable." This extract tells better than I can express them the salient features of the letters.

Nobody knows to this day who the individual was who masqueraded so long and so successfully under the name of Junius. Notwithstanding the frantic exertions of the ministry, in spite of all sorts of traps baited for his capture, he succeeded in as completely concealing his personality as if he had been a transient visitor from another sphere. Not even Woodfall, the printer of the paper, was aware of his identity. No less than forty persons have at one time or another been put forward as the likely authors of the letters, among them Lyttleton, Sackville and Burke. Burke, however, emphatically denied the authorship and his word was regarded as conclusive. The claims put forward for the others are so slight, save in one instance, as to be held by competent authorities to be altogether untenable. The general consensus of opinion, however, now centres on Sir Philip Francis, as the author. His name was not brought into the controversy till the publication of the edition of 1812.

Sir Philip Francis

The writer was undoubtedly a man of independent means, entirely conversant with the doings of the court and of the government and imbued with the loftiest ideas of patriotism. He was, furthermore, well grounded in the law, as his letter to Lord Mansfield, the Lord Chief Justice, abundantly testifies. His general characteristics as well as the exceptional advantages he possessed for obtaining information, point almost conclusively to Sir Philip Francis, as the man. The amount of circumstantial evidence in favor of this contention, Lord Macaulay declared, would hold good in any civil or even criminal action. But, after all, the evidence is entirely circumstantial, and nobody in all probability, will ever discover the absolute identity of the author. That the writer enjoyed exceptional advantages of obtaining information, can be gleaned from the fact that within twenty four hours of Garrick acquainting the king with some news concerning Junius, that mysterious personage was in possession of the circumstance. This is how he addressed Garrick:

No. 10, 1771.

To Mr. David Garrick:

I am very exactly informed of your impertinent inquiries, and of the information you so busily sent to Richmond, and with what triumph it was received. I knew every particular of it the next day. Now, mark me, vagabond, keep to your pantomimes, or be assured you shall hear of it. Meddle no more, thou busy informer! It is in my power to make you curse the hour in which you dared to interfere with Junius." This is another instance of what Matthew Arnold would have termed a "serviceable prose style," but the reader needs to read the whole course of the letters in order to enjoy the full force of the fiery invective of which the writer had such wonderful command. His letters to the men who have already been mentioned and to Sir William Draper and Horne Tooke, are wonderful pieces of eloquent satire, and should be read for the beauty of their diction, if for no other reason.

Advice to the King

The boldness of the language and the stinging rebukes conveyed in such faultless style have a charm that no invective couched in less polished phraseology could possibly produce. As an instance of the writer's audacity may be cited his advice to the king to remember that "while the crown was acquired by one revolution, it may be lost by another.' It can easily be conceived that a person writing in such a vein would desire to remain anonymous. "I am the sole depositary of my secret,' he wrote, "and it shall die witth me." This was no empty boast, nor it would seem, was his further statement that the Letters would be immortal. At the present time, 150 years after their production, they enjoy as much popularity as ever for "their matter and their manner, the times they describe, the impression they produced on the public mind and the triumph of most of the doctrines they inculcate, all concur in stamping them for a passport to posterity."

The Letters of Junius deserve to live in history, for there can be little doubt that they were in a large measure, responsible for a timely awakening in the conscience of parliament as well as an incentive to the manful upholding of their birthright by the people. They will be always looked upon also as the groundwork on which the leading articles of our present day newspapers have been patterned.

MR. J.J. TURNER, SEN; ONE OF THE WINNERS

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., is to receive a new inside and outside tire at the expense of the Dominion Tire Co., Berlin, Ont., because his birthday falls on February 14th, and also that he is one of the majority of automobile owners, who first saw the light of day on that date.

The competition was open to all automobile owners, each owner to forward the date of birthday. The popular date was February 14, and all the St. Valentine's Day competitors receive a complete tire.

Dungeons To Be Opened.

Visitors to the Tower of London after the New Year will have an opportunity of viewing the Tower dungeons beneath the White Tower and the Bloody Tower, cells as deep as the moat itself. Although it is nearly forty years ago since the Tower was thrown open, these dungeons have never been available to visitors. The Office of Works, however, some time ago decided to clear them out and throw them open to the public. Furthermore, a large part of the Bloody Tower, hitherto used as quarters for some of the officials, will be opened, and the scene of the murder of the little princes will be sure to attract a large number of people. It might be mentioned that at present the tablet which marks the spot where the bones were found in the White Tower is covered over with a notice board prohibiting smoking.

Model of Politeness.

Sir Ernest Shackleton tells of an amusing incident which occurred during his famous expedition to the Antarctic. The greatest politeness was always exhibited by a certain professor, who was a member of the expedition, even in the most trying circumstances.

One night the professor called out to a colleague: "Are you busy, Mawson?"

"I am," said Mawson.

"Very busy?" asked the professor.

"Yes, very busy."

"If you are not too busy, Mawson, I am down a crevasse."

The polite professor was discovered hanging down a crevasse by his four fingers, a dangerous position which he could not have maintained for any appreciable length of time.

THE COST OF THE NEW LIGHTING

Ald. Johnston Says New Lights Will Cost $35 Each

Ald. Johnston has been the butt of a great deal of criticism over the cost of the new lighting.

It may interest those who do not know and who want to know that the new lights are costing $35 a piece per year; that is $3,500 for the one hundred lamps which at present light George, Charlotte, Simcoe and Hunter Streets.

Under the old system with the miserable blinking fifteen lights on the same area, the total cost was $674.

Who would go back into outer darkness?

Ald. Johnston gives his figures on the same basis used by those who have claimed the expenditure will reach $6,500.

SPECTACLES.

A Million in Gold Used by One Firm Alone Each Year.

Spectacles are made for and used by all classes of people and yet few mechanics know much about the way they are made. The lens glass comes from Europe, but the making of the blanks into finished lenses is all done in America. This includes heating and curving between dies, grinding, drilling and mounting. Gold-filled frames are largely used, nearly a million dollars worth of gold being used per year for this purpose by one firm.

Practically the entire supply of high-grade lens glass comes from Europe, being imported into the country in the form of small disks or blanks. These disks are but little larger than the finished lenses, and come in various shapes; oval and round for spherical lenses and squares with rounded corners for cylindrical meniscus and toric lenses.

Optical glass is probably the finest glass used in the arts to-day and is made especially for lenses. The requisites for good optical glass are that it shall be very hard, white and entirely free from blubbles or striae and absolutely uniform in density or refractive index. All defects must be carefully guarded against by scrupulous inspection. The manufacture of optical glass has so far progressed that to-day a common spectacle lens is made from far better glass than could be had for the finest optical instruments half a century ago.

Some idea of the immense variety of lenses called for in modern optical practice may be had when we learn that 7,200 different combinations are regularly furnished in sphero-cylinder lenses alone, and this simply in the uncut form.

Modern lens making necessitates heavy investments in machinery. Add to this the difficulty of finding experienced and competent workmen, and it is easily seen why there are so few lens plants on this side of the water.

Since the perfection of gold-filled metal, the number of spectacles and eye-glass frames and mountings made of this material has shown a very large yearly increase. Considering the importance of gold-filled wire and the many uses to which it is put, it seems surprising that so little is really known of this and how nearly equal to solid gold it is for many uses. The term gold filled is somewhat misleading! merely reversing it almost thoroughly explains both the material and the process.

Filled gold, as it might well be called, consists of a gold shell filled with an alloy of base metal. The popularity of gold filled is demonstrated by the fact that nearly $1,000,000 of fine gold is used annually in one plant alone, and half of this is used in the manufacture of the gold-filled wire from which spectacle and eye-glass frames and mountings are made.

Nail Almost Fatal.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 3.—In the absence of his family, William Harding, of Wireton, went to his chicken house to investigate a disturbance.

Standing on a box and peering into the coop, he lost his footing and plunged through a small window. The seat of his trousers caught on a stout nail and he hung there. Efforts to release himself were futile, and he quickly lapsed into unconsciousness.

Harding's wife and son, who had been visiting relatives, returned early and, not finding him, started a search. He was discovered, almost dead from exposure and exhaustion. His condition is considered critical.

Whitelaw Reid's Will Filed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The estate left by Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to Great Britain, and editor and part owner of The New York Tribune, was valued at $1,398,884 in a report filed at White Plains yesterday by the tax appraiser. With the exception of $53,500, the estate consists of personal property. The inheritance of Mrs. Reid, the widow, and principal beneficiary, is appraised at $1,289,885.

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.
Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. A NEW LOCAL ARTIST OF TALENT AND PROMISE

Miss Taylor's Exhibition of Her Work at the Public Library

A little Art Exhibition was held at the Public Library last Friday, which constituted the debut of Miss Kate Livingstone Taylor, daughter of Mr. Wilson Taylor, of the Collegiate.

Miss Taylor is studying in Toronto at present, but has previously studied in Detroit Art School. This exhibition of her work was a very modest one, and Miss Taylor does not make any pretentions to great accomplishments as yet. It was of the same nature as a young musician's first recital who is endeavoring to attain confidence in himself, and to see what other people think about his talent.

Those who went to this exhibition doubtless expected to see something very amateurish, but although Miss Taylor is as yet a student, her work has a great deal of promise and does not show that disproportion which indicates lack of training.

Her subjects are varied, and she displays a versatility of talent which is not often found in rising artists, or in some older artists.

She can paint a baby with all the delicacy and feeling that Nature herself bestows upon that little work of fine art; or she can paint a reaped corn field shot through with the oblique rays of the setting sun, and give it striking effect.

Miss Taylor has of course, a great many sketches, many of them only half finished, but sufficient to show that she has the making of a true artist in her. Her chief aim as she avows, is to get at the soul of every subject, whether the model be an old man or merely a few apples on a table. Some people might think that an apple has no soul, but they would think differently if they saw the group of apples painted by Miss Taylor.

There are too few young people with Miss Taylor's accomplishments and aspirations among us, and she is to be congratulated upon the high standard of her work and encouraged in her ambition to do only the best work. There is nothing showy or cranky about Miss Taylor, or her art, she is modest and retiring and is trying to make good use of the talent which she certainly possesses. Her motto might well be that of the artist, Frederick Watts: "The Utmost for the Highest."

BULLER MAYOR

Three Aldermen and Two New Men for the Council

Four Members and J. M. Greene for Board of Education

J. B. McWilliams for the Utilities' Commissioner

The majority of voters who marked their ballots today have figured on the result of the elections.

Here are the winners as picked by "A Subscriber."

For Mayor—Ald. Buller.

For Aldermen—Ald. Anderson, Ald. Duffus, Ald. Johnston, Mr. W. S. Robinson and Mr. F. H. Dobbin.

For Utilities Commissioner—Mr. J. B. McWilliams.

For Board of Education—Messrs. John Crane, W. H. Hill, Col. Miller, Dr. Middleton and J. M. Greene.

"A Subscriber" further prophesies that the bridge by-law will be defeated by a big margin and that if the by-law for the motor driven fire apparatus is passed it will be by a very small majority.

Going outside the city, "A Subscriber" who has been in both places, says that Local Option will be sustained in Bobcaygeon, where a repeal by-law is being voted and that Cobourg will vote in favor of taking Local Option, but there will not be a majority of two-thirds.

BOOZE FIGHTS

Contests on To-day in Bobcaygeon, Cobourg and Marmora

Among the more important fights for and against Local Option, today, are Sault. Ste. Marie, Barrie and Cobourg. The Soo has fourteen licenses. Barrie has eleven and Cobourg has twelve.

Other contests and the number of licenses are: Arnprior 7; Aylmer 3; Brampton 3; Brockville 3; Meaford 3; Napanee 8; Paris 5; Tilsonburg 4; Wiarton 4; Marmora 3.

Tweed, Bobcaygeon and Bracebridge are among the places where a repeal vote is being taken.

A Happy Thought

Asked today what they thought of their prospects, all three candidates for the Mayor's chair, said they were confident in winning.

THE MAYOR GETS ABUSE AND $500

What does the Mayor get?

This is a question that has been asked repeatedly during the past few days. If the question were to be put to those who have held the office, the answer most likely would be, abuse.

But the statement of receipts and expenditures of the city shows that the Mayor receives a grant of $500.

NEW SERIES OF BOOKS IN THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—The work of the Roman Catholic Textbook Commission, which was appointed by the Bishops of Ontario several years ago, is now nearly completed, and it is expected that a new series of readers and other books for use in the Separate schools of the province will shortly be forthcoming as a result of the commission's labors.

A sitting of the commission will be held in Toronto within the next few days, when Rev. Charles A. Mea, of Kingston, will come here to join his colleagues—Rev. H. J. Canning, diocesan inspector of Catholic schools, and J. F. Fowler, inspector of Separate schools. Bishop Fallon of London, Ont., is associated with the commissioners.

PETERBORO BIRDS WELL UP AT ORILLIA SHOW

Frank Head's Exhibits Carried Off Big Share of Prizes

Local birds carried off many prizes in the Orillia Poultry Show, which was held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week. The local exhibitors Messrs. Jas. Baptie and Frank Head, were both very successful.

Mr. Head had eleven birds entered in the open class and with these he won the following: 1st, cock; 1st and 4th, hen; 3rd, cokcerel and 1st and 2nd, pullet. The winning of these prizes reflect great credit upon the birds handled by Mr. Head for there were 64 birds competing in the classes he entered.

Mr. Head also won special prizes donated by Canadian Barred Plymouth Rock Club; the W. H. Bennet Shield, valued at $85.00 for best collection of barred Plymouth Rocks, (win once), $2.50 gold piece for best display of barred Plymouth Rocks, (win once), special in best cock; special in best hen, and special in best pullet.

The show itself was a great success, there being about 900 birds exhibited.

PREMIER'S CONDITION FELT TO BE SERIOUS

To-day's Bulletins Say There is no Immediate Danger.

The Premier Has Had Recurrent Attacks of Heart Trouble.

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Jan. 5—Reports at Manhattan Hotel this morning say Sir James Whitney's condition is unchanged and there is no immediate cause for alarm.

LATER BULLETIN

The condition of Sir James Whitney was pronounced unchanged today. He is suffering from a nervous breakdown and heart trouble. "The Premier's condition is serious, but not critical," said Dr. Herman Biggs, nerve specialist, in attendance.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Dr. Pyne says Sir James passed a comparatively comfortable night and at noon he was resting in quiet. He had short periods of delirium alternating with coma and there were intervals when he recognized those about the beds. When he awoke this morning he asked where he was and after some time he understood the situation. Later he lapsed into a half stupor.

Dr. Pyne stated it was very difficult to state anything positive when the heart is affected. Although very weak and in a critical condition, patients sometimes rally and live for years. Sir James' symptoms have been bad. Through lack of circulation his extremities have become cold. At times he has been delirious and unable to recognize those around him, then he would rally and be quite bright again.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—The feeling here regarding Sir James Whitney is very pessimistic.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Sir James Pliny Whitney, Premier of Ontario, is resting quietly to-day at the Hotel Manhattan, where he has been ill for more than two weeks. While it is admitted that his condition is serious, both Dr. R. A. Pyne, the Ontario Minister of Education, and Dr. Herman Biggs, the nerve specialist, who is in charge of the case, stated that they apprehend no immediate danger.

Dr. Biggs visited Sir James shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon, and after leaving the patient he said that Sir James was no worse, but was resting comfortably.

Dr. R. A. Pyne and Horace Wallis, the Premier's private secretary, spent some time with the patient, and Lady Whitney early in the evening, and stated that they considered him in no immediate danger.

The news that a rumor of the Premier's death had reached Toronto caused a distinct shock to the members of the party. There was nothing in the condition of the Premier, they maintained, to justify any rumor even of danger.

"He is poorly," was Dr. Pyne's comment, "but we have every hope that he will rally."

Dr. Biggs said: "His condition is serious, but I apprehend no immediate danger of a fatal termination."

Toronto Stunned.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—When the alarming news reached Toronto yesterday morning that the illness of Sir James Whitney in New York had taken a serious turn, and that he could not last out the day, it caused a great shock. Variations of this were spread through the streets during the succeeding hours, reaching at one time the definite report that Sir James had passed away.

For several days Sir James' colleagues in Queen's Park have known that he was not progressing towards recovery as the first week of his trip south promised. Two weeks ago yesterday he left Washington for New York, intending to return to Toronto by Christmas. But the excitement of the journey, in view of his then weakened state, developed complications that forced him to obey the emphatic mandates of his physician and go to bed.

Shortly after ten o'clock yesterday morning Hon. J. J. Fey, Attorney-General and acting Premier, received the startling news in the folowing words from Dr. Pyne:—

"Sir James is seriously ill with a disease of the heart, and the public ought to know it."

Subsequent message from New York stated that the condition of the Ontario Premier, was precarious.

Suiting the action to the word, Mr. Foy caused the news to be communicated to Bishop Sweeney, Archdeacon Cody and Rev. Father Canning, with the request that it be transmitted generally to the clergy throughout the city.

Messages were sent to members of the Government out of the city. Hon. James S. Duff was reached at Cookstown; Hon. I. B. Lucas, after some great difficulty, at Markdale; Hon. W. J. Hanna was in Montreal, Hon. Adam Beck and Hon. J. O. Reaume are abroad, and only cable messages could reach them.

During the day the telegraph and telephone offices were deluged with inquiries for confirmation of the worst aspect of the news. As soon as the newspaper offices opened the switchboard staffs had to be doubled, and messages rained in from every corner of the province. Twice the rumor was started that the end had come.

Sir James left Toronto early in December for a tour in the south in an effort to restore his health. He had suffered a nervous breakdown, and Dr. Pyne considered that a short trip would be sufficient to put him back in good condition.

On the way back from the south, Sir James became seriously ill in New York, and took apartments at the Manhattan on Dec. 14. Since that time he was constantly in charge of a nurse, while the two physicians were in attendance. All telephone communication was cut off from his apartment, and Lady Whitney was with him most of the time.

After a few days he rallied, then fell back once more, but even then Dr. Pyne thought a prolonged rest and quiet would restore him. On Friday last, however, his heart action began to cause some alarm. He rallied, but had several attacks of the same nature. While these would not alarm the physicians in a young man, the fact of Sir James being over 70 caused them to watch him closely.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY

The bulletins on the condition of the Premier are not encouraging.

LEAVES ON BUYING TRIP TO EUROPE

Mr. S. Dickson Hall Sails on the Carmania.

Mr. S. Dickson Hall of Richard Hall & Sons, Ltd., has taken passage on the Carmania, sailing from New York on Saturday, Jan. 10th, for Europe, in the interests of his company. Mr. Hall usually only makes one trip to Europe each year, but after having purchased in the fall of 1913 more than on any previous trip, his company finds that without making a special trip they will be short of goods for the spring of 1914.

This will make Mr. Hall's forty-seventh time across the Atlantic, and will include a trip to Paris and Berlin in search of the extremely new styles in ready-to-wear garments and millinery and French dress goods novelties.

A SENTENCE OF TWO YEARS

For Boys Who Broke Into Stores and Committed Thefts

Two years in Central Prison was the penalty meted out to Ernest Jamieson and Maxwell McClelland this morning at the County Court by Magistrate Dumble, who acted in the absence of His Honor Judge Huycke, who is in Cobourg.

The boys, who are seventeen and eighteen respectively, were charged with several thefts, amounting in all to the extent of about $200.

G. N. Gordon defended the prisoners and F. D. Kerr conducted the prosecution.

In imposing the sentence Magistrate Dumble said that the Parol Board would be advised of the case, and that in all probability they would be given their freedom in six months owing to their previous good conduct and also that they had never been in trouble before.

The series of thefts covered a period of about three months, when Braunds store was broken into and jewellery to the value of nearly $100 was stolen. Bradshaw's, Lillico's and other stores in the West End were also entered.

At first the police experienced some difficulty, but Detective Newhall and P. C. Meagher discovered a clue in the way of finger prints and shortly afterwards the youths were in the cells.

SEA GIVES UP THE BODY OF AVIATOR JEWELL

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The waves that troubled the sea yesterday washed to shore at Edgemore, Long Island, a man's trunk, armless, legless, headless. It was washing back and forth with the ebb and tide of the waves when an Italian laborer saw it. The body was taken to Truddena morgue.

On Oct. 13th, 1913, Aviator Albert J. Jewel started to fly from Hempstead Plains L.I., to partake in an aviation meet on Staten Island. The man's trunk that the Italian found pounding on the beach was all that is left of Jewel. The police have declined so far to believe that a positive identification has been established, but the eaten body was Jewel's to the best belief of his uncle, William H. Carey; his widow, Mrs. Jewel, and G. H. LaPointe, a friend who knew him well.

A ceaseless swishing back and forth at the ocean's bottom or the snapping of hungry sharks, or possibly something else, had worn away all but a few shreds of clothing, and there was nothing on the trunk save one side of a woollen undershirt and a paper vest.

It is the paper vest that seems to identify the body almost beyond doubt, for it is the make that all aviators wear when they are flying where the temperature is below freezing. Furthermore the stitching very closely together in the vest quite corresponds to the one which LaPointe saw Jewel put on early in the morning of October 13th.

What happened to Jewel will never be known. But the terrible fact that his trunk floated at last to shore with neither arms nor legs nor head indicates clearly enough that there was a frightful accident to his machine before it fell, or that man-eating sharks pounced upon him somewhere out in the Atlantic.

MARRIED YOUNG LADY OF NORWOOD WHILE HE HAD WIFE AND FAMILY

Thos. Ridyard Admits His Deception to Her Father, Who Arrives Too Late to Prevent the Marriage

NORWOOD, Jan. 5.—For several months Thos. Ridyard, an Englishman, had been keeping company with a very fine young lady in Norwood, the daughter of Mr. Wm. Rogers, caretaker at the Methodist Church.

Ridyard, until recently, was in the bakery business here, when he gave up the business, he secured a position as baker in Chapleau. He sent a ticket to Miss Rogers, requesting her to come to him at once, as he was too busy to come for her, so that they might be married.

On Tuesday last she left her home in Norwood, and on Wednesday, at 7 o'clock they were married in Chapleau.

On Wednesday night about 10:30 Rev. Mr. Copeland of Norwood was phoned from Peterboro, that Ridyard had a wife and three small children in England. Mr. Copeland lost no time in letting Mr. Rogers know the situation, and he finding out that the information received from Peterboro was true, started for Chapleau, and finding that his daughter had been married at Chapleau, he charged Ridyard with his deception.

At first the man denied having a wife and family, but finally admitted that he was a married man. Mr. Rogers returned to Norwood, with his daughter, after leaving Ridyard in the hands of the law.

Ridyard has resided in this city for some time, and the information that he was married, was sent to Norwood by an acquaintance who knew the facts. He has relatives living here.

STRINGENT LAWS FOR PROTECTION OF GAME

Number of Wild Ducks, it is Estimated Has Decreased 65 Per Cent

Four years ago a call went out from Ontario demanding the services of Mr. Kelly Evans, as Fisheries Commissioner, to investigate fisheries conditions of the Province of Ontario, which resulted in a lengthy report and suggesting the non-export of fish, and Government control of the fisheries, due to the continuous depletion noticeable in the Great Lakes.

Ordinarily the people of Ontario, in fact Canada at large, are very hard to arouse. They are hard-working, easy going and astonishingly patient. But, once they are aroused they can be trusted to right any wrong and suppress any evil.

To-day the people of Ontario are being aroused, because laws which permit the commercial slaughter of wild life for the pecuniary and gastronomic benefit of a small number of persons within Ontario, under conditions which threaten its extermination, are directly against the interest of the 4,000,000 other people, who also have an interest in the game.

Because from 50 to 95 per cent. of our ducks, geese and other game have already been destroyed.

Because unless some such law as the non-sale of game is passed, the ten coming years or less, will see the extermination of that part of our game which is an object of commercial exploitation.

Because it is a fixed principle that every wild species of mammal, bird or reptile that is pursued for money-making purposes eventually is wiped out of existence.

Because it is asserted on the best of authority that 75 per cent. of the game which is sold in Ontario is purveyed by the highest class cafes and hotels and served at prices much beyond the purse of the average man. As the law now stands any hotel or cafe can make a gross average of $1200.00 a month out of ducks alone in the larger cities, and all at the expense of the public.

Because the people who eat game in Ontario do not know what hunger is, except by hearsay. "Purchased game is used chiefly in overfeeding, and as a rule, does more harm than good."

Because game is not properly utilized to reduce the cost of living, through furnishing a food supply, if it were used in this way, restrictions being taken off, the best species of game birds would be practically exterminated within one year, and the cost of living would be immediately increased through the waste of a natural resource of almost inestimable value.

Because eighteen of the United States to date have practically no-sale laws, and twenty-six either altogether or almost altogether prohibit the sale of game.

Because the stopping of the sale of game will be the greatest single step in the direction of bringing back our game birds to us, or at least many forms. A few years with non-sale would undoubtedly show an appreciable increase in numbers of species now very much reduced.

Because experience has proved that the limit law on ducks cannot be enforced either in respect to the market hunter, the commission merchant, or restauranteur and hotel-keeper, so long as the sale of ducks is permitted.

Because it has been proved that game can be successfully propagated on game farms, and the legitimate desire for game can in time be supplied from this source.

Provided the sale of game can be accomplished without danger to the wild stock, there can be no possible objection to it.

But the entire history of conservation shows that the policy of marketing wild game is dangerous to its very existence.

On the other hand game may be propagated and sold under license with the following results: the wild game is protected, the hotelkeeper and restauranteur may serve game to their patrons, and the farmer makes money in a legitimate manner. Fortunately game propagation is continually attracting more interest. Fish culture has long been a success. Why should not the propagation of game be put on a similar basis?

There is no question but what in time the only game on the market will be that supplied from game farms, unless we adopt the English system whereby shooting is limited to the landed proprietors.

An intimate knowledge of the use of wild life is indispensible to sane conservation. Anything known to be useful is always assured destruction. Hence viewed from a utilitarian standpoint, there is a certain value in classifying life as injurious or beneficial. The danger lies not in the classification itself, but in the risk attendant upon a judgment hastily made, or on one based on circumstantial evidence.

It appears that the economic value of wild life seldom becomes evident until the form becomes extinst or at least diminished in numbers. Ignorance has caused the waste characteristic of the past. Knowledge must prevent waste in the future. Man is ruler over nature. He may conserve the many advantages she offers or he may destroy them. The recognition of natural conditions to meet the needs of man is a necessity. That it be attended with judgment and forethought is but common sense.

The greatest value to be derived from any game bird is in seeing it, photographing it, and enjoying its living company in its native haunts. Who will care anything about it, or love the forests, the marshes, or the streams when they become destitute of wild life, and desolate?

It is the duty of every sportsman in Ontario, to come out and express his feeling at this time in opposition to the tactics employed by the "Game Hogging" market hunter with his wheat and barley and "deadly magazine pump gun."

Every man who claims the least spark of sportsmanship should voice his sentiment in no uncertain tone and impress upon his representative to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, the necessity of his services at this time in this connection.

Thanking you in anticipation of the required space in your valuable paper, believe me,

Yours most truly,
Edw. R. Kerd.
Pres. North Essex Branch, Ontario Forest, Fish and Game Protective Association.

The above is a letter received by Mr. C. Wood, sec., Peterboro Gun Club, who says:

"Let our local sportsmen and all others interested in the conservation of our wild life, get together and stop this slaughter before it is too late, by having this law passed at the earliest possible moment, to stop the sale of ALL game and prevent the destruction of our song birds etc. A petition wil likely be circulated to help in the good work.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JAN. 5, 1914.

DOCTORS OR GRANDMOTHERS.

SCIENTISTS AND PHYSICIANS now seem to agree that to sterilize milk does not prevent the possibility of conveying consumption, but rather predisposes those who drink it to tubercular infection, that sterilized or condensed milk is dangerous for children who are fed on it. As a control experiment a number of kittens were fed exclusively upon sterilized milk. They all died within a fortnight. It is further stated that the method known as "Pasteurization," is not efficient and does not destroy tubercular germs, that sterlization methods demanding high temperatures destroy the food value of milk.

All this makes very strange reading, when we reflect that this process of treating milk was in the first place the invention of doctors and scientists. This is not merely a case of doctors differing, but of doctors contradicting themselves. If this sterilized milk is so dangerous as these doctors make out, they have much to answer for in recommending it to those who live their lives dodging the tubercular germ. Mankind has been drinking milk for, no one knows how long, and has never sterilized it till lately, and it is doubtful if there is not more consumption to-day than ever. The possibility of contracting consumption from milk has been over-estimated. As for tubercular germs there is scarcely any place or anything which does not contain them along with other germs. The only place that is devoid of germs is a vacuum, and that condition is more likely to prove fatal than a stuffed room. Smallpox germs prey upon those who have the particular food in their system that the germs feed upon. And if a person gets run down by disease or neglect there are always armies of tubercular germs ready to take hold of him, like vultures waiting for the wounded soldier to die before devouring him. Ordinary homely care, cleanliness, plain living and temperate habits in all things will do more for a person in the way of preventing consumption than all the patent quack methods that are recommended. We are sometimes safer in the hands of our grandmother than under the best of doctors.

TORONTO'S MISTAKE.

THE CITIZENS OF TORONTO by their vote decided against the buying of the Street Railway. The citizens of Toronto have a right to their own views, but they have made a big mistake, and in a few years they will realize this to their deep regret. Municipal ownership must come. It has come to stay in all the great cities in England and has never failed where it has been controlled efficiently. One of the most profitable concerns in any city of the size of Toronto is its street car system and these profits could be diverted into the city's treasury and eventually into the pockets of the ratepayers. In every case where a city has taken over the street railway, fares have been reduced and a better system and service has been the result. The reduction of car fares in a city like Toronto is a great consideration, for, in calculating the cost of living, car fares make a large item for a family in a year.

But although the vote in Toronto went against the street railway purchase, there seems to be every indication that the people have an open mind upon the subject and it may well be that with a little more light they may see that the consumation of every intelligent and independent community is Municipal ownership of every vital concern which involves the safety, the comfort and the progress of the city.

TOO MUCH MILITARISM.

GERMANY PAYS a big price for her boast of having the finest land-force in the world. It is certainly, like her navy, too large for any possible invasion of her territory. Besides being a burden upon the people, her military system is one of the greatest despotisms in the world. There is no such thing as volunteering or enlisting in Germany, every male born in the fatherland is doomed to serve a term of years in the army, and the great majority, while they are patriotic enough to defend their country in times of danger, have no love for compulsory military service.

It is not generally known that most of those who leave Germany do so to escape this military slavery. Many of the Germans in Ontario who have become very creditable citizens, left the Fatherland for this very reason. There was a great exit from Germany during and after the Franco-German war. There is a colony of Germans in Hastings County, called the Kleinsteuber Settlement, founded many years ago by five or six brothers who came out to Canada at the time of the Franco-German war. One or two of these men served in that war. The brothers cleared the land, established farms, built a church and raised families; three of them are still living, the eldest is over eighty years. They can remember Prince Albert and Queen Victoria in Gotha, their native place, having attended the same school as Prince Albert.

Although these German settlers have a natural love for their Fatherland, they speak very bitterly of the conscription system. Many of the best young men in Germany to-day hate and defest it, having other tastes and ambitions, they regard the time spent in the army as a waste of some of their best years. There are a great many Germans in the British Isles, who have become naturalized British subjects from this reason. It is to be hoped that the extra taxation which, while it is levied upon the upper classes, will eventually come out of the poor, will result in a saner and less rigorous military policy. Militarism is for purposes of defence and not mere display or competition with other nations. Germany seems to be the fighting-cock of the nations just now. But it is pretty expensive to keep up such needless crowing.

IS THE LAW AN ASS?

THE MAN WHO was released at Montreal after serving six years of a sentence of fifteen years for a crime of which he is now found to have been innocent, is at present knocking about Montreal in an emaciated condition, unable to work owing to his confinement in prison for so long under a false charge.

If this report be true, it is certainly a case for the Government to take up. The assumption that the man has no claim upon the Government, because "the King can do no wrong," is a foolish and a callous one. The Law has done a wrong, unwittingly maybe, but this man has suffered for another's guilt and is the victim of the Law's mistake.

It has been stated on various occasions that "the Law is an ass," and this case seems to be another confirmation of that saying. We cannot give this man back the years we have stolen from his life, but we can in some measure alleviate his present destitution, if not make some reparation for the injustice that we have done him.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

HOW MANY PREACHERS in Montreal did not preach yesterday from the text, "Ho! every one that thirsteth"?

"LIVE CATTLE and meat rushed over the line. A London man killed," says the Globe in its "contents" column. It is the pace that kills.

CHARLES DAWSON, the well-known entropologist, has discovered that the Eskimos have more back-bone than the rest of humanity. Well, they need it.

IT IS RUMORED that Churchill and Lloyd George are at variance over the naval question. These two men can scarcely agree because they argue from different premises. One is on the sea while the other sticks tenaciously to the land —and the sea lord has even taken to the air lately.

PREMIER WHITNEY'S HEALTH is causing great alarm among his friends and supporters. He is at present lying at the Hotel Manhattan, New York, suffering from nervous prostration. Sir James has had a strenuous term of office and is undoubtedly the victim of over-application to Provincial affairs. He came into office under adverse conditions and has had an up-hill fight. Men of both parties will sympathize with him in his illness. Prayers were offered in several Toronto churches yesterday for the Premier's recovery.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Echo Answers—Who?
Calgary Herald.

During fifteen years of Liberal government whoever heard of "free food"? Don't all speak at once.

Canada on the C. P. R.
Canadian Gazette.

Proceeding to speak of his recent tour round the globe with the British Parliamentary party, Mr. Macmaster aroused amusement by recalling a remark made by the Lord Mayor of Melbourne that he had been in Canada, and that the Canadians were the finest people on the face of the earth. (Laughter and cheers. "I told him," said Mr. Macmaster, "I thought that must be true, as I had once been mistaken for an Australian. (Laughter.) About 20 years ago, however, when travelling in the Indian Ocean, a clergyman told me he thought I must be an Australian. I said, 'I am from Canada.' Whereupon he observed: 'Ah, yes, Canada; that is the place on the Canadian Pacific Railway.'" (Much laughter.)

Leaders Wanted.
Mail and Empire.

If in the City Council there are not men of the vision and courage necessary for leadership—men really deserving of the blind confidence the people give them—then Toronto's affairs will go from bad to worse. For large policies the city must look to the best men it elects. Such policies do not from the ground arise, and the inspiration of them too seldom is given on polling day. Voters must beware of candidates who are no more than apt parrots, repeating noisily the catchwords they get from the most blatant, who unwarrantedly take it upon themselves to speak for the crowd. Toronto has little present or future public use for men of that talent. The candidates who hasten to change their opinions at a "Hoot, mon!" from any quarter are better left at home.

Poultry Farming.
Canadian Gazette.

Success is not given to every Western poultry farmer. He has the dry climate in his favor. Mr. Olivier tells us that owing to this dryness of the climate it is unnecessary to heat the chicken-house, and a good percentage of hens lay through the winter; everything depends on proper housing and feeding. At the Agricultural College of Manitoba poultry farming is taught, and a young man could go through a course there and learn how to build his chicken-houses and how to care for the birds. He could then start with 500 birds, and these would yield him a net profit of £200 a year. "But," said Mr. Olivier sagely, "there is a great deal to learn. you should impress upon you readers that it pays to learn poultry farming in Western Canada thoroughly before attempting to start a farm for themselves. When once it has been thoroughly mastered, few things pay better than poultry farming."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—Mr. Burnham might explain why our governments make such frantic efforts in Great Britain to get men and money; how a big local firm sends its products all the way to England and sells no dearer than here.

We might start a minimum wage on board ship and in our wealthy agricultural districts. Recently after paying the employment fee $3, I worked like a nigger for ten days on board a Montreal ship, had a wage sheet made out for 25c which took two days to collect at Liverpool. There are worse slums and higher rents here than in England.

Yours, etc.,
A READER.

P.S.—Of course I am not a genuine working man.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Over a million dollars is a conservative estimate of what the water famine since Christmas night has cost the city of Montreal.

Seven soldiers were killed and twelve badly and twelve slightly injured at Woippy Station near Metz, Germany, on Saturday.

The disappearance of a disk of radium valued at $1,800 from the Hahnemann Hospital, New York, is reported. The supposition is that it has been stolen.

Enver Bey, at one time leader of the Young Turk party, and formerly Turkish military attache at Berlin, was yesterday appointed Minister of War of the Turkish empire.

Four Egyptian convicts were killed and 50 wounded Saturday when the prisoners confined in the neighboring Tourah penitentiary mutinied and were fired on by the guards.

Notice posted in the car shops of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at New Haven, Conn., makes effective a reduction of ten per cent. in the wages of several hundred employes.

Patrolman John Gordon of Detroit is dead, as the result of injuries received when he was shot by bandits. Gordon was the seventh Detroit officer to be killed while on duty since last March.

Norman Labelle of Toronto was sentenced to four years in the Kingston Penitentiary on Saturday. He was convicted for attempting to sell two stolen diamond rings. He had a bad record.

During 1913 in Montreal there were 604 bodies taken to the morgue, while the number of deaths investigated were 1,156. There were 68 drownings, 46 suicides, and 9 car fatalities.

A Brave Constable.

MONTREAL, Jan. 5.—Facing revolver shots from two burglars who had broken into the establishment of J. Saul & Co., watchmakers and jewelers in St. Antoine street early yesterday morning, Constable Gingras returned their fire and held them until assistance arrived.

Alfred Dagerais and Louis Cousineau, when searched, were found to have in their possession between $500 and $600 worth of jewelry. They will be arraigned to-day.

Why Not Short-Haired Dames?

A well-known London hairdresser would condemn thousands of women to the barber's shears if he could. "One woman in every four," this daring man argues, "would improve her looks by shortening her hair. Look at that woman with her skimpy locks all skewered and frowsy, or that other with her slovenly, lustreless hair, that doesn't look as if it had grown on a woman's head. Only one woman in ten can or does give her hair half its due. Cut it short, and you have a woman of distinction at once.

"You'd be surprised," declares he, "if you knew the number of women who at one time or another have a passion to be shorn, but only the masculine woman has the courage to submit to the scissors. She wears her hair far too short to prove her equality with man—a 'short cut' to emancipation. If some of her less angular sisters would show how pretty short curls really are when they frame a pretty face we could make a start on the way to hygiene and beauty.

"Why do I dissuade women from surrendering their tresses?" he asked. "Well, you see, I have no suicidal tendencies, and I am not yet in a position to buy back the family estate in France."

Houses That Defy Skeeters.

In the steel and cement house for the tropics, designed in England by T. F. G. Mayer, keeping out the mosquito has been a chief consideration but the building seems to have advantages in resistance to tropical storms.

The plinth on which the structure is built, with the floor and a low wall, are of concrete. The wall is extended by a steel frame, and this is filled in with especially made and very strong mosquito netting, kept taunt and made secure against entrance by perforated steel plates on both sides. Lobby entrances at the ends are closed by spring doors.

The roof has non-conducting slates of fibre-cement, is ventilated by lower windows at the ends, and is completely separated from the lower part of the house by an asbestos ceiling. Shutters, manipulated from the inside by turning handles, surround the building.

There may be several storey, and if screen and blinds are not sufficient division, brick partitions may be used by sacrificing something of the cool openness. The little wood necessary is treated against white ants.

DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

CHAPTER XVI.

CAPTAIN FLANAGAN MEETS A DUKE.

A LITTLE before sunrise the yacht Laura swam into the gulf of Ajaccio. The Corsican mountains, their bulks in shadowy gray, their undulating crests threaded with yellow fire, cast their images upon the smooth, tideless, silver dulled waters. Forward a blur of white and red marked the town.

"Isn't it glorious?" said Laura, rubbing the dew from the teak rail. "And, oh, what a time we people waste in not getting up in the mornings with the sun!"

"I don't know," replied Fitzgerald. "Scenery and sleep; of the two I prefer the latter. I have always been routed out at dawn and never allowed to turn in till midnight. You can always find scenery, but sleep is a coy thing."

And as he looked into her clear bright eyes he knew that before this quest came to its end he was going to tell this enchanting girl that he loved her "better than all the world;" and, moreover, he intended to tell it to her with the daring hope of winning her, money or no money.

Money wasn't everything. She herself had made that statement the first night out. He had been afraid of Breitmann, but somehow that fear was all gone now. Did she care, if ever so little?

He veered his gaze round and wondered where Breitmann was. Could the man be asleep on a morn so vital as this? No; there he was, on the very bowsprit itself. Fitzgerald determined, once they touched land, never to let him go beyond sight. It would not be human for him to surrender any part of the treasure without making some kind of a fight for it, canning or desperate. If only the women folk remained on board!

Breitmann gazed toward the town motionless.

It was difficult for Fitzgerald not to tell the great secret then and there, but his caution whispered warningly. There was no knowing what effect it would have upon the impulsive girl at his side. And, besides, there might have been a grain of selfishness in the repression. All is fair in love or war, and it would not have been politic to make a hero out of Breitmann.

"You haven't said a word for five minutes," she declared. How boyish he looked for a man of his experience!

"Silence is some times good for the soul," sententiously.

"Of what were you thinking?"

His heart struck hard against his breast. What an opening, what a moment in which to declare himself! But he said: "Perhaps I was thinking of breakfast. This getting up early always makes me ravenous. The smell of the captain's coffee may have had something to do with it."

"You were thinking of nothing of the sort," she cried. "I know. It was the treasure and this great-grandson of Napoleon. Sometimes I feel I only dreamed these things. I never read nor heard of such a thing."

"Nor I. But there's land yonder," he said without an answering smile.

"Then," in an awed whisper, "you believe something is going to happen there?"

"One thing I am certain of, but I cannot tell you just at this moment."

A bit of color came to her cheeks, as if, reading his eyes, she did not know this thing he was so certain of! Should she let him tell her?

"There is only one thing lacking—this great-grandson himself. He will be yonder somewhere. For the man in the chimney was he or his agent."

"And aren't you afraid?"

"Of what?" proudly.

"It will not be a comedy. It is in the blood of these Napoleons that nothing shall stand in the path of their desires, neither men's lives nor woman's honor."

"I am not afraid. There is the sun at last. What a picture! And the shame of it—I am hungry!"

At half after 6 the yacht let go her anchor a few hundred yards from the quay. Every one was astir by now, but at the breakfast table there was one vacant chair—Breitmann's. M. Ferraud and Fitzgerald exchanged significant glances. In fact, the Frenchman drank his coffee hurriedly and excused himself. Breitmann was not on deck, neither was he in his stateroom. The door was open. M. Ferraud without any unnecessary qualms of conscience went in. One glance at the trunk was sufficient. The lock hung down, disclosing the secret hollow. For once the little man's suavity forsook him, and he swore like a sailor, but softly. He rushed again to the deck and sought Captain Flanagan, who was enjoying a pipe forward.

"Captain, where is Mr. Breitmann?"

"Breitmann? Oh, he went ashore in one of the fruit boats. Missed th' motor."

Fitzgerald hove in sight. "Find him?"

"Ashore!" said M. Ferraud, with a violent gesture.

"Isn't it time to make known who he is?"

"Not yet. It would start too many complications. Besides, I doubt if he has the true measurements."

"There was ample time for him to make a copy."

"Perhaps."

"M. Ferrand?"

"Well?"

"I've an idea, and I have had it for some time, that you wouldn't feel horribly disappointed if our friends made away with the money."

M. Ferraud shrugged; then he laughed quietly.

"Well, neither would I," Fitzgerald added.

"My son, you are a man after my own heart. I was furious for the moment to think that he had outwitted me the first move. I did not want him to meet his confederates without my eyes on him. And there you have it. It is not the money, which is morally his; it is his friends, his lying, mocking friends."

"Are we fair to the admiral? He has set his heart on this thing."

"And shall we spoil his pleasure? Let him find it out later."

"Do you know Corsica?"

"As the palm of my hand."

"But the women?"

"They will never be in the danger zone. No blood will be spilled unless it be mine. He has no love for me and I am his only friend, save one."

"Suppose this persecution of Germany's was only a blind?"

"My admiration for you grows, Mr Fitzgerald. But I have dug too deeply into that end of it not to be certain that Germany has tossed this bombshell into France without holding a string to it. Did you know that Breitmann had once been hit by a spent bullet? Here," pointing to the side of his head. "He is always conscious of what he does, but not of the force that makes him do it. Do you understand me? He is living in a dream, and I must wake him."

The adventurers were now ready to disembark. They took nothing but rugs and hand bags, for there would be no preening of fine feathers on hotel verandas. With the exception of Hildegarde all were eager and excited. Her breast was heavy with forebodings. Who and what was this man Ferrand? One thing she knew—he was a menace to the man she loved—aye, with every throb of her heart and every thought of her mind.

The admiral was like a boy starting out upon his first fishing excursion. To him there existed nothing else in the world beyond a chest of money hidden somewhere in the pine forest of Aitone. He talked and laughed, pinched Laura's ears, shook Fitzgerald's shoulder, prodded Coldfield and fussed because the motor wasn't sixty horsepower.

"Father," Laura asked suddenly, "where is Mr. Breitmann?"

"Oh, I told him last night to go ashore early, if he would, and arrange for rooms at the Grand Hotel d'Ajaccio. He knows all about the place."

M. Ferraud turned an empty face toward Fitzgerald, who laughed. The great-grandson of Napoleon applying for hotel accommodations as a gentleman's gentleman and within a few blocks of the house in which the self same historic forbear was born! It had its comic side.

"Are there any brigands?" inquired Mrs. Coldfield. She was beginning to doubt this expedition.

"Brigands? Plenty," said the admiral, "but they are all hotel proprietors these times, those that aren't conveniently buried. From here we go to Carghese, where we spend the night, then on to Evisa and another night. The next morning we shall be on the ground. Isn't that the itinerary, Fitzgerald?"

"Yes."

"And be sure to take an empty carriage to carry canned food and bottled water," supplemented Cathewe. "The native food is frightful. The first time I took the journey I was ignorant. Happily it was in the autumn, when the chestnuts were ripe. Otherwise I should have starved."

"And you spent a winter or spring here, Hildegarde?" said Mrs. Coldfield.

"It was lovely then." There was a dream in Hildegarde's eyes.

The hotel omnibus was out of service, and they rode up in carriages. The season was over, and under ordinary circumstances the hotel would have been closed. A certain royal family had not yet left, and this fact made the arrangements possible. It was now very warm. Dust lay everywhere, on the huge palms, on the withered plants, on the chairs and railings and swam palpable in the air. Breitmann was nowhere to be found, but he had seen the manager of the hotel and secured rooms facing the bay. Later, perhaps two hours after the arrival, he appeared. In this short time he had completed his plans. As he viewed them he could see no flaw.

Now, it came about that Captain Flanagan, who had not left the ship once during the journey, found his one foot aching for a touch and feel of the land. So he and Holleran, the chief engineer, came ashore a little before noon and decided to have a bite of macaroni under the shade of the palms in the Place des Palmiers. A bottle of warm beer was divided between them. The captain said faugh as he drank it.

"Say," said Holleran, suddenly stretching his lean neck, "will ye look t' see who's comin' along!"

Flanagan stared. "If ut ain't that son of a gun Picard I'll eat my hat!" The captain grew purple. "An' leavin' th' ship without orders!"

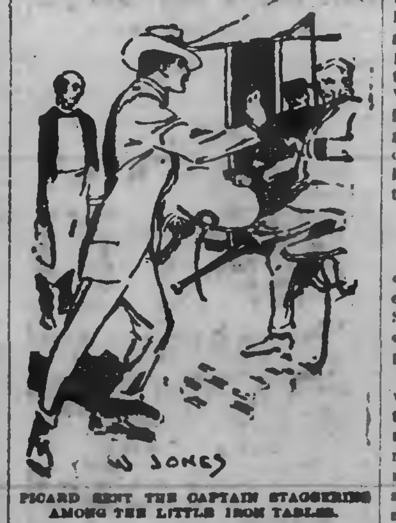
"An' the togs!" murmured Holleran.

"Watch me!" said Flanagan, rising and squaring his peg.

Picard, arrayed in clean white flannels, white shoes, a panama set rakishly on his handsome head, his fingers twirling a cane, came head-on into the storm. The very jauntiness of his stride was as a red rag to the captain. So, then, a hand, heavy and charged with righteous anger, descended upon Picard's shoulder.

"Right about face an' back to th' ship fast as yer legs c'n make ut!"

Picard calmly shook off the hand and, adding a vigorous push which sent the captain staggering among the little iron tables, proceeded nonchalantly.



PICARD SENT THE CAPTAIN STAGGERING AMONG THE LITTLE IRON TABLES.

Holleran leaped to his feet, but there was a glitter in Picard's eye that did not promise well for any rough and tumble fight. Picard's muscular shoulders moved off toward the vanishing point. Holleran turned to the captain, and, with the assistance of a waiter, the two righted the old man.

"Do you speak English?" roared the old sailor.

"Yes, sir," respectfully.

"Who was that?"

The waiter in reverent tones declared that the gentleman referred to was well known in Ajaccio, that he had spent the previous winter there and that he was no less a person than the Duke of— But the waiter never completed the sentence. The title was enough for the irascible Flanagan.

"Holleran, we go t' the commodore. The devil's t' pay. What's a dook doin' on th' ship, and we expectin' to dig up gold in yonder mountains! Look alive, man; they's villiany afoot!"

Holleran's jaw sagged.

"What's this you're telling me, Flanagan?" said the admiral, perturbed.

"Ask Holleran here, sir. He was with me when th' waiter said Picard was a dook. I've suspicioned his han's this long while, sir."

"Yes, sir; Picard it was," averred Holleran.

"Bah! Mistaken identity."

"I'm sure, sir," insisted Holleran. "Picard has a whisker mole on his chin, sir, like these forriners grow, sir. Picard, sir, an' no mistake."

"But what would a duke"—

"Aye, sir, that's the question," interrupted Flanagan, and added in a whisper: "Y' c'n buy a dozen dooks for a couple o' million francs, sir. Th' first officer, Holleran here, an' me—nobody else knows what we're after, sir, unless you gentlemen abaft, sir, talked careless. I say 'tis serious, commodore. He knows what we're lookin' for."

Holleran nudged his chief. "Tell th' commodore what we saw on th' way here."

"Picard hobnobbin' with Mr. Breitmann, sir."

Painting Scenery.

The huge paintings required as scenes for theatres are now, according to an article in The Scientific American, painted with the canvas lying flat on the floor, instead of as formerly, in an upright position. In this way the work can be done much more rapidly. The colors used are in powdered form, a barrel to each color.

Dreams.

Modern scientists know nearly as little about dreams as man did when the first sleeper had his first dream.

For the Children

Little Girl Feeding a Small Hungry Kid.

Until recently the milk of goats was not thought much of in this country and was used almost wholly by persons who were born in other lands and had learned its value in their former homes across the ocean. Now goat's milk is highly prized for use by invalids and babies and because of its scarcity costs very much more than the milk of cows.

The picture of the girl feeding the kid, however, was not taken in this country. The girl and the kid live on the Surrey downs, near Guilford, England, on what is said to be the only goat farm in that country. As the picture tells, little Miss Sheppee, for that is her name, helps about the farm. Why she feeds the kid from a bottle is hard to tell. Perhaps the mother goat is dead and the young one has no other means of getting a living. Anyhow, that is what she was doing when the camera man happened along.

How Paris Was Named.

Among the villages which Caesar conquered was one built of reeds, rushes and mud on a swampy island in the Seine. Mud predominated to such an extent that the Roman name for the place was Lutetia, or "Mudtown."

The Celts, who inhabited the place, were called "Parisii," and they burned their town of reeds and rushes and mud on the approach of an enemy rather than surrender. Caesar was not slow to see the advantages of the situation of the village, and he ordered a wall to be built around the island and a temple to Jupiter to be erected. A town sprung up almost at once about the temple, and later this was called after the ancient inhabitants, Parisii.

Thus we can fix the date of the birth of Paris at the time of Caesar, B. C. 52.

Rich Romans took up their residences on this island, and Julian was proclaimed emperor in 360. He built a great palace for himself on the left side of the river, and soon about this, as about the temple, a growing population swarmed. Later the two towns were united, and the Paris of today has grown from this beginning.

Flying Post.

Set a circle of chairs facing inward. Let one child sit on each chair and let the "it" stand in the center of the ring. Twist up a duster or large handkerchief into a ball. The seated players have to throw it from one to another across the ring, while the "it" has to try to catch it as it passes.

The seated players must not get up. If the duster falls outside the ring they may lean down and pick it up, but they must not leave their places. When the "it" catches it or secures it from the floor the child who last threw it gives up his place and becomes "it" in the middle of the ring.

Blind Man's Buff With a Wand.

Blindfold one of the company, who stands inside a circle formed by the others with a light cane or wand in his hands. The children circle round the "blind man" until a rap with the stick calls a halt. He then points his rod, and the one nearest it takes hold and must reply to three questions asked by the blind man, who tries to guess who it is. The captive, of course, uses every means to disguise his voice. If guessed correctly he takes the place in the center.

An Autumn Fancy.

Jack Frost is a wonderful artist,
With pupils by the score,
Who flock at autumn to paint the trees
With gold and reds galore.

At twilight they take out their palettes
And work the whole night through,
And not till the dawn of the morning
Can mortals see what they do.

The trees then all sparkle and shimmer
And stand out one by one,
With their flaming leaves of painted hues
Aglow in the rising sun.

I think when the moonlight is beaming
And the night is crisp and chill
I'll slip out into the woodlands
And sit there quiet and still.

And I'll watch the elves with their brushes
To see just what they do,
And when the next night darkens
They'll find me painting too.

PRUNING BY RAIN.

One of Nature's Many Methods of Thinning Her Forests.

Nature has many ways of thinning and pruning and trimming her forests—lightning strokes, heavy snows and storm winds to shatter and blow down whole trees here and there or break off branches as required. The results of these methods I have observed in different forests, but only once have I seen pruning by rain.

The rain froze on the trees as it fell and grew so thick and heavy that many of them lost a third or more of their branches. The view of the woods after the storm had passed and the sun shone forth was something never to be forgotten. Every twig and branch and rugged trunk was encased in pure crystal ice, and each oak and hickory and willow became a fairy crystal palace. Such dazzling brilliance, such effects of white light and irised light, glowing and flashing, I had never seen, nor have I since.

This sudden change of the leafless woods to glowing silver was, like the great aurora, spoken of for years and is one of the most beautiful of the many pictures that enrich my life. And besides the great shows there were thousands of others, even in the coldest weather, manifesting the utmost fineness and tenderness of beauty and affording noble compensation for hardship and pain.—Atlantic Monthly.

Red as a Cure.

In England, says the London Globe, apothecaries for many years were firm believers in the efficacy of the color red as a combatant of disease. Patients, especially those suffering from rheumatism, were frequently wrapped in red blankets and dressed in red clothes. "Let your nightcap be of scarlet," recommended Andrew Borden in his discourse on sleep, "and petycote of scarlet also," while a physician in the sixteenth century advised that the face be washed once a week and then wiped with a red cloth. Upon this latter item of the prescription great stress was laid—no doubt the color of the cloth was intended to act as an antidote against the chill of such frequent ablutions.

The Singing Lesson.

Edward, Mabel, Maud and Peter, also Willie Wee,
If you want to sing quite nicely please attend to me.
All together, not too loudly, when I've counted twice.
One for ready, two for starting. "Three blind mice."

Edward, you began too quickly. Mab was after me.
Maud and Peter missed the measure. So did Willie Wee.
Now, once more. Let's make it pretty,
singing is such fun.
One for ready, two for starting, "See how they run."

That was better. Now, once more, and in a gentle tone.
Listen to your neighbor's singing more than to your own.
That will make the music pretty. Off we go again.
There, that's all! But who would tell you lessons are in vain?

Turkey will soon open schools to teach its women useful trades and arts.

Don't Be a Jack-of-All-Trades

The day of the "Jack-of-all-trades" is passed. This is the time of the specialist, of the man qualified to do some one thing to the queen's taste—which means to the satisfaction of a critical boss. No concern can afford to place a high-grade equipment in the hands of low-grade men. Competition forces employers to meet skill with skill.

To make it short, have you any special equipment? Is there anything in you to command big pay?

Every month upwards of 400 I. C. S. students write to Scranton to tell of positions secured or bettered—of earnings increased and prospects brightened—through study of I. C. S. Courses. Last month the number was 416. The letters come from every section and from all sorts and conditions of men. Some of the writers live in Ontario—some live in British Columbia; some began with no more education than ability to read and write—some were college graduates; some had a good deal of spare time—some had to figure on every spare minute; some were well-to-do—some were obliged to save the pennies.

If you are a "live wire"—if you wish to make sure of the job you want—there is an I. C. S. way for you. To find out all about it without cost, mark and mail the coupon. Doing so will commit you to nothing, place you under no obligation, and may prove to be the turning point in your career.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

OPENING OF THE POULTRY SHOW

Many Birds Already Cooped at the Market Hall.

Practical Talk and Demonstration With Fowl.

A number of birds for exhibition at the Poultry Show in the Market Hall are already in their coup.

Tomorrow afternoon Miss Yates of the Guelph Agricultural College will give an address on Winter Production of Eggs. In the evening a talk and demonstration will be given, showing the proper methods of preparing fowl for the market and shipment.

Thursday afternoon Miss Yates will demonstrate on how to bone a fowl, and that evening the speaker will tell how to prepare fowl for the table, and also how to use the carving knife.

In the south window of Oak Hall are to be seen the numerous cups and other special prizes offered for competition at the show.

HARROWING STORY FROM THE NORTHWEST

Woman Lost Limbs From Frost After Being Driven From Home.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—A ghastly tale of a husband's ill-treatment of his wife appears in the usually staid columns of this week's Canada Gazette. It is detailed in the form of an order-in-council exempting from the customary homestead duties Mrs. Anna R. Haven, now Mrs. Orfensen, a Saskatchewan settler.

The order giving the harrowing details of domestic trouble in the Orfensen family states that the homestead was located in April, 1911, and the wife remained there until the following November, making meanwhile certain statutory improvements. Several months ago Mrs. Orfensen was deserted by her husband, and left penniless with one child. Last winter with both feet badly frozen, she was admitted to the Moose Jaw Hospital, suffering from exposure.

The inspector of homesteads in this connection, reports that the woman was put out of her home at night, and lay in the open. After being taken to the hospital, it was necessary to amputate both her limbs, and by popular subscription enough money was raised to buy her artificial ones.

In view of the circumstances, the Government has passed an order, allowing the unfortunate woman, who is unable to live on her homestead, to retain possession of it without fulfilling the customary duties attaching to it.

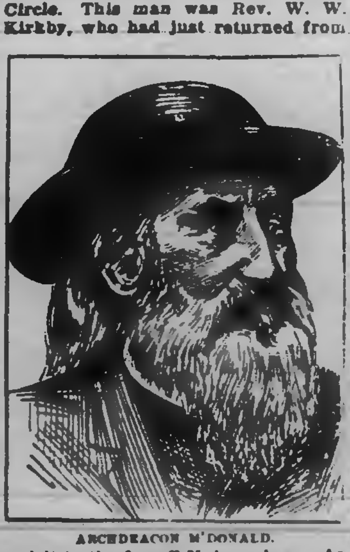
LAST OF THE OLD GUARD

LATE ARCHDEACON M'DONALD ONE OF MARVELLOUS BAND.

Missionary to the Indians of Northwest, Explorer and Translator of Bibles Started Almost Fifty Years Ago at the Call of Rev. W. W. Kirkby, Himself One of the Great Figures of Mission Work.

The death of Archdeacon McDonald, at Winnipeg, on August 28, removed the last of a remarkable band of men whose names are closely identified with the great Canadian northland. Hunter, Kirkby, Bompas and McDonald were pioneers in the truest sense of the term. They passed beyond the bounds of civilization, and faced hardships and dangers with that spirit of abandon which has ever characterized the Anglo-Saxon race, says H. A. Cody in The Canadian Courier. Like their predecessors Hearne, Mackenzie, and Campbell they led charmed lives in a region and among savage tribes where life was a mere bagatelle. Their mission was not for the purpose of exploration, but for the great adventure of uplifting the natives. Of Hearne, Mackenzie, and Campbell the historian will search in vain for any personal influence upon the people of the north with whom they came in contact. But with Hunter, Kirkby, Bompas, and McDonald it is different, and to them much credit is due for the great changes which have taken place among both Indians and Eskimos alike.

It was at a remarkable missionary meeting almost fifty years ago, in St. Andrew's Church, on the famous Red River, when the call came. The building was filled with earnest, excited people, who were listening to the words of a bronzed and rugged traveler. He was telling them about a wonderful trip he had made far away to the north within the Arctic Circle. This man was Rev. W. W. Kirkby, who had just returned from a visit to the far-off Yukon river. As he talked and told of the natives who needed a teacher in that lonely region the people became much interested and determined to send someone to those sheep in the wilderness. But the question was, who would go?



ARCHDEACON M'DONALD.

There was living at Red River a young man who had been teaching school for some time. This was Robert McDonald, who became so stirred by Kirkby's words that he at once offered himself for the distant field. So pleased were the people at this ready response that they put their hands into their pockets and contributed enough money to send him forth.

It was in 1862, after a journey of over 3,000 miles, that Robert McDonald, then an ordained clergyman of the Church of England, landed at Fort Yukon. On the bank of the Yukon river, at the mouth of the Porcupine river, the Hudson Bay Co. had an important fur-trading post.

Although the men at Fort Yukon had done nothing toward the teaching of the Indians, they readily assisted Mr. McDonald in his work. They supplied him with an interpreter in his speaking with the Indians, and allowed him to hold a night school in the fort for the white men who were present. Such progress did the missionary make with the language that on Nov. 18, 1866, he was able to preach to the Indians in their own togue for the first time. Then he began to translate hymns, prayers and some parts of the Bible into the Indian language. These he sent to England to be printed, and waited anxiously for the books to be sent out to him. But, alas, instead of the long-looked-for treasure he received word that a heavy fire had burned up all the copies of his book, which had been printed, as well as the original manuscript. Notwithstanding this severe blow, Mr. McDonald did not give up, but made more translations, and after several years the Indians had their own Bible, Prayer and Hymn Books.

Bishop Stringer tells us that "Archdeacon McDonald, during the forty years spent in the Arctic region, translated the complete Bible, prayer book and hymn book, and several other volumes in the language of the northern Indians. He adopted the name 'Tukudh' for his translations, that being the name of a central tribe at La Pierre House, on the Porcupine river.

In order to facilitate his study of the Indian language, Mr. McDonald married a native woman from the camps. From her, no doubt, he received much assistance in the work. To-day all over the northland the Indians have the translations made by this missionary. The books are always carried on the trail, being protected by moose-skin bags. Every night, where the two or three are gathered together, a portion of Scripture is read and a hymn sung by some appointed leader.

REBELS MAKE DESPERATE ATTEMPT TO TAKE POST

General Villa Incensed at Ortega's Failure to Capture Federal Position is Hurrying to the Scene

Sends Word to Ortega to Take the Town or Be Tried as a Traitor

PRESIDIO, Texas, Jan. 5. — Six thousand men composing the rebel forces made a desperate charge at the west wing of the Federal entrenchments in Ojinga yesterday afternoon. Reinforcements have trailed across Lamula Pass and have been directed to join Ternidad Rodrigues on the west of the plateau for a flanking attack against the forces which Orosco and Salazar have massed at that point. Gen. Ortega, who is determined to retrieve his lost prestige, is directing this fight in person with Rodrigues following him as second in command. This charge started soon after 12 o'clock and was well under way by three o'clock.

Two thousand Federal cavalry were seen to leave the main positions at 3.30, wind down the narrow ladder-like trail to the desert, and charge across the low-lying plain to gain the banks of the Conchos river in a desperate effort to flank the rebels and drive them from their position.

Many riderless horses galloped back to the base of the plain, and the whinnies of the wounded animals added their mite to the pandemonium of battle cries as the big charge of the biggest day started.

Anticipated as the fiercest fighting of the week, the Sunday engagement was equal to expectations, although at the hour of sending the despatch the battle was still indecisive.

The fight began at one o'clock yesterday morning, when under the cover of artillery fire and with the darkness as an ally the rebels leaped to the fight like thoroughbreds at a barrier. Up the steep slope of Ojinaga Plateau came the charging column in personal command of young Carranza. Not a shot was fired until they had reached the top of the slope. Then, at a prearranged signal, the points of flame shot from the gun barrels sweeping down the double line like burning powder following a trail. Asleep on their arms, the Federals were soon squatting in their entrenchments, the machine guns started their knitting again, and the booming of big guns made the plateau tremble like the passing of a heavy train.

Villa, the Constitutionalist commander, has sent one of his characteristic messages in code to General Ortega. Translated it says for him to take the town or to be tried as a traitor. Men who know Ortega say that he will never stop until he has led his men up the sides of the plain and into the Federal trenches, preferring death in the line to disgrace and death in front of a firing squad.

Villa Rushing to Ojinaga.

JUAREZ, Jan. 5.—Francisco Villa is rushing to the front from Juarez on board a special train. Raoul Madero, brother of the dead President of the republic, is with him as his military adviser, and all of the rebel troops in the State of Chihuahua are hurrying to Ojinaga for the supreme assault.

Villa, who was in Juarez on civil business, became desperate yesterday when he learned that Ortega and Natera had not taken the town with the early morning manoeuvres and swore to go there in person and shoot Salazar, Orozco and Castro, his three deadly enemies, who were directing the Federal fight so skillfully.

THREE LADS PLAN AND ALMOST EXECUTE ROBBERY

Police Caught Them at Residence Where One Had Entered

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Aged only 10, 11 and 12 years, three west-end youngsters were arrested Saturday evening by Constable Clarke of No. six division, charged with burglary. They were caught at the residence of Mrs. Ella M. Campbell, at 220 Dovercourt road, where one had entered, another was left to keep watch on the verandah outside, and a third stationed on the sidewalk to give the alarm should a police officer appear.

In spite of their extreme youth, the lads have given the west-end police more trouble during the past year than adult offenders. Earlier the same evening a residence at 252 Dovercourt road is believed by the police to have been entered by the same trio. Not only this, but petty thefts of all kinds, including shop-lifting, in the west end, are thought by the police to be more of the lads' operations.

AUTHORITY ON CANCER

Doctor Dies of Disease of Which He Made Life Study.

BUFFALO, Jan. 5.—Dr. Frederick C. Busch, widely-known as an authority on cancer, died here yesterday from malignant cancer and pneumonia. Two months ago he was operated on in the John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Radium was used.

New York state officials urged the operation as a last hope. Dr. Busch's cancer was of the incurable type, and at the most, radium, in his case, could only alleviate suffering.

Dr. Busch for ten years held the chair of physiology in the University of Buffalo. Two years ago he identified himself with the State Cancer Laboratory here, and his researches here and in Europe were important in the study of cancer. He was the author of several medical works. He was 40 years old.

DIES AT HIS DESK.

J. W. Askin Third of Family to Hold Essex Registrarship.

WINDSOR, Jan. 5.—J. Wallace Askin, Registrar of Deeds for Essex County, and one of Windsor's most prominent citizens, died suddenly on Saturday afternoon at his office in Sandwich from acute angina pectoria.

There was no premonition of the attack, death coming swiftly and mercifully, Mr. Askin dying as he sat at his desk closing up his duties for the week-end. He was 65 years old.

For three generations the Askin family has held the office of Registrar in Essex, the position having been handed down from father to son since 1831, at which time James Askin, grandfather of J. Wallace Askin, first took office. Eleven years later John Askin succeeded to the place, and upon his death in 1888 his son, who died Saturday, and who had been Deputy Registrar, became Registrar. The terms of the three totalled 83 years.

Born in Sandwich in 1848, J. Wallace Askin was educated at Assumption College and St. Hyacinthe College, Quebec. In later years he served in the Fenian outbreak as captain in the old 21st Regiment until the border strife was ended. He studied law in Windsor.

Raising Funds For Navy.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—E. Venizelos, the Greek Premier, announces a visit to Paris for the end of next week. It is known that his principal object is to get funds to put the Greek navy on an equal footing with the Turkish navy, which at present is superior to the Greek, owing to the Sultan's acquisition of the Brazilian Dreadnought Rio de Janeiro. M. Venizelos hopes to secure an additional loan of $60,000,000 to complete his naval program. He will come to Paris via Rome, and will visit London before returning to Athens.

Variety Actor Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Peter Bijou, one of the best known entertainers on the variety stage, died Saturday at his residence, in Brockwell Park Gardens, Herne Hill, aged 40. He was operated on some time ago for kidney trouble, but suffered a chill, from which he died.

CARRIED MILE ON SNOW PLOW

Farmer in Buggy Has an Unique Ride.

HOLSTEIN, Jan. 5.—To be lifted up with his buggy and horse, carried along at a rapid rate for a mile, and then tumbled into a huge but soft snow bank was the experience of George Keith, a farmer of Egremont township, Saturday night. When he had collected his thoughts Mr. Keith found that he had been struck by a train which he had neither seen nor heard because of a blinding snowstorm.

The men in the cab of the engine knew nothing of the human freight carried on the butterfly snow plow in front of the engine until during a lull in the storm the engineer saw a hat in front. He immediately stopped the train, and walking to the front of his engine found a buggy top and the hat. Fearing that some one had been killed he backed the train up a quarter of a mile and found Keith scrambling out of the snow bank little the worse for his experience. Backing up another mile and a quarter, the horse was found dead, and back another mile and a quarter they found William Yake, Keith's companion, walking up the track to Holstein, a distance of two miles.

It seems that the two men were driving home from Mount Forest and in the snowstorm lost the way. Yake got out to make some inquiries, while Keith remained in the buggy. He apparently drove on to the tracks and the G.T.R. train hit him.

Mr. Yake, failing to find the buggy, started walking back along the track to Holstein. He was uninjured, and Mr. Keith is only suffering from shock.

MISSIONARY PASSES AWAY

Father Gascon Had Been Invalid for Seven Years.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 5.—One of civilization's martyrs who suffered intense agonies for seven years following 30 years' work among the Indians in the Mackenzie river and Great Slave Lake district, Rev. Father Gascon of the Oblate Fathers died Saturday at the Juniorat.

Born at St. Anne des Plaines, near Montreal, 87 years ago, Father Gascon came west on missionary work when he was forty years of age and went into the Great Slave Lake territory, where he worked among the Indians.

He later went to Edmonton, where he lived for a few years, and twelve years ago, was called to Winnipeg by the archbishop. For five years Father Gascon worked in St. Boniface and Winnipeg, and then his strength failed and the physical crash came, rendering him unable to move from his chair. So be half reclined for seven years until the end came at 7.45 Saturday morning.

Parcel Post Pays Big Money.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. — Uncle Sam made a clean profit of about $20,000 on the parcel post business handled at the Baltimore office alone in the Christmas season, according to a preliminary report to Postmaster-General Burleson yesterday. The Maryland city was the first large office to report for the rush period. The number of parcels handled was nearly 1,000,000. Of these about half were light packets formerly called fourth class. The remainder were of an average weight of about four pounds, with a charge of about five cents, of which three cents was profit to the Government.

NEW JERSEY SUFFERS FROM THE WORST GALE IN YEARS

Huge Waves Batter Down Sea-walls of Resorts and Destroy Buildings---Hotel at Seabright is Badly Wrecked and Old Church is in Danger of Collapse.

NEW YORK, Jan 5.—With a 76-mile gale from the northeast driving great seas against bulkheads already weakened or broken through by the great storm of Christmas night, the New Jersey coast point yesterday and last night underwent, perhaps, the worst experience they had had in many years.

One man dropped dead from excitement at Seabright, N.J., and two are reported missing at Coney Island.

The total damage to property already amounts well into the hundreds of thousands. Most of this has been done to dwellings and other structures which the storm of two weeks ago left without protection by breaking down bulkheads and weakening others.

Seabright, as in previous storms, again bore the brunt of the sea's attack because of its exposed position on a narrow sand pit between the ocean and the Shrewsbury river. Yesterday bulkheads that had withstood the previous storm, gave way, additional sections were flooded and more summer dwellings were wrecked or badly undermined. The Octogon Hotel, damaged already to the extent of $60,000, may become a total loss.

The worst damage was a flood-tide early yesterday, when the waves swept across the strip of land containing the town and flowed into the Shrewsbury river. Gangs of men were strengthening the foundations of some buildings and removing others on rollers to points of safety. When the wind switched around to the northwest, the storm abated and the waters receded.

The old St. Peter's Church at Galilee is imperilled. It is in an exposed position and is in great danger of going into the sea. The strong bulkhead was badly damaged and the lawn washed out. Fishermen worked hard to save the church.

On Long Island, as well as on the New Jersey coast, the situation in many places was regarded to-day as critical. Many of the temporary bulkheads erected after the storm on Christmas night have been swept out to sea, with the result that much property is at the mercy of the high waves.

Steamers Driven to Shelter.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Jan. 5.—Steamers on the Providence, Fall River and other lines, as well as smaller craft, were forced to seek shelter in the harbor here early yesterday morning, as the result of a gale that blew more than 50 miles an hour.

The steamer Priscilla of the Fall River Line, from New York to Providence, unloaded here 500 passengers who made the remainder of the trip by rail. Other steamers that put in were the Tennessee, Georgia and New Hampshire. Many schooners and barges are in the harbor to-day. A heavy sea is running.

PATROL IS HEARD FROM

Sergt. Harper and Party on Their Way Home.

ATHABASCA, Alta., Jan. 5.—Telegraphic advices have been received here that Sergt. Harper of the Mounted Police is returning from the Porcupine river district with his party and Isaac Hunting and the girl Hunting had abducted, Mildred Shaw. All are well, but will not reach Grand Prairie City for three weeks.

It was reported a week ago that the party had perished and murder by Indians was suspected. Two patrols were sent out to investigate.

Yesterday the following wire was received from Commissioner Perry by Comptroller Fortesque of the R.N.W. M.P.: "Sergt. Harper and party safe. Arrested Asa Hunting twenty-five miles southeast of Grand Cache on Dec. 23rd. Now on way to Lake Saskatoon."

No other details are given.

Opposed to Church Union.

SOFIA, Jan. 5.—Orthodox Exarch of Bulgaria, in an encyclical addressed Saturday to the Orthodox Bulgarian clergy, expressed strong opposition to the proposals for a union of the Christian churches now occupying the earnest attention of some religious circles in America and England.

The exarch exhorts the Bulgarian people "To mistrust the idea of a union with the Catholic Church, entertained by interested propagandists," and asserts that the safety of Bulgaria lies in the attachment of her people to orthodoxy and "Slavism," at the head of which is the great Russia.

Over Thirty Die From Extreme Cold.

MARSEILLES, Jan. 5.—A wave of cold is passing over southern France, the thermometer falling as much as 18 degrees below the freezing point. In the department of Basses Alps upwards of ten persons died of the cold. The Rhine is frozen over for a large part of its course. Twenty-three Creole soldiers brought to Marseilles from the French colony of Antilles died as a result of the severe climate.

Illness Opens Prison Door.

WINDSOR, Jan. 5.—The telegraph wires Saturday carried from Washington a message which opened the prison doors for Roy Lounsberry, aged 19, of Wheatley, Ont., but the pardon comes to late, for the youth is dying from tuberculosis, and can live but a short time, the prison doctors say.

Lounsberry was indicted for Chinese smuggling.

If a man is too lazy to stand up and tell the truth, he's apt to lie about it.

TO BUILD DRYDOCK.

Government Buys Site for Huge Plant on Pacific Coast.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—The Government has purchased from the Bullen marine interests on Lang's Cove, Esquimalt, a site for the Government drydock for the Pacific coast, as promised some months ago. The plans for the drydock are now being prepared by the Public Works Department engineers, and it is expected that tenders will be called for early in the spring.

The estimated cost of the drydock is approximately four million dollars. It will be of the same dimensions as the new Government drydock at Levis, now under way, and will be capable of accommodating the largest vessels afloat. The dimensions are: length, 1,150 feet; depth, 40 feet, and width, 120 feet. It is understood that a similar drydock is to be built at Halifax.

Floods Follow Drought.

MONTREAL, Jan. 5. — Twenty thousand dollars' damage has been done to hospitals here yesterday through the flooding of the places since the water came on again. Plumbers busy on frozen pipes are the order of the day everywhere.

Railway To Shoal Lake.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 5.—The first contract awarded for the greater Winnipeg water scheme entails building a railway from Winnipeg to Shoal Lake, a distance of ninety miles, and the present contract is for forty thousand ties for the railway.

London's Sensations.

The sensations of the foreigner in London have often been analyzed and described. A characteristic story on the subject is to be found in the late Richard Middleton's newly-published book, "Monologues." "To the alien, I suppose," writes Middleton. "London must remain a kind of scattered museum, full of interesting things, not very well arranged. Yet once, at all events, it seemed to me that, to a man newly fallen from Scotland there had been granted a glimpse of the only London that is really ours I found him startling the echoes of the Adelphi arches with his laughter, and as he was alone in a place not greatly mirthful, I asked him a reason for his merriment. 'Oh, I'm just laughing at Glasgow,' he said."

A Ducal Bull.

The Duke of Abercorn made a queer oratorical muddle in a speech he delivered one day. He was speaking of the great siege of Londonderry and of how bravely the citizens had defended their city against the besieging army. "They withstood the siege," he went on, "in order that they might hand down their birthright to their ancestors who are yourselves!"—London Mail

ROME WAS IN FERMENT.

But Report of Pope's Death Prove To Be Untrue.

ROME, Jan. 5.—A rumor which spread rapidly throughout the city last night that the Pope was dead caused intense excitement for a time The Vatican was overwhelmed with enquiries, but at that very hour the Pope was quietly conversing with Cardinal Basilius Pompili, who had not long before congratulated the pontiff on his vigorous appearance.

The police instituted an enquiry relative to the origin of the rumor and learned that it was the work of a so-called practical joker, who had telephoned to a friend at one of the big hotels that he knew the Pope was dead.

A sergeant of the Swiss Guard, commenting on the incident, thus moralized: "Threatened people live long. Like Pope Leo, the present pontiff will reign a quarter of a century."

"Theo" Is Remanded.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—"Dr." Francis E. Wright, alias Frank Dalton Jackson, who calls himself "Theo, the God," the head of the Crystal Cult of Philadelphia, who is charged with defrauding Mrs. Sharpe, a 70-year-old Toronto woman, was remanded until next Friday, when he appeared in the police court on Saturday. He appeared without entering plea or election, and was represented by A. McGregor. The interests of Mrs. Sharpe are being looked after by W. H. Hodges.

To Give Evidence.

KINGSTON, Jan. 5. — Word has been received here that Mrs. Freese of Milwaukee, whose son died in the penitentiary, will come to Kingston to give evidence in the penitentiary enquiry to-morrow. Inspector Stewart will arrive to-night, and Inspector Hughes will also be here to-morrow.

Strange Savage Accomplishment.

In British Columbia dwell certain tribes of Indians who read and write shorthand with facility. The story of the manner in which they acquired the accomplishment is a truly remarkable one.

It is stated that a Briton who visited the country of the Indians as a missionary found himself so hampered by the ignorance of the tribes, who could not read the Bibles he gave them, that he set to work to teach them shorthand as the quickest means of enabling them to read and write! It seemed a doubtful experiment at first, but being based on the sound of the words there was no need to learn spelling. The priest began by teaching the more intelligent men, and then sending them to teach the others.

So successful was the undertaking that there is now scarcely an Indian, old or young, in the district who cannot read and write shorthand.

Down to Hard Pan.

Rev. Frank W. Patterson, of Calgary, during a recent trip east in the interest of Baptist Western Missions, used to tell a story of a minister who was preaching about the "Prodigal Son."

"And then," said the preacher, "he began to be in want, and he sold his coat, and next he sold his vest, and then he parted with his shirt, and then, my friends, he came to himself."—Saturday Night.

The Chicken Oath.

For the first time in the history of the Vancouver courts the chicken oath was administered recently to Mah Quang, a Chinaman, who was a witness in the case of seven men charged with rioting at Nanaimo. After the oath was administered a young white cock was procured, its head placed on a block of wood, and chopped off by the Chinaman. The ceremony was witnessed by a large crowd of persons.

An Earnest Appeal.

In the early days of the Province of New Brunswick, one of the judges had called in a local clergyman to open court by prayer.

"O Lord," he began, "we implore Thee to bestow upon the judge of this court the wisdom and discretion he so greatly needs."

Gardening Under Glass.

The building of greenhouses for the cultivation of vegetables in winter is going on with great rapidity at Ruthven, Ont. Five more have just been started. Several are designed for tomato plants.

Gasoline Import.

As showing the immense increase in the members of automobiles, motor boats and agricultural machinery using gasoline fuel, the value of the import of gasoline has increased from $1,961,015 in 1912 to $5,846,254 in 1913.

Didn't Like Tone.

E. A. Freeman, like M. Pierre Loti, was once challenged to mortal combat owing to the aggressive tone of one of his works. Writing in 1878, John Richard Green informs a friend: "Freeman has bequeathed to his country as he fled from her shores a book on the Ottoman Turks, which makes a fearful Bulgarian massacre for my Lord Beaconsfield, my Lord Derby, and Hobart Pasha. Did I tell you that an old admiral, a friend of Hobart's, challenged Freeman to single combat on the sands of Boulogne by way of avenging the Pasha's wrongs?" Hobart's crime—in Freeman's eyes—was having served as an admiral in the Turkish service during the war with Russia in 1877, for which adventure his name was removed from our navy list.

EVENING COIFFURE.

The Smartest Thing Out For the Opera.

POIRET MANTLE AND HEADDRESS.

The evening coiffure is not considered complete or smart this winter unless ornamented with an aigret or fancy mount of some kind. The higher the better is the slogan in some instances, while the other extreme is reached in the low Greek fillet and Juliet cap of pearls.

Poiret, that fantastic designer of women's apparel, is nothing if not bizarre, and his latest conception for evening wear is to be found in the mantle and headdress pictured.

The mantle was inspired by the royal robes worn by the doges of Venice. The wrap is of red velvet, with stole and sleeves of spotless ermine. The truly remarkable headdress is of pearls.

An Easily Made Maternity Gown.

A maternity gown which is rapidly coming into favor because it is easily made as well as becoming and graceful is copied from the Babani robe. If the material chosen for the garment is very wide the gown may be cut in two pieces so that the seams shall join under each arm and up each sleeve as far as the shoulders where the edges button or hook over from front to back after the garment has been drawn on over the head.

Crape—silk or cotton—is an excellent material for the Babani maternity gown, as it is usually very wide and cuts to the very best advantage. Moreover, the fabric lends itself readily to stenciling, and there are innumerable charming designs which may be produced as a bordering for a skirt, the loose sleeves and the rounded out neck of the robe. Gold on blue, rose, green, brown or gray makes an effective bordering, and silver is lovely on black, mahogany, flame, maize or mauve. The Babani does not literally drag upon the floor, but when the model is used for a maternity gown it is always better to have it long enough to entirely cover the feet, as otherwise it will lend its wearer an awkward appearance.

Pure White Bedspreads Fashionable.

After all there are no bedspreads daintier than the pure white ones beloved by the old fashioned housekeeper. That—to quote our grandmothers—"no matter how old, they always look like new when freshly done up" is equally true of the white bedspreads to which young fashioned housekeepers are now pinning their faith. The most expensive sort of white washable spread is of satin finish linen damask, finished about the edges with embroidered wide scallops or deep points above which is a vine in finest hand embroidery.

Then there are the cotton poplins—firm and substantial of weave—that may be finished and decorated similarly to the damask spreads, and the cotton crepes that are lovely when trimmed with bleached cluny edging. Enduring, if carefully handled, are the Swiss of St. Gall muslins edged with either cluny or valenciennes, but if the white launderable spread must needs be very inexpensive a really dainty one may be made of scrim, bordered with an a jour headed wide hem.

A Bed and Trunk.

There is a new sort of trunk on the market, or perhaps it should be called a new kind of bed. It is both. From the outside it looks like an ordinary trunk of good size.

When you travel you fill the trunk with clothes—and it will hold about as many as the ordinary trunk—and start forth. When you stop for the night you open your trunk, remove the springs and cushion, arrange the springs on the open trunk, put the cushion on them and go to bed. A simple operation this.

WRECKED ON SABLE ISLAND

Nova Scotian Schooner Goes Down With Crew.

HALIFAX, Jan. 5.—The Nova Scotian schooner Ionia W., with her captain and crew of six men, has been lost in the vicinity of Sable Island. More evidence of the fate of the vessel was discovered on the treacherous sands of the island.

The superintendent of the island has sent a wireless despatch to Chas. Harvey, the local agent of the Canadian Marine Department, reporting wreckage on the western end of the island. This consists of a schooner's cabin, a ship's compass, a barrel of fish nets, some fish hooks and a Norwegian foghorn.

Written on the cabin was the following: "Wind south June 22, 1913. Cold weather. Caribou harbor. Waiting for bait. Angus Zwicker."

The vessel left Georgetown, P.E.I., early in December with a cargo of produce for Liverpool, N.S.

She was built in 1903, registered 93 tons, and was by Jacob Ernest of Mahone Bay.

King George's Relatives.

King George V. is a blood relative of four other ruling monarchs — the Czar of Russia, the German Emperor, and the Kings of Denmark and Greece.

The Czar is King George's first cousin, as his mother before her marriage to the late Czar Alexander III. was Princess Dagmar of Denmark, sister of the Dowager Queen Alexandra of Great Britain, King George's mother. King George, by the way, is also a first cousin of the Czarina of Russia, who is a daughter of Princess Alice of Great Britain, King George's aunt.

Kaiser Wilhelm II. of Germany is a first cousin of the British monarch, as his mother was Princess Victoria of England, the "Princess Royal," eldest daughter of Queen Victoria and aunt of the present British ruler. She married the late Frederick William of Prussia, who was Emperor for only 100 days in 1888.

Another first cousin of King George is King Christian X. of Denmark. His father, the late King Frederick III. of Denmark, was a brother of George's mother, the Dawager Queen Alxandra.

King Constantine of Greece is also King George's first cousin. His father, the late King George of Greece, assassinated at Salonika, was a brother of the Dowager Queen Alexandra of Great Britain, the present British monarch's mother.

UNDER THE OCEAN

Changes In the Sea Floor From Shore to Shore.

THE BIG MID-ATLANTIC RIDGE.

It Starts at Iceland and Bisects the Ocean Down Almost to Cape Horn. In Places It Rises Above the Surface, Forming Groups of Islands.

A sketch of the "landscape" of the ocean bed is given by Dr. A. E. Shipley in an article in the Edinburgh Review:

"The passengers and the crew of a liner racing over the surface of the Atlantic are apt to imagine that under them is a vast layer of water of varying depth sparsely inhabited by a few fish. As a matter of fact, the whole of this great ocean is teeming with life. If instead of taking ship we could take to the water and walk across the bed of the Atlantic to America, starting from the shores of western Europe, we should in effect be traveling through a succession of new countries. Not only would the surrounding physical conditions vary as we advanced, but the animal and plant life would vary in correlation with the altering physical conditions.

"Walking farther and farther toward the depths of the Atlantic, we should soon lose all sight of the algae, and the shallow water fish—the plaice and sole, whiting, skates, dogfish and others and cod—would give way to the megrim and the hake. The sea floor would gradually change from rock or gravel or stones to sands and ultimately to mud or ooze of various tints, their original colors often modified by the action of the decomposition of organic particles in them and on them. All these finer deposits are derived from the neighboring land and are blown seaward by offshore winds or washed down by rains and streams and carried out to the sea by rivers.

"The distance to which fine matter in suspension may be carried is very great. The Kongo is said to carry its characteristic mud as far out to sea as 600 miles, and the Ganges and the Indus as far as 1,000 miles.

"Except in the neighborhood of such great rivers a subaqueous traveler would soon pass beyond what Sir John Murray has called the 'mud line,' a line that limits the terrigenous deposits everywhere surrounding dry land. Having reached this limit, we must proceed warily, for at the mud line, at an average depth of a hundred fathoms, we shall find ourselves at the edge of the continental shelf, that rim which extends seaward to a varying distance from all land areas, the rim on which Great Britain rests. Beyond lies the continental slope, a precipice more or less abrupt and more or less high, descending by steep declines or terraced cliffs until depths of 2,000 fathoms are reached.

"The Atlantic, compared with the other great oceans, has an unusually large area of comparatively shallow water. Of its total area 27.5 per cent is covered by water less than 1,000 fathoms deep; 18 per cent lies between 1,000 and 2,000 fathoms and 47 per cent between 2,000 and 3,000 fathoms; the remaining 7.5 per cent is still deeper.

"At the foot of the continental slope lies an illimitable plain of a uniform dull, grayish buff color, flat and featureless as the desert, and only diversified by an occasional as yet uncovered rock or wreck of the straight line of a recently laid cable. This plain continues with scarcely a change in scenery or in level until we approach the great mid-Atlantic ridge. As [illegible] has shown, this ridge, which roughly bisects the Atlantic, extends from Iceland as far south as fifty-three degrees of south latitude, with a slight and quite inexplicable break just under the equator. The ridge runs almost parallel with the eastern contour of North and South America, which, in turn, as the ordinary map will show, roughly corresponds with the western contour of Europe and Africa. From time to time the ridge rises above the surface of the water, as in the Azores group, St. Paul's rocks, Ascension, Tristan da Cunha and Gough island.

"Having ascended the eastern and descended the western slope of this mid-Atlantic ridge, we should again traverse plains of grayish ooze far more extensive than any level land tract known to geographers, and as we approached the American coast we should gradually pass through, in reverse order, the zones of life traversed when leaving Europe. On the eastern coast of America the slope is much more gradual than on the western coast of southern Europe and Africa."

Told the Truth.

A few days after the new farmer had purchased a horse from a thrifty Scot he returned in an angry mood. "You told me this horse had won half a dozen matches against some of the best horses in the country. He can't trot a mile in six minutes to save himself. You lied to me!" he denounced.

"I didna lie. It was in plowin' matches he took his prizes," calmly replied Sandy.

As She Saw It.

IN SILHOUETTE.

Lady with the wistful eyes
  And the proud, elusive air,
Others haply criticise
  What you wear—or do not wear.
I am no fault finding churl.
  If your costume gives you glee
That's sufficient, lovely girl.
  You shall hear no wail from me.

Lady with the gauzy gown
  That the sunlight glimmers through,
Think not that I pause to frown
  Or hurl epithets at you.
It is not for me to say
  That your modesty is flown
If you wish to dress that way—
  Well, the risk is all your own

Lady with the filmy skirt
  Slashed an inch above the knee,
Do not think that I am hurt;
  You have not offended me.
But permit me, please, to add,
  Granting that you are divine,
That I am extremely glad
  You're no relative of mine

Her Check

A Story of Old New York

By F. A. MITCHEL

One evening, something more than 100 years ago, a gentleman and a lady were strolling on the Battery in the city of New York. At that time the residential area bordering the park, which inherits its name from the old New Amsterdam fort located on the ground, was a very different section from what it is now. Today it is intersected by elevated railroads, and the loungers there are chiefly emigrants or persons out of employment. Then in the houses bordering upon the park lived the most aristocratic families of old New York.

The gentleman mentioned was tall, dignified and wore the costume of the times, a beaver hat, ruffled shirt front, blue coat with brass buttons and a flaring skirt; his pantaloons, as they were then called, tight except where they covered his boots. The lady wore the bonnet of the period, skirt a la directoire, her shoulders covered with a lace shawl. She was a descendant of one of the original Dutch settlers and a widow.

"I am going to ask you once more, Mrs. Van Zandt, and for the last time," said the man, with that dignified courtliness which has now passed into oblivion, "to make me happy. You may remember that a year ago, on this very spot, I asked you to honor me by becoming my wife. You told me that you lived and would live only for your son. Since then you have treated me, if not as a lover, at least as a dear friend. It is this that has emboldened me to ask you to reconsider your refusal and confer upon me the greatest happiness a woman can bestow upon a man."

Having made this stilted proposal, he waited for a reply. In accordance with the custom of those times the lady's hand rested on his arm. He felt her hand tremble. After a few moments of silence she said:

"I trust, Mr. Travers, that you will not think me insensible of the honor you would confer upon me; an honor, I must admit, of which I am scarcely worthy. But if my son required my undivided attention a year ago he needs it still more now. Since you are my very dear friend I will confide in you that he has become involved—has involved me—in a gambling debt. This Major Tilford, who has recently come to New York, and who has secured social recognition by some of our best families, has succeeded in winning from Frank at cards some $4,000."

"The rascal!" muttered Mr. Travers.

"I have drawn my check for the amount, and Frank will tomorrow pay the indebtedness. He has given me his solemn promise never again to play at cards for money. But I know I shall have trouble in keeping him from the temptation. Now you can understand why he needs my first consideration."

The lovers were silent for a time. They were standing on the southernmost part of the Battery looking down the bay. A few ships were at anchor, while one was coming under full sail through the Narrows, the setting sun gilding her canvas. Presently Mr. Travers said:

"Will you permit me to hand your check to Major Tilford, madam?"

"With what object?"

"It may be better that your son should have nothing more to do with the man."

"Perhaps you are right. I shall consider myself under a deep obligation to you, my dear Mr. Travers, if you will act in the matter for me."

"On the contrary, I feel highly honored by your confidence."

They returned to Mrs. Van Zandt's home, a modest two story brick building, in place of which a modern skyscraper now stands, and Mrs. Van Zandt took from a lady's mahogany writing desk with claw feet a check and handed it to Mr. Travers. He bent and kissed the hand from which he received it and, carefully avoiding turning his back to its owner, withdrew.

That same evening a party of gentlemen were supping at Fraunces' tavern, among their number Major Tilford. Mr. Travers entered the dining room and, taking a seat, called for wine.

Then he wrote on the back of one of his visiting cards a request for a few words in private with Major Tilford and sent the card to that gentleman. The latter arose and, going to the table where Mr. Travers sat, bowed and said:

"I am at your service, sir."

"I am commissioned to hand you a check for money taken from a boy in his teens, who should have been protected instead of swindled by you."

He handed Tilford Mrs. Van Zandt's check, but the latter drew back. He had no sense of honor, but could not tell to what this matter might lead. He assumed a sense of honor he did not feel.

"Are you aware, sir," he said, "that this is an insult no gentleman can brook? Were it not for the prejudice against the code engendered by the recent affair between Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Burr you should answer for it on the field of honor."

"The prejudice against dueling you speak of arises from a murder, not an affair of honor. I have no fear of losing any of my friends by a meeting with you."

"Be it so, sir. I shall send a friend to you."

"One moment, sir. The lady whose son you have swindled must not be brought into this affair, and it is to your interest, sir, that its real cause should be concealed. Return to your friends. Presently I will arise to leave the room. Place your foot in such position that I may trip on it. I will retaliate by drawing my glove across your face. You can then send your friend to me without the true cause of the difference between us being known."

"As you like, sir. Meanwhile you may keep the check. If you kill me you may return it to the lady who wrote it. If I kill you"—

"You can take such action concerning it as you see fit. If you choose now to decline it and will give me a receipt for the amount of its face this affair need go no further."

Tilford made no reply to this for awhile. He was turning the matter over in his mind. There were reasons why he should recede from the position in which he stood, but he did not wish to give up the plunder, and he might possibly retain it without damage to his reputation. Travers was not known as a fighter, while Tilford came from the south, where dueling was quite common, and he was an expert with both sword and pistol.

"No, sir," he said at last. "You have insulted me, accused me, and my honor must be vindicated."

With that he turned and went back to his companions.

Nothing of the conversation had been heard by them, and when Travers arose and walked toward the desk to pay his reckoning no one was aware that a pantomime was to be enacted. As he was walking leisurely past the table where his adversary sat the latter put out his foot, and Travers stumbled against it.

"You did that on purpose, sir," he said.

"As you please to consider it, sir."

Travers drew a glove from a pocket and struck Tilford with it lightly on the cheek. Then he passed in the same leisurely manner out of the dining room.

When Tilford's second returned to him with Travers' reply to his challenge, the southerner knit his brows. By assenting to his enemy's plan he had given Travers the chance of place and weapons. The conditions named by the latter were pistols, in a dark room, each party to be supplied with an unlimited number of weapons. This placed them on an equality, and Tilford lost the advantage of his skill and reputation as a duelist.

Tilford was an impostor and a swindler. He had forged letters of introduction and had played young Van Zandt with marked cards. Believing that his true character would soon come out, he desired, if possible, to get the money on Mrs. Van Zandt's check and disappear. But in playing a gentleman's game he had left the check with Travers. He sent word to his adversary that he would apologize for tripping him and take Mrs. Van Zandt's check to her and tear it to pieces in her presence if this would be agreeable to Mr. Travers.

Travers was unwilling to trust him with the check so long as it was good at the bank, but he took sufficient time to go there and request that it should not be paid if presented. Then he sent it to Tilford, stating that his proposed terms were accepted. But before Tilford had time to try to get the check cashed Travers went to the bank and was there in concealment when Tilford hurried in and presented the check. Travers confronted him.

"You scoundrel!" he said. "Sign a receipt for the amount you claim from young Van Zandt and give it to me, with this check, or go to jail."

Tilford threw up the game and agreed to the conditions. When the receipt had been drawn and signed and the check returned he was permitted to leave the bank and the city and was never seen in New York again.

The same evening Mr. Travers was announced in the drawing room of Mrs. Van Zandt.

"Have you paid my son's indebtedness?" she asked.

"I have, madam. There is the receipt."

He handed it to her. She cast her eyes over it and was folding it when he handed her her check. She looked at it, surprised, then at him for an explanation.

"There was no legitimate debt," he said, "due from your son to this man Tilford, who was an impostor and a swindler. He returned your check and signed a receipt for the amount he had claimed in preference to going to jail."

"How did you prove him such?"

"I gave him my opinion of one who would take money in such fashion from a minor. He still pretended to be a gentleman and agreed to surrender the check to you in person. Instead of doing so, he presented it at the bank. I had taken the precaution to stop payment on the check and was at the bank to receive the rascal when he came to draw the money. I gave him his choice between exposure and its consequences and giving me, for you, these two papers."

Mrs. Van Zandt's eyes were dimmed with tears. She yearned to throw herself into her lover's arms, but those were times of great formality.

"Mr. Travers," she said, as soon as she could control her voice, "it seems, sir, that my son's interests are safer in your hands than in mine."

With great composure he encircled her waist and took her hand; then he drew her to him and kissed her.

"Ah, madam, you have made me the happiest of men!"

Truth and Its Abuse.

A witness in a magistrate's court in Nova Scotia had sworn that on the 29th of the month he had been at a certain place.

"Where were you on the [illegible]?" he was asked.

"Sawing wood for Jones."

"And on the 31st?"

"Hauling hay for Brown."

"And on the 32nd?"

"Working for Smith."

"And the 33rd?"

The witness was about to reply when his wife interposed.

"You old fool," she exclaimed, "don't you know there are only 22 days in a month?"

INTERMEDIATE PETES FOR BOWMANVILLE GAME

The local intermediate O. H. A. team left at noon for Bowmanville, where they play the intermediates of that town tonight. The local management were working under a handicap in getting their team together, as it was not known till this morning whether ice was available or not, and the result was that at nine o'clock a team had to be gathered together. Maurice Park, owing to today being the opening of the schools, could not get away. [illegible] found it impossible to make the trip, and Bond is laid up after the Whitby game. After much work the following team was rounded up: Goal, Dwyer, right defence Long, left defence Capt. Giroux, rover Lansfield, right wing Phelan, left wing Kelly, centre, Kennealley.

KINGSTON FRONTENACS TO MEET LOCAL JUNIORS ON TUESDAY NIGHT

A Keen Scrap for Positions on the Lineup—Practice To-night

Tomorrow night the players of the Junior O. H. A. team will have their turn to show their wares and the hope is that the fans will not be disappointed. It is a fact that the juniors have been making use of all the ice available, since the weatherman decided to get busy. The youngsters are in very fair shape and should give a good account of themselves.

So keen is the competition for places on the team against the Kingston Frontenacs that the lineup will not be definitely announced until after tonight's practice. Manager Craig had planned to select his team after Saturday night's workout, but the squad were all stepping along so nicely that he decided to have another look at the players before making a final choice. There is little to choose between two or three of the players, it being a case of sixes all the way, but one thing is certain, that the team will be well equipped with capable substitutes. The lineup for tomorrow will be selected from the following eight players, who are asked to be at the rink ready to go on the ice at 7 o'clock sharp tonight, for a twenty minutes' workout:

Darling, Long, Richardson, Phelan, Halpin, Rose, Barrie, Knapman. All the regulars and subs are expected to report in the dressing room tomorrow night at 7:15 o'clock.

FEW REAL DIAMOND STARS COST CLUBS BIG MONEY

Eddie Collins Cost Connie Mack $5 for Railway Ticket

"Did it ever occur to you?" asked Billy Murray, former secretary of the Phillies, and at present scout for the Pirates, "that we never had a bad player who costs a lot of money to be one of the great stars of the game?"

"Of course," Murray continued, "there are one or two cases where the clubs got their money's worth—Marquard, for instance—but I think you can safely say that all the really great stars of the game didn't cost $10,000 put together?"

"Then what's the use of paying the big prices?" Murray was asked.

"Just because we are afraid we might lose a star if we didn't, that's all," he said.

What The Best Have Cost

Murray's question brought out the very interesting fact that Eddie Collins, now considered the greatest ball player living, cost Connie Mack exactly $5—the price of a return trip ticket for a man to come from Philadelphia, sign him and go back.

Ty Cobb cost the Detroit club $75 and his expenses from Georgia to Detroit.

Tris Speaker cost Boston in the neighborhood of $2,000, but could have been had for less as the Red Sox had him before that and let him go.

Just what Walter Johnson cost is not exactly known, but it was certainly not more than $1,500.

First $10,000 Player

Of the expensive players we have to go back to Theodore Breitenstein, to find one who proved to be a star of the first water after his purchase. The price paid for Breitenstein was $10,000 and that was the first big figure known in baseball. The other expensive men are Marquard, O'Toole, Blackburn of Chicago, Cy Seymour, Spike Shannon and Kelley, recently of Pittsburg. Of these men only two—Marquard and O'Toole—remain in the big league. None of them have turned out to be history making stars.

"I think, after all," Murray said, "that Connie Mack has got the right idea. He gets them from the school, where they don't cost anything, and where the chances of developing a star are just as great as among the minor leagues. I know of one schoolboy right now that was signed by Connie Mack more than a year ago, and it will still be two years before he gets out of college and can report to the Athletics."

KILLILEA LET OUT BY HAMS IS PICKED UP BY THE FEDERALS

Marty Killilea and Bill Garlow are two of last year's Hamilton Canadian league club, who will not be back next year, despite the fact that they are on the reserve list. Killilea it is reported, has been signed by the Baltimore Federal league club, and Garlow is not satisfied with local conditions, and wants his release. Writing to a friend here, Garlow stated that he was not able to do himself or the local club justice under last year's conditions, and he is anxious to be let out.

Killilea's case will no doubt cause surprise here for he was released by Manager Knotty Lee at the fag end of last season because the local manager was of the opinion that the accident to his ankle would render him useless on a ballfield hereafter. Apparently the Federals do not think so.

WILL ERIE COME IN ?

Important Question May be Decided this Week

The Erie territory matter will be probably definitely decided by the National association board at meeting this week.

The above message received from Secretary Farrell, throws considerable light upon the question which is being asked throughout the whole Canadian league circuit. The Erie, Pa., territory to organized baseball, was left open for negotiation to the owners of the franchise in Erie of the defunct Ohio league until January 1st. Just the nature of the disposition at the present time of the whole matter will be left in abeyance for final settlement at the meeting of the board of the National association of Professional Baseball leagues which is scheduled for this week.

A circuit composed of Ottawa, Montreal, Peterboro and Toronto in the east and London, Hamilton, Erie, Niagara Falls, N.Y., or Youngstown, Ohio, is favored by most of the large cities. Organized ball in Toronto and Montreal playing at home when the big International league club is on the road, would be a solution to much of the war which is being waged in Toronto. Patriotism to a Canadian league club in Toronto would do much to drive the Federal organization out of Canada.

Appeal to Governor.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 2. — More than a hundred labor leaders, many of them organizers of national reputation, including John Mitchell, Clarence Darrell and W. D. Mahon, came to the state capital yesterday for the purpose of presenting their side of the Calumet copper strike question to the chief executive, and to urge his aid in arriving at a speedy settlement.

Too Hasty.

"'I feel like a perfect ignoramus in your presence, Mr. Crichton,' said the young woman who possessed the art of flattery. "You play, you sing you are an accomplished linguist, you draw—really, you have all the accomplishments that I lack."

"Oh, Miss Taurus," he protested, with becoming modesty, "really I'm not clever!"

Afterward he wondered if he had said the right thing.

ENOCH, THE EGG KING.

He Only Made One Condition Before Signing His Contract.

A tall, gaunt young man entered the office of the Globe museum and Family theater and asked for the manager.

"What can I do for you?" inquired a pudgy man in a checked suit.

"I want an engagement as a freak in the curio hall."

"Who are you?"

"I am Enoch, the egg king."

"What is your specialty?"

"I eat three dozen hen eggs, two dozen duck eggs and one dozen goose eggs at a single sitting."

"I suppose you know our policy."

"What's that?"

"We give four shows every day."

"I understand that."

"And do you think you can do it?"

"I know I can."

"On Saturdays we often give as many as six shows."

"All right."

"And on some holidays we give a performance every hour."

The young man hesitated.

"In that case," he finally said, "I must have one thing understood before I sign a contract."

"What's that?" asked the manager.

"No matter how rushing business is at the museum," the egg king replied, "you gotta gimme time enough to eat my regular meals at the hotel."—Lippincott's.

Urgent Business.

A man called at the postoffice in a certain small town the other day and asked for the postmaster. He was told by the clerk that the postmaster was not in.

"When will he be in?" was asked.

"The postmaster will be in within half an hour. Is there anything I can do for you?" the clerk asked.

"No; I want to see the postmaster."

After awhile the man came back and asked again for the postmaster.

"He's not back yet," the clerk told him. "Is there anything I can do for you, or can I tell him something when he comes?"

"No; there ain't nothin' you can do and I wisht the postmaster was here. I want to see if there's any mail for me, and I'm gettin' in a hurry."—Kansas City Star.

Blown Out.

Thump, thump! Crash! Biff! Bang! Down a long flight of steps leading to the front door rolled young Nocash, ending with a lusty bump at the bottom. The front door slammed angrily on a large, baldheaded, irate man who was rolling down his sleeves.

Inside a dainty girl came tripping across the hall.

"Oh, pa—pa, whatever have you been doing?" she asked in agonized tones.

The old man wiped away a bead of perspiration.

"Only putting out the light of your life!" he replied.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Not In Her Class.

"You know it is stated that a man's heart beats 92,100 times a day," said young thing.

"Yes, every day."

"Well, if a young man's heart didn't beat more times than that the day he proposed to me I'd consider him a pretty cold proposition."—Yonkers Statesman.

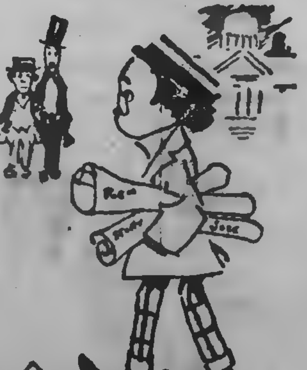
Companionable.

"There goes Dr. Thumper who has kept a certain rich man alive for years in the capacity of private physician."

"He must be a fine doctor."

"Not particularly, but he plays a rattling good game of cards."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Rather Fascinating.



"How did that young writer figure that literature affords such a fine field?"

"He says that there are 24,000 periodicals published in this country and if he makes only a dollar a year from each he will soon be a millionaire."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

That Is Evident.

"I've tried to propose to Mabel a dozen times, and hanged if I can do it. I've slumped every time."

"And she let you slump?"

"Yes."

"My boy, you are courting the wrong girl."—St. Louis Republic.

Heartless.

She—Mr. Brown does not pay his wife much attention.

He—No; the only time I ever knew of his going out with her was once when the gas exploded.—Pick-Me-Up.

Surprised.

"I see that New York has sold all its garbage to a Buffalo contractor."

"That's strange. I thought they were utilizing it on the stage."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"If a man and his wife are one, how many was Solomon and his outfit?"

Buffalo Libel Suit Ends.

BUFFALO, Jan. 5. — The action brought by William J. Conners against Robert J. Collier, which is on the calendar for trial in the Supreme Court here, has been settled.

This announcement was made Saturday night by counsel, who refused to disclose the terms of the settlement. The action was brought for $50,000 damages because of an article published in Collier's Weekly about five years ago concerning Mr. Conners in connection with the harbor elevator contract in Montreal. The case was to go on trial this morning.

Lord Herschell as Sailor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—Signed as a member of the crew, Lord Richard Farrer Herschell, one of the six lords-in-waiting to King George V., arrived here Saturday from South America on the German oil tank steamer Prometheus.

Lord Herschell was eager to get away on the first boat from Talara Bay, and in order to obtain accommodations on the Prometheus, it was necessary for him to become nominally one of the crew. He is on a trip around the world for the benefit of his health.

New Route Objected To.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 5.—The Thorold Board of Trade has decided to object to the change in the route of the Canadian Northern Railway from the original plan to run through that town and go through St. Catharines, through which city the company has already purchased right of way. A deputation will be sent to Ottawa to appear before the railway committee. The ratepayers of St. Catharines will on Jan. 28 vote upon a bylaw to grant the company a bonus of $100,000.

MONTREAL, Jan. 5.—With a bullet in his abdomen, Adolphe Brasiano, 31 years of age, proprietor of an Italian boarding-house in Letourneau street, Maisonneuve, is in a critical condition at the Notre Dame Hospital, while the police are searching for Guiseppe Fatconero, 40 years of age, a boarder at the house, who is alleged to have fired the shot during an altercation early Saturday morning.

Sylvia Pankhurst Re-arrested.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragist agitator, was arrested last night in the east end of London, under the provisions of the "cat and mouse" act. Miss Pankhurst was released from jail Dec. 15, after having endured a hunger, thirst and sleep strike to the point of collapse.

HORSE'S KEEN INSTINCT.

Hydro "Employe" Can Spot Dead Lamps With Certainty.

Bucephalus, as every schoolboy knows, has always been the "top liner" in horsedom, though the enchanted horse in that old friend of our boyhood, "The Arabian Nights," ran him a close second. Since time immemorial tales have been told of the intelligence of "man's best friend," and the latest comes from the city of Toronto, just at a time, too, when the auto seems about to back Dobbin off the stage.

Among the multifarious departments which are in existence to attend to the various utilities run by the city, is one called the Hydro Electric garage. Here are kept the autos used by Hydro officials; trucks for the "trouble department," and other machines too numerous, almost, to mention. There are also horses, which are used occasionally to save gasoline.

One ancient equine has nocturnal duties, to wit: He hauls about, all over the city streets, from dewy eve to morn, an equipage presided over by an employe whose duty it is to prowl round, from one thoroughfare to another, and replace burned out street lamps with new ones. Whether like that friend of Haroun Alraschid (to drop once more into mention of "The Arabian Nights") he cries 'New Lamps for Old,' deponent sayeth not.

But it is in connection with the intelligence of this particular horse that this tale has to do. So "wise to his job" has the venerable nag become that, while roaming the streets in the wee 'sma' hours, apparently sometimes asleep on his feet, he will instantly spot a Hydro post in front of which a lamp is not burning, and without word or act on the part of his driver, proceed with nonchalance most remarkable, to turn round, if on the wrong side of the street, and bring the wagon to a halt right at the foot of the pole to which the "dead" lamp is attached.

Nor does the intelligence of the gentle animal stop at unlit lamps. It has a keen scent for apples, and can "in the language of his driver, 'spot one on the street a hundred yards away.'" A loose rein and humane driver allow Dobbin fair chance to pick up his tid-bit, which he masticates leisurely and then, without urging, starts once more on his way in quest of "dead" lamps.

Lepers Are Cured.

Dr Montizambert, director of public health in Canada, believes that he has discovered a cure for leprosy. During the past year two of the cases which have been under the treatment at the Canadian Leper Colony at Tracadie, N.B., have been sent away cured. In all there have been four absolute cures. The only doubt which is in Dr. Montizambert's mind is that the disease has run itself out, for two cases have been cured in some way without more than ordinary care and treatment. At any rate, four cases which have been under this special treatment have been completely cured, and apparently hopeless cases have been materially benefited.

The cure, Dr. Montizambert says, is chaulmoogra oil. He has made a special study of leprosy during the past 20 years, and amongst all the remedies which he has found used in various parts of the world, he pinned his faith to this oil, which has been in use in India for centuries. He will explain the treatment to medical societies and submit detailed reports of the effect of the Indian treatment.

BRIDE OF THREE MONTHS IS LEFT ALONE

Hubby No. 2 Departs and Goes To Old Country.

A few months ago a quiet and evidently happy wedding was solemnized by a local clergyman, the groom's name being Sandbash.

It is alleged that the wife who is only 25, was in possession of another husband. She claimed she had not heard of him for over six years, and that she did not know whether he was dead or alive.

The man knew of this but the ceremony was performed despite strong protests on the part of the sisters. The police received information regarding the affair but as yet nothing has been done in connection with the matter.

Information received this morning is to the effect that the husband has deserted his bride of three months, by taking a cattle boat to the Old Country.

PRESENTATION OF THE INNER SHRINE

Two Audiences at the Grand Were Well Pleased.

Two well pleased audiences witnessed the society drama "The Inner Shrine" presented at the Grand Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening. Well acted and exceptionally well staged, this play depicting a story of true love and morality could not do otherwise than please.

The story is centred around the untiring labors of Diane Eveleth, a young American lady in Paris, to live down a scandal to which she was wrongfully connected through the licentious and boastful stories circulated by the Marquis de Bienville, so that the clubs would consider him one who could not be made a laughing stock by a flippy American lady. Fate drives them together at the most inopportune times and any chance she is afforded to clear herself, is killed by his words. Until she can prove she is innocent, she refuses to marry her childhood sweetheart, Derek Pruyn.

In the final act the Marquis admits that his stories were untrue and Derek Pruyn sees more plainly Diane Evelth's "Inner Shrine." The finale is very effective.

Justina Wayne in the role of Diane Eveleth, is exceptionally good, as are Albert Andruss, as Derek Pruyn, and Wm. Phillips as Marquis de Bienville.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARTHA LANNIN

Mrs. Martha Lannin, relict of the late Thos. Lannin, passed away in Rochester, N.Y., on Sunday, at the age of 75 years. The remains will be brought to this city tomorrow evening via C. P. ABY LEFT ALONE OUTSIDE STORE

That the city of Peterboro contains some rather heartless mothers, was evidenced this afternoon when a small baby, not more than six months' old, was noticed in front of a store by a Review reporter, whose attention was drawn by a police officer. The baby was blue with cold, and so low was the sleigh that any dog passing could easily have bitten the child. The scribe passed on, and coming back three-quarters of an hour later, the baby was still there, crying lustily, apparently from the cold.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT ASSEMBLY HALL

Mr. Joseph Pearson, well known Evangelist, of Deseronto, will (D.V.) conduct special meetings in the Assembly Hall, George St., over G. T. R. office, commencing on Tuesday night, Jan. 6th, and continuing on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights at 8 p.m., each night.

The public are cordially invited. No collections.

ST. GEORGE'S CHORISTERS

The St. George's Choral Society will resume its practices of the famous Oratorio "Judas Maccabeus" by Handel, in the Collegiate Assembly Hall on Tuesday next, at 8 p.m. prompt. Every member is asked to be present and bring along another member. As the grand performance will take place in April, faithful attendance at rehearsals is a necessity to make this oratorio as great, if not a greater success than the "Messiah" of last year.

4 HORSE DEAL BEFORE COURT

Iorse Dies and Purchaser Does Not Meet His Note.

An interesting action being heard his afternoon before Mr. Sherry, acting in the absence of His Honor udge Huycke, is that of Darcy Dunop, of Smith, seeking payment on note amounting to $80 given him y James Cruikshanks of Smith, as ayment for a horse. It appears that ne day last February Cruikshanks, who is a man just beginning life on farm, bought a horse from Dunlop or $80. This horse was guaranteed y Dunlop to be in good condition, ut three weeks after he purchased t, the animal died. Old age caused he death.

Mr. Cruikshanks then refused to ay the note and Mr. Dunlop brought bout the action.

D. O'Connell is appearing for 'ruikshanks, and R. Ruddy K.C., for Junlop. The jury is composed of he following gentlemen: George Ietherington, David Hamilton, Clinon Henry, Wm. Henry, and D. Hiliard.

Mr. O'Connell, in addressing the ury, stated how the plaintiff's guarnte as to the horse's condition servd as a warrant and the horse dying ives evidence of a breach of warant. When this happens the purhaser has a right to claim damages, mounting to the difference between he true value as the horse and the alue as was stated by the seller. In his case it would amount to $80. The case is proceeding.

Glasses and Good Vision

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.

Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. are long experienced and have a wide and enviable reputation for ability. Our equipment is one of the most complete in Canada and we know how to use it.

BULLER GETS MAYOR'S CHAIR BY A MAJORITY OF 560

SAUNDERS, STRATTON, DUFFUS, JOHNSTON, ANDERSON FOR THE COUNCIL

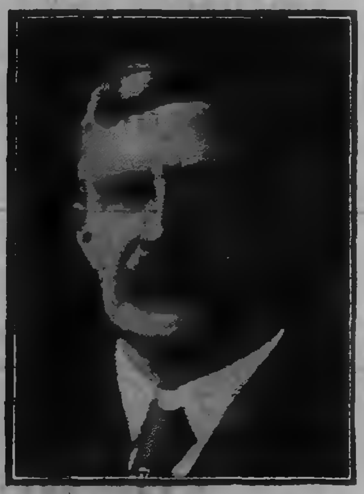
EX-ALDERMAN HICKS COMMISSIONER---BOTH BY-LAWS DEFEATED---BURNHAM, CRANE, HILL, MILLER, SMITH FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

OFFICIAL RETURNS GIVE BULLER MAJORITY OF 560 OVER GILLESPIE AND 611 OVER HARTLEY WHILE HICKS HAD WIN BY 355

Stratton Had Three Vote Margin in the Centre Ward—Crane Lead Board of Education—Decisive Defeat For By-laws.

It is now His Worship Mayor Buller.

The People's Candidate, seven years an alderman, has stepped up to the Chief Magistrate's Chair. He was a popular candidate throughout the city, in yesterday's elections. The vote he received, in the face of opposition on the part of Ald. Gillespie and Mr. J. J. Hartley, must be very satisfactory to him.



His total vote was 1153.

These figures show a majority over Mr. Gillespie of 560, and a majority over Mr. Hartley of 621. Ald. Buller had a majority in every subdivision with the exception of Dawson's where Mr. Hartley led with 75 votes, and at Hamilton's, in the East Ward, where Mr. Gillespie was high man with 52.

UTILITIES' COMMISSIONER.

Ex-Alderman Hicks was returned as Utilities' Commissioner by a majority of 355 over Mr. McWilliams Great interest was shown in this race, by the electors and the result was uncertain, until all reports were in.

THE ALDERMEN.

Mr. Jos. Saunders won victory in the South Ward, where he was given a seat in Council with a majority of 63. He had a lead in every polling sub-division.

It was a keen battle in the Centre Ward. It was announced last night that Mr. Morgan had been elected over Mr. Dobbin and Mr. Stratton. The official figures by the City Clerk gave Mr. Stratton victory by the small margin of 3 votes.

It was Johnson and Duffus all the way in the North and West Wards respectively. Ald. Johnson had over double the number of votes at two polling places and he had three for one over his opponent in the other three.

Ald. Anderson had it all his own way in the East Ward. It was felt that he had good prospects for a win after the nominations as he had given a good account of himself while in Council. Mr. Oke announced his withdrawal and yet between 75 and 100 votes were registered in his favor.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Mr. Crane polled the highest vote in the contest for Board of Education, with 1358 votes. Mr. Hill came next with 1090, and Mr. Smith, who is the new member, came fifth. Dr. Middleton, who was a member of last year's Board, was defeated. Both Mr. Greene and Mr. Rogers made a good showing.

THE BY-LAWS.

The by-laws fell behind with a bang, the majority against the Bridge By-law being 587, while the majority vote against the Motor By-law was 543.

Elected—Crane, Hill, Miller, Burnham and Smith.

PARAGRAPHS ON ELECTIONS

Howson's was first to report. This division gave Buller a majority. Hartley was low man.

Hamilton's gave Gillespie a majority of 5 over Buller.

Buller was strong at the Matthews-Laing polling subdivision..

Dawson's store was a stronghold for Hartley. He had 75.

Johnston won quite a big victory in the North Ward.

Duffus stood up well at Routley's store with 114.

Hydro-Electric was TRUMP.

Saunders had a good majority in the South Ward.

The by-laws got off to a bad start in the first division.

Smith headed the poll at Hamilton's with 64.

Buller leads all the way.

Gillespie got the same number of votes at Matthew-Laing and Lillico's. It was 53.

Burnham was first man in No. 1 South Ward for Board of Education.

Hydro Johnston had the best individual rate in the fight. He was over 100 in every division.

NEWARK, Ohio, Jan. 6.—Fire early this morning destroyed the Gus Kern hotel, a small two-storey building. Of eleven inmates, five were killed and six injured, two of whom will die.

IS ARRESTED ON THEFT CHARGE

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—Herbert H. Kirby, of Vancouver, representing himself to be a commercial traveller, was arrested by the Ottawa police in a lower town hotel at 10:30 on a charge of having stolen a diamond ring worth $150 from a resident of Peterboro. Detective Ouimet, who effected the arrest, recovered the ring from the possession of a woman, who it is said, Kirby handed it to as the detective approached him.

JUDGMENT CONFIRMED IN TWENTY-FOUR CASES

Members of Structural Iron Workers Must go to Prison

Canadian Press Despatch

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Judgment of the Federal District Court of Indianapolis sentencing to prison thirty members of the International Association of Structural Iron Workers, was affirmed today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in twenty-four cases, while six cases were reversed, and go back for retrial.

The cases reversed are: Tveitmoe, McKane, Rae, Houlihan, Sherman, and Bernhardt. Sentence of seven years against Ryan was confirmed. These convictions were in cases growing out of the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times.

NO CHANGE IN CONDITION OF THE PREMIER

Canadian Press Despatch

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The words "Fairly Well" in a bulletin issued last night, is taken by those around the Prime Minister to mean that any disposition to feel optimism over Sir James' condition should be controlled. The doctors this morning are extremely reticent. The patient's rooms are ideally situated, overlooking a quiet court and the strictest injunctions have been laid on those surrounding to refrain from exciting the Premier in any way.

A private car engaged some days ago to take Sir James back to Toronto, is still on hand, although it cannot be learned whether there is any prospect of the patient being removed today or very soon.

Physicians' consultations were held last night and this morning. Sir James some time ago was informed of the serious nature of his trouble. The report circulated on Sunday of the Premier's death was the creation of a New York newspaper office whence queries were sent to Canadian papers.

NEW YORK, (11 o'clock)—Doctors Pyne and Biggs issued the following bulletin from the hotel Manhattan regarding Sir James Whitney: "Patient about the same as yesterday; passed comfortable night.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—At the Manhattan hotel this morning it was said Sir James Whitney had a fairly good night and had slept well.

THE LATE MRS. DILLON

Many friends and acquaintances will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. James Dillon, who passed away this morning at St. Joseph's Hospital.

SHORT ON PEACE AND HARMONY

Troubles of a Blacklister's Home Told in Police Court.

The lack of peace and harmony in one household was brought out in police court circles this morning when a local blacklister was charged with being drunk while on the list. Magistrate Dumble contended however, that he was not justified in making a conviction, owing to the evidence of the wife who was the informant in the case. The charge was therefore dismissed. G. N. Gordon acted for the defendant while Inspector Stewart conducted the case for the prosecution.

The evidence given by the wife was to the effect that the husband had been drinking ever since he had been placed on the list. This evidence was contradicted by the son and daughter, who gave evidence to the effect that they had never seen their father under the influence of liquor to their knowledge.

"There is certainly not much peace and harmony,' remarked the daughter.

"What is the cause?" inquired the Inspector.

"Oh, everything."

In the box the husband gave evidence that he had not touched a drop of liquor since being placed on the list.

"When you have children you have to see that they are brought up right, and it's hard to stay around home when you're wife curses and chews all day on Sunday, so I get out and go over to my relatives."

BANK CLERK IS UNDER ARREST

Hamilton, Jan. 6.—An important arrest was made here for the Toronto police, when Forbes Skene, recently clerk in the Bank of Montreal at Lindsay, was locked up on a charge of passing forged cheques. He was taken into custody while in the Bank of Montreal here.

It is said that he was a clerk at Lindsay until a week or so ago, and after leaving there he went to Toronto. He is accused of passing a cheque for $25 at the Walker House Annex, which cheque is said to be worthless. He then disappeared. The local police were asked to be on the lookout for him. Yesterday afternoon they were informed that the man suspected of trying to pass a worthless cheque was at the Bank of Montreal and Detective Goodman immediately went there. He took charge of Skene, and he will be sent back to Toronto. It is said that a number of cheques marked good were found upon him and it is alleged that Skene while in the bank marked the cheques good and that he placed signatures upon them and then set out to pass them.

TRADES AND LABOR OFFICIALS WAIT ON PREMIER BORDEN

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 6.—Amendment of the industrial disputes act to offset the decision of the court of review in the Montreal tramways case that a discharged employee cannot apply for a board of conciliation, a request that the fair wage clauses in government contracts provide a penalty for employers who violate them; amendment to the immigration act forbidding employers, during labor troubles, to loan money to immigrants; legislation to put into effect the findings of the technical commission to make dominion election a public holiday and abolish candidates deposits; the eight-hour day on all public works; and a royal commission to investigate conditions of iron and steel works in the Maritime provinces.

The foregoing were the chief demands of a delegation representing the Dominion trades and labor congress which waited on Premier Borden yesterday and received promise of consideration. The delegates were:—Jas. Watters, Ottawa, president; P. M. Draper, Ottawa; secretary Fred Bancroft, controller Jas. Simpson, Jas. Givens, James Watt and John Bruce, of Toronto; George Brunet and J. T. Foster, o Montreal; and J. G. O'Donoghue, Toronto, solicitor.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JAN. 6, 1914.

LOST AND WON.

THE HURLY-BURLY is over and the battle is lost and won. The situation is not difficult to diagnose. There was no doubt in the minds of most people that, despite the contest being a three-cornered one, Mr. Buller would be chosen for the Mayor's chair. While many who voted for Mr. Hartley, as Labor candidate, might have given their support to Mr. Gillespie if there had only been two candidates in the field; the same can be said on Mr. Buller's behalf, for many votes were given to Mr. Hartley out of loyalty to the labor organizations which would otherwise have gone to Mr. Buller. So that Mr. Buller can be regarded as having been endorsed by the great majority of the citizens. While we regard the election of Mr. Buller as satisfactory, we regret that the exigencies of the contest entail the loss of Mr. Gillespie to the Council for the year. It is a pity that we have to risk the loss of some of our best men in the fight for the Mayoralty.

There is practically little change in the bench of aldermen, the tightest contest occuring in Centre Ward. It will be agreed that the re-election of Mr. Johnson by so substantial a majority is both a confirmation of his work and a triumph for the Hydro.

The Board of Education remains the same, with the exception of Mr. Smith. This is an endorsment of the good work that has been accomplished by the Board in the building of new schools and the general good state of educational affairs.

Mr. McWilliams ran Mr. Hicks pretty close at some points, but the latter has a good balance in his favor for the office of Water Commissioner.

The fact of the By-laws being defeated does not dispose altogether of the questions involved. The people were evidently satisfied with the efficiency of the fire department. If the firemen had not been so good in the past they might have been given a new motor car. Most people evidently thought they were quick enough with their present equipment. The object of the new machine was to ensure a quicker service to cover the outlying industrial districts.

The question of the Dalhousie street bridge has not been disposed of, it has merely been deferred. Many people would like to see a good substantial bridge into Ashburnham and this will come in time. But doubtless the majority of the citizens thought the Council had sufficient on their hands at present in the completion of the Hydro scheme and perhaps the citizens are right.

HERETICS AT THE TABLE.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY has two heretics on his hands in the Bishops of Uganda and Mombassa. These missionary prelates have committed the fearful sin of allowing members of other Christian Churches to partake of the bread and wine at the Lord's table. If Christ Himself had permitted only Anglicans to sit with him in the upper-room He would have sat alone to supper. But as it was the whole twelve sat down with Him, representing all kinds of men and even the one that "had a devil" was there. The time of priestly exclusiveness in Protestant Churches should come to an end; some of us wonder why it was ever instituted.

If the Archbishop of Canterbury were to live in Uganda for a little while he might come to see the matter from his heretic's point of view. If there is one thing that perplexes the unsophisticated "heathen" and keeps him from accepting Christ as the Divine teacher it is these petty differences among His so-called followers. We can understand the exclusiveness of the Roman Church sacrament, if we do not believe in it, but among plain Protestants, who follow the plain narrative of what occurred at the last meal, there should be no exclusiveness. There was an agnostic as well as a mystic among those present, and even the betrayer was an invited guest.

CAN WE ABOLISH TITLES ?

THE NEW YEAR'S HONORS include as usual a number of Canadians. We are getting quite a galaxy of knights in the Dominion. There are those, and our own member for Peterborough is amongst them, who would abolish all titles which distinguish one man from another. This doubtless springs from a democratic spirit. We pride ourselves upon being a democracy. "Jack's as good as his master," we say. But while Jack may be as good and perhaps better than his master, he is not always as well-off as his master—and furthermore Jack is merely Jack and his master is his master and he generally impresses that fact upon him.

The Social distinctions of the Old Country are not something British merely. Cast, more or less, seems to be the normal state of human society. It has been carried to extreme, but no nation can wholly escape it. Even the democratic States who boast of their freedom from aristocracy send over their daughters to England to graduate in "Society" and, if possible, secure a belted Earl. The craze of the American for English relics, paintings, etc., is another symptom of this inate desire for distinction. They have their "Colonel," "Judge," "Doctor," no end of "Doctors" ! and all kinds of sham and cheap degrees. Man is not a democratic animal, and if he cannot get the genuine insignia of rank he will purchase the imitation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NORTH WARD has confirmed the hyphen in Hydro-Johnson.

DUFFUS HAD TO RUN for all he was Worth in West Ward, but he got there by a good stride.

ANDERSON had an easy thing on in East Ward. He walked all the way smiling at the other fellows' exertions.

ONE OF OUR PAPERS says there is a fine art in eating onions. Where the art is required is in concealing the fact of having eaten them.

SAUNDERS had a good lead in the South. He has a good deal of work before him in that quarter—you southerners who are without water and sewage, get after Mr. Saunders!

THE LETHBRIDGE HERALD thinks that "all Canada will have their eyes on Lethbridge this year." It is to be hoped it will not result in embarrasment.

WITH THE NEW YEAR comes new Diaries, new almanacs, New "Year books." 1913 is thrown into the limbo of the wastepaper basket without a tear. On ordinary days we turn over a new leaf but with the New Year we get a new book.

THE CENTRE WARD contest proved a general mix-up. Dobbin, Morgan and Stratton got into a sort of Rugby scrimmage and you could scarcely tell who was on top and who was underneath. We know who is the best man. But we won't say.

WHAT THE WORLD IS SAYING

Plain Living.

Lethbridge Herald.

One of the methods of reducing the cost of living is to live plainly, says the London Advertiser. True, and the practice would also cut down the doctor's bills as well.

Eggs is Eggs.

Mail and Empire.

"Eggs is eggs" is no longer a truism. The market term "eggs" applies to stock that has practically ceased to be eggs. If you want what used to be known as eggs, you must enquire not for "eggs" or even "fresh eggs," but for "strictly new-laid eggs."

A Double Martyr.

Kansas City Star.

Editor Harding, of the Attica Independent, is becoming tired of his job as Mayor of the town. He says that every man who thinks his taxes are too high gets even by stopping his paper, and every time the council does something or fails to do something, an indignant delegation stumps in and stops their papers.

A Grievous Wrong.

Mail and Empire.

An Italian who was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment and who has served five years is found to have been innocent and has been released. No matter whether the judge and jury made a mistake or whether the evidence before them admitted of no other conclusion than that the prisoner was guilty, this man has suffered a grievous wrong. If the Government of Canada granted him a pension for the remainder of his days it would not be too much.

Slang.

Montreal Mail.

Slang : Words or phrases which have acquired capricious or extravagantly metaphorical meaning.

Perhaps so ; but these words or phrases are verile. For example, take the expression "I knocked him." One might as readily say "I expressed disapproval of his genial appearance, his mentality and his method of beating his wife."

"Hobo," has been used for so many years that the origin is obscure. And yet it is slang.

"Junk" is a nautical term used to describe old or condemned cable or cordage. Also it is slang. But isn't it a beautiful word ? Is there anything more useless to the average person than old or condemned cordage, save only the strip of white paper attached to a sheet of stamps ?

"Crook" is a curious word. As slang we use it when speaking of a man whose morals are warped. But Spencer, in the "Faery Queen," uses it as a synonym for gibbet. The crook "gets it both ways."

In Australia the word "graft" means "to work." It came to America, was labelled "slang," and used to express the companion ideas of bribery and corruption. One may say "J is a grafter." That is slang, and it is deceptive. Even if it be slang we must use it, for we have no single word to take its place.

Our "slang words and phrases are time-savers, and for that reason the man who uses them may be called slovenly. On the other hand they conserve energy. One might say that they are impressionistic, but the sooner they are recognised as legitimate forms of speech and incorporated in our dictionaries, the better.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door, let in the air.
The winds are sweet and the flowers are fair.
Joy is abroad in the world to-day ;
If our door is wide it may come this way.
Open the door !

Open the door, let in the sun ;
He hath a smile for everyone.
He hath made of the raindrops gold and gems.
He may change our tears to diadems.
Open the door !

Open the door of the soul; let in Strong, pure thoughts which shall banish sin.
They will grow and bloom with grace divine.
And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the vine.
Open the door !

Open the door of the heart ; let in Sympathy sweet for stranger and kin.
It will make the halls of the heart so fair,
That angels may enter unaware.
Open the door !

Uprising In Ecuador Checked.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Jan. 6.—A plot to attack the barracks at Guayaquil Sunday night, was discovered by the Government in time to prevent a serious situation. A group of revolutionists under Col. Valle Franco was surprised while making preparations. The leader was killed and the members of the group were dispersed. Troops patrolled the city during the night in fear of disorders.

Several Government officials who were involved in the rebel campaign in Esmeraldas have been brought here under arrest. They will be court-martialled.

Schooner "Rescue" Lost.

HALIFAX, Jan. 6.—Alfred Potter of Canning, N.S., has received a cable from Nevitas, Cuba, reporting the loss of his schooner Rescue. No mention is made of the crew of eight men and it is presumed all were safe.

The Rescue left Hantsport some time ago with a cargo of potatoes for Barbados and sailed from the latter port on Dec. 17 for Pensacola, Fla. She registered 321 tons and was built in 1892.

Murder In Germany.

Germany distinguishes between two kinds of murder. One, premeditated and intentional, is punishable by death; the second, intentional homicide without deliberation, is punishable by penal servitude for from five to fifteen years. Dueling in Germany is a misdemeanor of a special kind. Who kills his opponent in a duel is not charged with murder or manslaughter, but with dueling, the punishment for which is detention in a fortress for fifteen years.—London Chronicle.

Didn't Owe Them Anything.

In the course of an educational lecture the speaker made this assertion: "We owe much to heredity and environment."

When he had finished and the audience had arisen a man whose knowledge of the dictionary was limited walked up to him and remarked: "You said in your speech that we owe much to heredity and environment. Now, I never heard of that firm before, and I know I don't owe them one cent."

TOO MUCH RUNNIN' 'ROUND.

Khan in Hamilton Herald.

"They all must have plenty of money when they think it necessary to run home on every big holiday—Christmas, Easter, Dominion Day, Arbor Day, Thanksgiving," remarked Aunt Lucy.

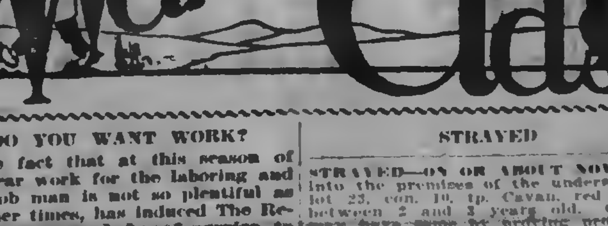
"They consider it necessary because folks might remark if they didn't. Some folks would actually ask them: 'Hev you no home to go to?' And of course they've gotta go, although some of them are only an added burden and anxiety to the folks at home. You wouldn't like it yourself if you had no home to go to. S'posin' you was teachin' school way up in the Queen's Bush, you'd like to come home for Christmas. If you had none of your own, you'd have to stick it out in your boarding house, an' the chickadees in the cedars and the sleighbells on the concession and the wind in the orchard would keep a-sayin': 'The pore thing hes got no home — no home — no home to go to!'

"I am never so very sorry for an infiddle as long as he is alone, but when he dies it's a horse uv another color—he's got no home to go to. No matter how poor a body may be, so long as he is a Christian he's gotta home to go to. To the good man death is a going home for Christmas—going home to join the old folks who went home for their Christmas perhaps forty years before.

"Out on the streets on a bitter night, how many men do we see who have no home to go to! Towards midnight they drift in to the police station, which represents hell. Those who have a home to go to, sleep in a little heaven on earth.

"Were I a missionary, I wouldn't ask the man on the street if he were saved: I would ask him if he had a home to go to. I would ask him if he was going to be satisfied to dwell for all time in a basswood box painted to look like rosewood.

"If there are any people in this world who have no homes to go to, it is their own fault. It is a distressing thought that those who have no home to go to when they die can blame only themselves. No one need sleep in a lumber yard or under a culvert or in a barn or straw stack these cold nights; neither need he sleep in a fence corner in Hades when he goes hence."



DO YOU WANT WORK?

The fact that at this season of the year work for the laboring and odd job man is not so plentiful as at other times, has induced The Review to try and be of service to them, and will therefore, insert an adv. free of charge for all such men.

Many people often want help, but do not know where to secure it. By consulting the advs. of those wanting jobs, they will be able to secure the help they want.

Anyone wanting a job of any kind can have the service of The Review by calling at the office and making their wants known.

Make use of The Review—it is at the service of all such.

PETES INVADE BOWMANVILLE DEFEAT HOMESTERS BY 10-5

Locals Lead at Half-time by 5-3 and Always Looked Like Winners --- Giroux Was Injured but Came Back After Repairs--- Park and Kelly Worked Well

We're off, now watch us go. A start for the Intermediate championship was made last night when the locals beat Bowmanville on their own rink. Yesterday morning when the team was being rounded up, it appeared as if a weak team would represent the blue and white, but, thanks to the spirit with which Maurice Parks is imbued and several other incidents, the honors came our way. The fair haired centre man found it impossible to get away on the Grand Trunk 11:40, but with an extra effort he went on the C. P. R. 4:33 to Burkton and then drove to Bowmanville..

The score was 10-5 and Park has 5 of the 10 to his credit. He was easily the balance of power. Kelly put up a great game as rover. He was all over and his back checking was a great asset. "Bud" had the home goalminder terribly excited in the last half. His cannon like shots were singing around the unfortunate's neck and at one stage of the game he turned his back in order to save his personal appearance. Two goals were the result of Kelly's shooting. Kennealley at right wing was going much better than he was the last game, and worked well with Park and Kelly. Lansfield at right, did some nice stick handling and scored a goal on a pretty shot, waist high, but he couldn't get going. His skating appears to be the only trouble and no doubt being on strange ice, is the cause of that. Lansfield was going good in Syracuse last year and he will no doubt get started before long.

Giroux Was Game

Captain Giroux, who was at left defence, was going good in the first part of the game and had two goals to his credit but after about twenty minutes of play he was gashed in the thigh and it took eight stitches to close the wound. Giroux's gameness in known to all the local fans but it was something new for the Bowmanville sports and they gave our husky little captain a great ovation when he went out again in the last half and never let up till the final gong. Harold Long, the junior man, who filled the right defence, played a good game considering that he was in pretty fast company. He was a little slow in geting away, but his weight was used to good advantage.

Red Kicked Them Out

"Red" Dwyer in goal for the locals, put up a good game and considering that it was his first game, he deserves credit for the way he kicked them out. In the last half he had several hot ones to handle, but he was on the job with his finger mit, and stopped everything that came his way. Bowmanville scored the first goal in 20 seconds of play but it was very fluky. The shot went over the net and struck the wire netting behind the goal. The disc bounded back and rolled around the goal post. It took the goal umpire about five minutes to raise the flag as it looked more than an impossibility.

The score at half time was 5-3 in favor of the local boys, but there was nothing to it in the last half, but the Petes.

Harvey Sproule handled the game and that signifies that it was handled properly. The locals must clearly understand that they have to stay on the ice to win, for not a man on the Peterboro team drew a penalty. One Bowmanville man was put off for a minor offense, the only penalty of the game.

The teams:

Peterboro—Goal Jas. Dwyer, right defence, H. Long; left defence, F. Kelly; centre, C. Giroux; rover, M. Parks; left wing, O. Kennealley, right wing, T. Lansfield.

Bowmanville—Goal, Spry; right defence, Dustan; left defence, Jones, centre, Williams; rover, Cryderman, left wing, Hooper, right wing, Higginsbotham.

ALERTS' LINEUP FOR THE OPENING GAME

The Alert team who play the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night will line up as follows:

Goal, Legros; right defence, Davidson; left defence, Galvin; right wing, Wheeler; left wing, LeGrende; rover, Heath; centre, Lowes. Spares Murty, Bartley and Doughty.

The officers of the club are:

Pres.—Mr. J. Maher.
Sec.—Mr. E. Riley.
Manager—Mr. W. Prindible.

The Alerts also have a team who will play any other Junior team outside of the Junior City League.

PUCKERINGS FROM PUCK

Sammy Herbert, the Ontarios' sensational goalkeeper, is only 19 years old. He has been on a championship team every year except last year since he has been playing. He started with the Ottawa School champions and then went to Ottawa III., who won the intermediate city title in 1910. In 1911 he switched to the Cedar Hockey Club, and they won the title in 1911 and 1912. Last year he was with Stewarton seniors, and he has signed with New Edinburghs when the Ontarios offered him a contract and secured him. He weighs only 130 pounds and is a quiet mannered little fellow. The husky Ontarios treat him like a little brother. Anybody who bumps Herbert gets a rough passage from then on.

Denison will be back to-morrow, so Oshawa looks easy.

The "Cubs" should keep it up by winning over the Frontenacs to-night.

Harvey Sproule will referee here to-night. He created a sensation last night by appearing with a new sweater coat. It is black and white and bears the monogram T.R.C.

Reg. Rankin has nothing on Capt. Giroux when it comes to gameness.

The rink in Bowmanville is the best on the circuit the local players state. It is extra well lighted.

"Bill" Hancock, of Toronto, who has been coaching Bowmanville, gave up the ghost last night. Bill will be applying for a job as referee in a few days.

Two O. H. A. rinks at Simcoe and Ingersoll, built and owned by the same man, George Mason, collapsed on Saturday and Sunday, owing to the unusually heavy snow storm of Saturday afternoon and evening. The centre of the roof of the Simcoe Rink fell in at midnight on Saturday, fortunately after everybody had gone home, and therefore nobody was injured. At 11 o'clock on Sunday morning at Ingersoll several of the girders supporting the roof, went down, leaving a gap about several feet in length. The galvanized iron roofing and the timbers which supported it are now lying in a heap on the ice. With the aid of several firemen an attempt was made to get the snow off the roof when its collapse was threatened, but it fell in while the work was in progress.

CONNIE MACK SAYS THAT HE HAS A SHOW

For the 1914 Pennant — Thinks Detroit Will be a Contender in the Race

Philadelphia, Jan. 6.—Always conservative, always mindful of the thousand and one pitfalls that may wreck a great ball team, Connie Mack doesn't believe that the 1914 pennant brush in the American league has already been won by the Athletics.

"It is foolish to say at this time that we are certain to grab the muslin next season," pointed out Connie.

"Of course we have a good chance, but even if we should happen to win again, it is going to be a stiff race. No ball team was ever banded together that could win a championship and treat the race as a joke. The Athletics will have to play marvelous baseball to win.

"I look for far stronger competition than we had this year, and we hustled some, believe me. I heard it said that we had no race this season, but it would only take some one connected with the Athletic club to disprove this assertion. I had worries for three-quarters of a season.

Sox Beat Them Out

"I have every confidence in my club to make a good showing. It is the best club I ever headed, but in my long baseball experience I have seen similarly formidable clubs wane. The Athletics won the world's championship in 1911, and looked to be irresistible for the 1912 race, but did they win?

"The Boston Americans won the world's title in 1912, but where were they in the brush this season?

"There is always the chance of one of the rival teams discovering a wonder to upset calculations. At the start of the season of 1907 I thought the Athletics would win the championship, barring accidents. We would have won the honor had it not been for the fact that Detroit discovered a marvelous player in Ty Cobb—a player who had not entered into my calculations. Detroit nosed us out in 1907, solely due to the brilliant batting and defense of Cobb.

Cobb Beats Mackmen

"Again in 1909 we would have won the championship had not Cobb been in the way. His .400 per cent. bat kept us out of the world's series that season. It is easy to see that the Detroit scouts only have to find one or two more great players to put the Tigers back in the pennant running.

"In the last two seasons the Athletics have had a new championship rival to combat. Washington has leaped from a rank outsider to one of the most dangerous clubs in baseball.

"How did this come about? Because Washington discovered Walter Johnson, one of the most remarkable pitchers that ever hurled a sphere. It has been this phenomenon who pitched Washington from a joke team into a pennant possibility.

"Suppose for instance, Griffith would spring a Cobb or Speaker on us next spring, would the Athletics have a joy ride to the pennant? Not by your uncle's old straw hat. We would have to rupture a few ligaments to win if we did at all.

Look Out for Washington

"As long as Washington has a fairly good team behind Walter Johnson it will be dangerous. When it gets a hard-hitting team behind him, then good night!

"Cleveland is steadily gaining in strength. If it gains as much over this year in 1914 as it gained this season over 1912 we are going to have our hands full. The Naps are stronger than they had credit for being. The best point about them is that they are well balanced. Birmingham did wonders in his first year as a tactician and must be rated among the successful managers of the day.

"Boston is one of those dynamite teams. It may do poorly one season and then come back and turn up the league in the next. McAleer's men had more than their share of misfortune last season. It was the hoodoo team of the majors, just like the Phillies were in 1911. Last season Boston hardly ever had its strongest team intact. It appeared to have substitutes in every game.

Walsh May Come Back

"Joe Wood, the mainstay of the pitching corps, had an off season. His arm wasn't right, but that does not mean he is through with baseball. It must be recalled that Wood is only a boy. He is in his 25th year, and should outgrow any trouble with his arm. If Wood comes back, as I predict he will, it will mean that Boston will be in the race.

"The dark horse of the 1914 campaign ought to be the White Sox. Callahan's men finished strong this season. They would have made more trouble than they did hadn't Ed. Walsh gone wrong. Even with the handicap of losing the services of their best pitcher, the Sox played fine ball. With Walsh available they should do better. The Sox are a coming team and will bear watching.

"I think the teams mentioned outclass Detroit, St. Louis and New York, but still any one of these three clubs may find enough good, new material to upset this assertion.

"I believe I have cited enough points to make it clear that no team in November is justified in saying it is going to have a walkover in the pennant race the next season. Don't think for a minute I have lost any confidence in the champions of the world.

"It is my ideal team, the combination I have striven for years to form, and it is entitled to the greatest of respect from the fans. I have not quit on the kings of the diamond, but I am merely trying to hint at the uncertainty of baseball and show there might be new conditions next season to trip even as great a team as the Athletics."

BASEBALL

Tokio and Yokohama newspapers carrying detailed accounts of the doings of the Giants and White Sox during their recent two-day visit in Japan, have arrived and they furnish strong evidence that the short sojourn proved a big success, both financially and from the standpoint of sport. These papers, which are printed in English, devote columns to the tourists and their games with photographs of various players, individually and in groups, as well as detailed accounts of the games by innings and a complete box score of each contest. There is no mistaking that the writers enjoy a thorough knowledge of the national pastime of the United States.

The total attendance of the three games was 18,000, and in each instance the Kieo University playing field was filled, hundreds being compelled to stand up so near to the outfielders that they interfered with the playing. The admission prices ran up to three yen, or $1.50 in American money, this being considered a high figure for a sporting event in Japan. The Tokio Times remarks that "it is a mathematical puzzle to imagine how great a crowd would have made a rush to the ball park had not the admission charges aviated up to the three yen mark." The greatest gathering was at the Sunday morning game, when the Kieo University team of Japanese players engaged in a game with a picked team from the touring clubs. This crowd numbered 7,000. On Saturday afternoon 5,000 saw the White Sox defeat the Giants and on Sunday afternoon 6,000 witnessed the second game between the touring teams. The Sunday morning game was played in chilly weather, but it was warm in the afternoon.—New York Times.

LINEUP OF THE JUNIOR TEAM

Likely Looking Team to go Against the Frontenacs.

The Junior O. H. A. team that will represent this city will be seen in action tonight at Brock Street Rink, whey they play Kingston Frontenacs. Jas. Sutherland, the crafty manager of the visitors, can always be relied on to place a fast team on the ice, so the game should be a fineo pener.

The following will be the local line-up:

Goal Darling; right defence long; left defence Richardson; rover Capt. Halpin; centre Rose; left wing, Barrie; right wing Knapman.

Spares—Latimer, Smith and Long.

The game will be handled by Harvey Sproule of Toronto.

Among the visitors will be Millan, credited with being the speediest junior in the O. H. A.

Good eggs will sink in a brine of two ounces salt to a pint of water, bad ones will float.

DUTCH BELTED CATTLE.

Once Nearly Exterminated, They Are Now Bred by the Nobility.

Dutch belted cattle originated in Holland several hundred years ago. At the time of the great Holland wars they were nearly exterminated by the invading armies, and the few that remained became the property of the nobility, who have bred them pure ever since, but do not willingly part with them. They are known in Holland as Vehilargers, which name means "wrapped around with a sheet."

In color they are black, with a band of pure white entirely around the body. They may also have white fore feet, white hind feet and legs up to the gambrels and a white switch. The "belt" varies in width. On some it is but a few inches wide. On others it reaches back on the hips and forward on the shoulders. Usually it covers the body from just in front of the hips nearly to the shoulders.

They have the prominent eyes, thin neck, silky hair, soft skin, elevated flanks, broad hips, long, slim tails, shapely, well placed udders, prominent milk veins and so called milk form, which make up the dairy type of cow. They are very tame and docile, hardy and vigorous.—G. G. Gibbs in American Cultivator.

STOPPING THE EARTH.

It Would Generate Heat Enough to Turn Our Globe to Vapor.

The stopping of a projectile always results in the generation of heat. The velocity and weight of a projectile being known the amount of heat developed by its stoppage can be calculated. In the case of large bodies moving rapidly the result of the calculation is something astounding.

For example, the earth weighs 6,000,000,000,000 tons and travels in its orbit at the rate of over eighteen miles a second. Should it strike a target strong enough to stop its motion the heat developed by the shock would be sufficient not merely to fuse the earth, but also to reduce a large portion of it to vapor. It has been calculated that the amount of heat generated by a collision so colossal would equal that obtained from the burning of fourteen globes of coal each equal to the earth in size.

And should the earth after its stoppage fall into the sun, as it certainly would do, the amount of heat that would be developed by its impact on the sun would be equal to that generated by the combustion of 5,000 earths of solid carbon.

Two Waterloos.

It is a very curious fact that a good many people do not know that two battles were fought at Waterloo. Both of these were fought against the French, the first under the command of the Duke of Marlborough on Aug. 17, 1705, who on this date actually occupied the same ground as the Duke of Wellington did a little more than a century later, June 17, 1815, the only difference being that the former was marching on Brussels and the latter was marching from Brussels. In the first battle the French were defending Brussels. They marched out to meet Marlborough, but owing to the slackness on the part of Schlangenburg, the Dutch general, who was fighting with him, it was not a success, Marlborough only taking a few of the French troops as prisoners. The following one, fought against Napoleon by Wellington, proved to be one of the greatest victories ever recorded in the annals of England.

On a Monday Morning.

Monday morning is a hard test for the institution which we call life. Life may be all very well on Saturday night and Sunday morning, but how about Monday morning? If you wake up then with a pleasurable anticipation of the week of work which is ahead of you, you are a happy man. The instinct of the bad boy who plays truant never quite dies out of us. One dreams of a Monday morning when the sun is shining and the air is clear, of slipping quietly into one's clothes, of tiptoeing softly out of the house, of scaling the fence and crossing the meadow and losing oneself in the alluring woods, while time clocks remain unpunched and whistles blow in vain.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Improving It.

A foreigner meeting an American friend said to him, "How are you?" The latter replied, "Out of sight."

The man considered this very clever and decided to use the expression on the next occasion. Shortly after he was met by a friend, who asked, "How are you?" With visible pride he answered, "You don't see me."—New York Globe.

She Was Safe.

Little four-year-old Mabel was running downhill, holding her dress tightly.

"Be careful," called her mother, "or you will fall."

"Oh, no, I won't," replied Mabel, "'cause I'm holding tight to myself."

Reassured.

"What is this white spot on that goldfish I bought from you?"

"He has simply shed a scale."

"Oh, I thought maybe the plating was wearing off.—Pittsburgh Post.

Better Chance.

Ted—I'm trying to find some one who knows me to go security on my note.

Tom—Don't you think, my boy, you'd better look for some one who doesn't know you?

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

Egypt's public debt now amounts to $430,534,014, almost entirely foreign held.

Only one person in 100 inhabitants of Great Britain owns more than an acre of land.

END OF A FAMOUS OLD INN.

Built and Owned by Washington, It Has Now Got to Go.

Known as the Washington inn, built and owned by George Washington and further enjoying the distinction of being the only structure ever owned in the national capital by the first president, this time stained pile will soon come down to make way for the new park that is to connect the Union station with the capitol. It stands half a block north of the capitol grounds and years ago was known as the Kenmore House and still earlier as the Hillman House. In its present form it is a reconstruction of two houses built by George Washington, and all but the lower portion retains the original walls.

In December, 1798, Washington wrote a letter to William Thornton, an architect, "to proceed in laying in materials for carrying on my buildings in the federal city." In the same letter, which was written from Mount Vernon, he said: "I saw a building in Philadelphia of about the same front and elevation that are to be given to my two houses, which pleased me. It consisted of two houses united, doors in the center, a pediment in the roof and dormer windows on each side of it in front, skylights in the rear. If this is not incongruous with rules of architecture, I should be glad to have my two houses executed in this style."

The architects and builders carried out Washington's request. Washington paid $936 for the two lots on which the houses were built and valued the houses at $15,000.—Argonaut.

THE NEW ARCTIC LAND.

There is Not Enough Room For It to Be "as Large as Greenland."

It is scarcely possible that the newly discovered Nicholas II. Land is "as large as Greenland," for there is no such unknown area on the map. Greenland is about 1,000 miles long and 800 miles wide. The point at which the new land was reached is about sixty miles due north of Cape Chelluskin and extends, so far as surveyed, not more than 200 miles northward. To be as large as Greenland the island would have to stretch clear across the pole well over toward Point Barrow.

Nevertheless there is room in the Arctic ocean between the Taimur peninsula and the Alaskan coast for a large island or group of islands, and observations of tidal currents have long indicated that some such land existed. The reported discovery lies almost midway between Franz Josef Land and the New Siberia islands. Thence it can scarcely extend far to the westward, but it may reach eastward and north of east for some hundreds of miles without entering the region which has been explored by voyagers by the way of Bering strait.

The political and economic value of the new land will be nil. Its geographic and oceanographic interest to the scientific world will be great, and it will make to the polar map one of the most striking additions this generation has seen.—New York Tribune.

Origin of Life Again.

Others besides Dr. Bastian have been working upon the question of the origin of life. At the meeting of the British association Dr. Benjamin Moore of Liverpool made the claim that he had proved that strong sunlight or the light from a mercury lamp acting upon certain solutions can convert the lifeless into living matter. Sir Oliver Lodge objected that the investigator had only succeeded in securing potential living matter, a physical and chemical vehicle which could be made use of by life. Most of the specialists dealing with chemical reactions deceive themselves in just this way, mistaking the appearance of life for life itself.—New York World.

WON TWO FIFTHS OF LOCAL OPTION FIGHTS

Three-Fifths Clause Proves Waterloo in Eighteen Cases While in Six the Bylaws Are Defeated by a Straight Majority

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—Vigorous campaigns were waged throughout Ontario yesterday for and against local option bylaws, with the result that sixteen more municipalities will go dry. In 24 places the bylaws were defeated. In three-fourths of these contests the failure to get a three-fifths' vote is accountable.

The net result is as follows:

Carried local option bylaws....	16
Failed to get three-fifths vote..	18
Bylaw defeated by straight majority	6
Repeals failed	15
Repeals succeeded	0
To be heard from	1

There are 835 municipalities in Ontario of which 502 are without bars.

The following are the results by towns. In each case the figures in brackets indicate the number of licenses affected.

TAKES HIS PLAYTHINGS.

The Britisher on Foreign Duty Never Forgets His Games.

Wherever the wandering Britisher may go he takes his playthings with him. In the wilds of far New Guinea he plays his golf, and braves the torrid heat of Port Soudan on sun-baked tennis courts and sandy "greens." Cricket and even football have their devotees, and the nimble Abyssinian pony has much to do with the popularity of polo.

To those who prefer less strenuous forms of recreation, sailing is a favorite pastime, and the turtle, shark, and multi-colored fish that inhabit the tepid waters outside the harbor afford a never-ending source of entertainment. The commercial value of the turtle has yet to be exploited, but the Soudan Government has lost no time in establishing pearl fisheries a little to the north of Port Soudan, with an eye to future revenue.

Large and well-built stores have been erected in the western town by Greek and native traders, whilst the eastern side of the harbor has been reserved for customs offices and enclosures, and shipping sheds and warehouses. A labyrinth of railway lines and sidings foretell the commercial future of the port as surely as the smoke across the desert announces the belated Khartoum mail.

The syren of the mail-boat Prince Abbas, says J. Engledew in The World's Work," gives tongue as though impatient of delay, and the mail train gives an answering call as she rumbles across the cantilever bridge to her appointed station on the quay. The passengers and mails are soon transferred, and the skipper gives more tunes upon his syren, and and starts full speed for Suez, on his weekly voyage of 700 miles.

Along the quay two steamers are unloading machinery and rails and bricks, cement, and lumber, whilst the coal transporting plant at the northern entrance to the harbor relieves the collier Aberdeen of 500 tons of Welsh steam coal per hour.

And through it all old Sheikh Barghut sleeps on, the relic of a day long past. His spirit maybe sees and understands; but whatever else we leave to supposition, the history of the magnificent work that is being accomplished in a country devoid of the bare essentials for human existence, and decimated by the Mahdi's devastating hordes, will be a glorious contribution to the annals of British achievement.

WHAT PARENTS SHOULD HEED.

Laws Governing Children's Behavior a Timely Subject.

The future of a country lies in the hands of its children. Education of children doubtless leads to an uplifted standard of knowledge and strong children make strong men and women; but conceited children are always and everywhere something to be avoided. There is still a table of the laws governing children's behavior which all parents and all children would do well to heed.

Children's manners begin in the cradle. A baby begins to understand long before it begins to talk. It notices the fact that its mother is its adoring slave before ever it has a tooth or a spear of hair to call its own.

So, if you would have your child well-mannered, begin to teach it when it is still a baby. Teach it to stand its baby troubles uncomplainingly and so lay the foundation of the qualities that will make people call it a thoroughbred in later life. Teach it to be sunshiny and so to start the biggest asset of good manners, a gracious and smiling presence.

As soon as the baby leaves the small baby state the inculcation of its manners must go on with even greater care than before.

The minute it begins to eat with its own small hands, the first lesson in table manners must begin. There is little excuse for the disgusting table manners of some children. They are due, really, to the fact that the mother or other caretaker finds it less trouble to let the child search aimlessly for its small mouth than to insist that it locate it daintily, surely and without experiment.

A very small child can be taught to eat nicely. Teach it that spotted bibs are beneath contempt. Patiently show it how to hold its spoon and cup and help it to eat slowly. Once the child has learned to eat daintily, the slovenly ways of untrained children when they are eating will be as distasteful to it as you would find in a grown person.

Children ape the manners of their elders. For this reason the greatest care should be used in the choosing of nursemaids, governesses or anyone else who comes in constant contact with the child. Many well-known men have talked, when excited, to their dying day in the brogue or burr of their childhood nurses.

The imitative method is the easiest whereby a child may acquire its manners. The small boy who adores his gallant father seldom forgets to take off his hat and stand in the presence of women. The small girl who looks up to her mother with affection is the pattern of loving courtesy to her father. Children often affect the graces of their elders in a most laughable way. But don't laugh at them. They will outgrow this priggishness. It is only a phrase of the imitative acquisition of manners.

It is the vogue of the day for small girls, up to the age of 10 or 12, to curtsy when they meet their elders. After that they, like small boys, stand and shake hands. It is also proper for children to be quiet and unobtrusive when they are in the company of grown-ups.

Some of the set rules of children's manners, like these, they cannot learn by imitation. But if they are courteous, thoughtful and happy they will take an interest in acquiring these little superficial manners that will make their acquisition easy.

Persian Burials.

In Persia two sticks a foot long are placed in the coffin to prop up the arms of the corpse when it rises from the grave and is questioned by the angel Gabriel. After the risen body has satisfied the angel that it is the body of a true Mussulman it will receive strength to stand alone. A glance from a dog is necessary to drive away the spirit of defilement, and for this purpose a street cur is brought into the room of death and its eyes led to the corpse by a tempting bit of bread laid on the still breast.—Pall Mall Gazette.

BLACKING MOUSTACHE

The hairy sailor compelled to shave suffered only rather more than the beardless soldier compelled to acquire a moustache. Marbot tells how, when he joined the 1st Hussars at Nice his smooth face was brought to conformity with the rest of the regiment. Sergeant Pertelay "took a pot of blacking and with his thumb made two enormous hooks, covering my upper lip and reaching almost to my eyes. At that time the shakoes had no peak, so it happened that during reviews or when I was doing vedette duty, and was bound to remain perfectly motionless, the scorching rays of the Italian sun pouring down on to my face used to suck up the liquid part of the blacking with which my moustache had been made, and the blacking, as it dried, drew my skin in a most unpleasant way."

THE NEW COMMISSIONER'S THANKS TO THE ELECTORS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I would be insensible of my obligations if I did not express to you my sincere thanks for electing me to the position of City Water Commissioner by so substantial a majority.

In this testimony of my appreciation of your support I desire to include the ladies, business and professional men, the employed and unemployed, and particularly the valuable aid I received from so large a number of voluntary hard workers, who gave of their time and energy to accomplish my election.

To all of these, and not to myself, do I attribute my election—for I know I am a poor canvasser, while my opponent is a past-master at the art.

It is true that my majority is a very substantial one, but many of my friends claim that I should have been elected by two to one. Perhaps this may be true, considering the misrepresentations made from one end of the city to the other. I have been astonished at the cunning and ingenious stories that have been circulated during the campaign, and it was laughable at times to hear the bland promises that had been made by my opponent of what he would do if only he was elected.

In the North Ward I was represented as a bigotted Roman Catholic; in the South Ward, as a rabid Orangeman; in the West Ward as a dangerous coal dealer; and in the East Ward as a man too much engrossed in my own business to find time to attend to the City's.

Considering the natural and intended effect of these unfounded stories, I feel that the result is an additional flattering proof of the public confidence, for which I again make hearty acknowledgments, assuring the ratepayers that it will be my aim to serve them faithfully, and to prove to them that their confidence in me has not been misplaced.

Yours gratefully,
ROBERT HICKS.
Peterborough, Jan. 6th, 1914.

MR. F. H. DOBBIN

To the Electors of Centre Ward.
Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to thank the many ratepayers who supported my candidature and to assure them that I appreciate very much the kind interest shown during the contest.

The result is reached by a close vote which is a credit to all the candidates in the Ward.

With renewed thanks,
Respectfully,
FRANK H. DOBBIN.

ALD. ANDERSON

To the Electors of East Ward.
Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to return my sincere thanks to all those who without solicitation, gave me their support at the polls, which resulted in my re-election to council.

I will in the future, as I have in the past, use my best efforts to advance the interests of the East Ward and the city in general.

Thanking you again, I am,
Yours faithfully,
J. C. ANDERSON.

MAYOR BULLER

To the Electors of Peterboro City.
Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Permit me to thank you heartily for the substantial majority with which you endorsed my candidature for Mayor of this city at the polls yesterday, coupled with the assurance that my best efforts in the interests of the community as a whole are at your service during nineteen hundred and fourteen.

To my working supporters also, my warmest thanks are due for the loyal manner in which they rallied around The People's Candidate during the mayoralty campaign, to whose hard work in my behalf I am indebted in no small measure for my election.

Believe me, I shall endeavor to serve you faithfully and well in the position of Chief Magistrate of Peterboro, and strain every nerve to justify the confidence placed in me.

Yours faithfully,
WM. BULLER,

MR. J. J. HARTLEY.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to extend my most hearty thanks to the ratepayers of the city both ladies and gentlemen, for the handsome support they gave me yesterday in the Mayoralty Contest. I feel that considering the strong opposition I had against me, I made a good showing, and have no reason to be ashamed. I wish particularly to thank the working men and the members of the Trades and Labor Council for their support.

Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous year.

Yours very truly,
J. J. HARTLEY.

HYDRO-JOHNSON.

To the Electors of North Ward.
Ladies and Gentlemen, —

Permit me to tender you my warmest appreciation of your loyal support in yesterday's Aldermanic contect, the result of which is most gratifying to me, not only from a personal standpoint, but in that the North Ward appreciate our Hydro-Electric Policy, the chairmanship of which committee I was honored with last year.

I also thank my supporters who worked so hard and faithfully in my interests during the campaign.

With assurance that I shall do my utmost during the coming two years to serve you faithfully, and with best wishes for your happiness and prosperity, believe me,

Faithfully yours,
WM. J. JOHNSTON.

ALD. DUFFUS.

To the Electors of the West Ward.
Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to convey to each and everyone my very sincere thanks for the marked expression of confidence you have shown me by electing me again to the honorable position of Alderman, by the handsome majority of 352.

I am at your service and I will be only too happy at any time to do all that lies in my power to carry out your wishes, consistent with the best interests of the city, and to receive from you any requests or suggestions pertaining to civic matters.

Again I thank you and those who in any way assisted my candidature, and my earnest wish to ALL citizens is that Health and Prosperity and a bounteous share of good things be theirs in the years that are to be.

Yours faithfully,
JOS. J. DUFFUS.

Mr. Gillespie to the Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I wish to thank all the ratepayers who supported me yesterday for the position of Mayor. I accept cheerfully the voice of the people, and I wish Alderman Buller and the Council of 1914 a prosperous year.

When Mr. Hartley entered the field it was evident to all what the result would be. The object intended has been accomplished.

The campaign has been free from any personal feeling between myself and the other candidates, and I trust our former friendship will continue in the future, and we will all unite in working for the interest of our growing city.

Believing:

"There's victory yonder awaiting the chap
Who greets with a laugh every drowning mishap;
Who loses the game with a glint in his eye;
Who fights as he loses and dies full of try."

With best wishes for one and all,
I remain,
Yours truly,

G. A. GILLESPIE

To the Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I wish to express my gratitude to the electors for the very large vote polled in my favor and for their expression of confidence in my candidature and policy.

Yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

BE WAS KILLED AND WOMAN TOOK POISON

ing House at Toronto is e Scene of a Terrible Tragedy

RONTO, Jan. 6. — Thought to been suffering from a fit of idal mania, Mrs. Minnie Koni- 32, who with her husband and occupy rooms at 58 Beverley slew the infant child of Mr. rs. Alec. McFaul, the owners of ouse, by giving it carbolic acid. g the dying child down the ay, the demented woman swal- a quantity of the poison, from she herself died in the General tal at 3.20 yesterday afternoon. only person present at the of the tragedy was seven-year- ohnny White, a cousin of the hild, and his story is accepted police as authentic. According him the mother had left him rge of the baby while she went bank. The Konikofe and Mc- families were very intimate, quently he did not think it e that Mrs. Konikofe should en- e room and pick up the sleep- hild from its carriage. After ng the infant for a while, ac- g to the lad's story, she carried the bathroom, forbidding the follow. She locked the door, hortly afterwards the boy says rd a gasp.

IONTO, Jan. 6.—At 58 Bever- treet, a house where several es lived, many of them of Jew- rsuasion, something terrible ned this morning.

mouths old Ruby, daughter and Mrs. Alex. McFaul, who ed rooms at the rear of the upstairs, was found lying on all floor, just outside the bath- door, by her little cousin, y White. He alarmed the house old what had happened, and went upstairs and then they Mrs. Kohnicoff lying on the beside her bed unconscious, a partly emptied bottle of car- acid beside her. The whole smelled of the acid, and it was to see what had happened to woman.

Baby Was Dead

baby was carried downstairs aid on the kitchen table. Some me in the house tried all they to revive her. In the mean- four doctors were telephoned nd it was over an hour before rst arrived. In fact, Detective ce and Montgomery were on with two policemen before any al man arrived.

e baby was pronounced dead at and then the doctor's efforts turned to the woman upstairs. brother was holding her in a upright position and she was hing hard. She was given first and then sent to the General ital in the police ambulance.

What Little Boy Says

wnstairs in the kitchen there a heartrending scene. Little ny White, a cousin of the dead had been left in charge while McFaul went out for a few tes. He was crying while being tioned.

he baby was in the baby car- and I was minding it," he said. Kohnicoff came along from room and took the baby out of arriage and went into the bath- She locked the door and af- ying there some time came out, threw the baby on the floor," he little chap couldn't tell any He didn't know why he hadn't the others in the house when woman took the baby out of the iage.

Mother Was Heartbroken

hen Mrs. McFaul came in she dered what all the trouble was ut in the house. She heard some- g said about the baby.

What's the matter with my y?"

hose around the table moved y a little, and the woman, giving espairing cry, rushed to the table for a minute could say nothing. n she burst into tears.

'Oh, my God, what have they done my little Ruby? Who did it? atever did that woman kill Ruby ? Oh, my Ruby."

Some of those took the woman ay to try and quiet her a little. t then in came Alex. McFaul, the husband, who had been fetched from his work.

It was a sad sight to see him put his arm around his wife and the two of them go to the kitchen table and see the quiet little form just as the doctors moved away and gave no hopes of being able to resuscitate it. The two of them wept over the child, and the exclamations of the mother were almost unbearable to listen to.

Was Child Poisoned?

What caused the child's death the doctors could not say. It will have to wait till a post-mortem examination is made and an inquest held. It is thought the woman may have given it some poison while she had it in the bathroom, but the house smelled so strong of carbolic acid that nobody could say if the child had been given any. It may have been the force with which she was thrown on the floor that killed her.

Had Acted Strangely

The people living in the house say that Mrs. Kohnicoff had been acting very strangely of late and had complained of feeling unwell. Whether she did this in a fit of insanity, is not known.

"We have never had any words with the woman at all," said Mrs. McFaul. "We may just have pased the time of day with her, but that is all. There was no earthly reason why she should have done this to our baby."

Mrs. Kochnicoff is about 35 years old and married. Her husband works in a departmental store, and she has a little girl about five years of age. At 1 o'clock today she was reported to be in a very low condition and chances of her recovery are very slight.

Away Short Time Only

"I was only away a short time from the house," said Mrs. McFaul. "I had to go to the bank to get some money and then I went and ordered some things for our dinner and hurried right home. I left the baby in care of little Johnny and he has always looked after the baby all right at any other time."

"What made you let that woman take the child?" she said, turning to the little boy, but he could say nothing.

OSKIGMONGE

Oskigmonge, Jan. 6.—Whatever else changes, the customs of the Chemong people associated with the keeping of the New Year festive, remains. Again the day was observed in the usual manner. A watch-night service was held, conducted by Kezhegabetung, goodly numbers of the people attending. Precisely at twelve o'clock the church-bell rang announcing the arrival of the year 1914. At the closing of the service the congregation formed a circle. During the day much time was spent on the ice by the young people as the ice is in a splendid condition for skating. In the afternoon a hockey match was played between the juniors and seniors, the game resulting in favor of the juniors. At the closing of the match both sevens lined up for a race and only two finished, Dave Taylor first, and John Tobico second. Dave also won the jumping contest. At night a free supper was given in the hall by the boys in which everybody participated, after which a free concert was also given, as follows:—

Opening selection—By the children.

Address by Zack Knott.
Violin selection—John Tobico.
Chairman's address.
Song—The children.
Address—George McCue.
Song—Miss Clara Coppway.
Address—Samson Fawn.
Address—Alfred McCue.
Song—The School Boys.
Address—William Knott.
Song—Chief Whetung.
Song—Wilfred Jacobs.
Violin selection—Rob Taylor
Recitation—Miss Mildred Taylor.
Instrumental music — Lovenia Whetung.

Mr. George Coppway occupied the chair in a most efficient manner.

Miss Mary Hanshaw, of Peterborough, is visiting friends here and also participated in all the events of the day at Chemong.

The C.A.C. will have their annual carnival on the 10th of January.

While hunting for rabbits Mr. George Johnson came across a big bear and put its life out of existence.

Russell Taylor is minus of three front teeth and a bad cut on the leg, the result he received from a flying puck.

MR. HEAD'S WINNERS.

Through an error in last night's issue, Mr. Head was given credit of winning the W. H. Bennett shield, valued at $85.00, in the Orillia Poultry Show. It should have read, valued at $5.00.

Mr. Head also won second, an exhibition of barred plymouth rocks.

Commence the Year Right

Headache, eyestrain, or any trouble with your eyes or glasses, may cause you many uncomfortable and painful days, or make impossible for doing perfect work with your studies or your business.

IF YOU MUST WEAR GLASSES

Why not begin the year right? A little precaution and care now may be of untold value for each day, and even for years to come. Our Parlors are arranged especially for eye examination and we devote our entire time and study to the scientific examination of the eye and the furnishing of glasses. All our lenses are ground from "PEBLO" quality glass, right on the premises, and all work positively guaranteed.

CIVIC ELECTIONS HELD THROUGHOUT ONTARIO

Many New Names Are Found Among the Men Elected to Posts of Chief Executive in Cities, Towns, Villages and Townships

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—Elections in Ontario municipalities passed off quietly yesterday and although there were several close contests, no untoward incidents were reported.

Bylaws of wide range and purpose were voted on, and in nearly every case the voters showed progressiveness and faith in their home towns by carrying the bylaws.

Figures received up to an early hour this morning show that the hydro-electric enabling and purchasing bylaws were carried in every city where a vote was taken. Complete returns are not yet to hand, but large majorities are reported from Elora, Strathroy, Kemptville, Tilbury, Chesley and Hanover. Sandwich is the only town where the hydro bylaw was defeated, the vote being 51 to 44.

The Town of Preston, by a large majority, decided to grant a 25 years' franchise to the Galt, Hespeler and Preston Street Railway, while the city of Guelph, by an overwhelming majority, voted money for extensions to the municipally owned street railway system. It was decided also in Guelph to publish the assessment roll each year, so that every man can see what his neighbor pays in taxes.

Cornwall carried a bylaw to give a bonus of $5,000 to the Glengarry and Stormont Railway. Fixed assessment bylaws were carried in three or four places.

Guelph Re-elects Sam Carter.

GUELPH, Jan. 6.—Mayor Samuel Carter was re-elected as chief magistrate of Guelph yesterday by the handsome majority of 776 over his opponent, Ald. J. E. Carter, after one of the hottest campaigns ever seen here. Eight of last year's city councillors were re-elected as follows: Ald. Newstead, Hannigan, Penfold, Occomore, Brydon, Barlow, Doughty and Steele, the new ones being ex-Ald. Mahoney and Ryan and Charles Burgess.

C. J. Eisele was elected to the sewerage and public works commission, defeating Chairman J. Kennedy. M. F. Gray was returned as member of the light and heat commission, defeating D. E. Rudd.

Results in Stratford.

STRATFORD, Jan. 6.—J. Stevenson was yesterday elected mayor of Stratford for 1914, polling 1,365 votes to C. Greenwood's 1,022.

The waterworks bylaw was passed by a majority of 755.

In Chatham.

CHATHAM, Jan. 6. — Mayor, McCorvie; aldermen, Wanless, Houston, McLachlan, Foreman, Cowen, Brisco, Draper, Holmes, Fitzsimmons; utilities commission, Brackin and Smith.

Shaw in Kingston.

KINGSTON, Jan. 6.—Ald. Abraham Shaw was elected mayor, defeating Ald. J. W. Litton by a majority of 477. Ald. Litton will still be a member of the council as he did not resign as alderman and has a year yet to serve on his term. Members elected to the utilities commission are: T. J. Rigney, R. H. Toye, Dr. A. E. Ross, J. H. Birkett. The aldermen elected are H. C. Nickle (accl.), R. Kent (accl.), W. J. Fair (accl.), Dr. A. W. Richardson (accl.), J. Couper (accl.), J. S. R. McCann and H. W. Newman. Dr. F. Waugh and John [illegible] were elected school trustees.

Dores in Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 6.—O. E. Dores was elected mayor by a majority of 144 over Robert P. Slater yesterday. Both are former mayors. Richard F. Carter, also a former mayor, was elected water commissioner by a majority of 252.

These aldermen were elected: Harry Stevens, C. M. Clendenning, Robt. Gay, Wm. Ward, Geo. W. Clarke, Eugene Menzie, Wm. Cole, Saml. Lovett, W. P. Dixon.

The bylaw to appropriate $3,000 for the erection of two police stations carried by a majority of 464. The bylaw to appropriate $5,000 for sewer extension carried by a majority of 208.

Results in Woodstock.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Jan. 6.—Ald. W. D. Hobson won the mayoralty over Ald. Clifford Kemp yesterday by 62 majority. The aldermen elected were: M. Paul, R. D. Montgomery, W. S. West, Geo. King, H. E. Douglas, W. Roddick, C. Siple, J. E. Thompson, J. Mitchell. There were twelve aspirants for the nine positions. A bylaw granting by way of a loan 20 per cent. to the Mitchell Crusher Co. was carried by a large majority.

THE SCHOOL CADETS

The organization of the School Cadet movement is still being actively carried on under the direction of Col. Gwynne of the Militia Department.

The total number now enrolled is about 38,000. During the year ending March 31st, last the numbers increased from 20,240 to 30,300, in spite of the disbanding of 29 dormant companies containing 980 cadets.

The Loyal Canada flag and the Governor-General's challenge shield were won last year by the Calgary Cadets.

Plant Closes Down.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—After operating in an extensive way since 1905 and giving employment to as many as 300 employes at different intervals, and never less than about 150, the International Marine Signal Co. of Ottawa, closed down its plant yesterday, and if reports are correct, it will not reopen for business here.

Just before Christmas all the men who were employed by the company were laid off and told to return to work yesterday morning. They did so and were surprised to learn from the manager that the works have been closed indefinitely.

Governor Ferris In Houghton.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Jan. 6.—Governor Ferris of Michigan took hold of the strike situation in the copper country last night. With his coming a practical truce went into effect.

The governor's announcement that he hoped to find some method of settling the struggle between the copper mine owners and the Western Federation of Miners failed, however, to influence the attitude of defiance towards each other which the opposing interests have held for five months.

Black stockings should be rinsed in blue water to make them a good color.

MR. C. WOOD HAS THE PETITION

The petition referred to in yesterday's paper, re changes in the game laws for the protection of our wild ducks, song birds, etc., is in the hands of Mr. C. Wood, sec. of the Peterboro Gun Club, Who will be pleased to receive the signatures of all persons interested.

ANNUAL SUPPER.

The members of St. John's Men's Bible Class will hold their annual supper in the schoolroom on Wednesday at 7 p.m. and not as stated in last night's notices.

Week of Prayer

The second meeting of week of prayer service will be held in St. James Methodist Church, this evening. An address will be given by Rev. R. S. Peever, of George St., Methodist Church. All are welcome.

OLD SCROOGE IN THE FLESH; TERRISS' GREAT PRODUCTION

Realistic Presentation of Dickens' Christmas Carol at the Opera House Last Evening

Terriss Compared With Irving — The Actor Enjoys the Canadian Winter and Likes the People—Promises to Return in Two Weeks

Old Scrooge came to life last night at the Opera House. A great many lovers of Dickens' Christmas Carol regard that thrilling and beautifully moral story as a piece of fiction. But that is because they have not seen Mr. Tom Terriss as old Scrooge. What Dickens painted in words on the printed page, Mr. Terriss presents in actuality before our eyes. To see that miserable old grasping misantrophe undergo such a marvelous transformation, a sort of metamorphosis, before our very eyes in flesh and blood; this was the miracle that was wrought by the talented English actor last evening at the Opera House.

Those acquainted with the stars of the English stage, will recognize in Mr. Tom Terriss the son of the famous William Terriss who came to such an untimely and tragic end many years ago in London. Tom Terriss is the only son of that great actor and seems not only to have inherited his father's house in London but also a good share of his father's genius.

Mr. Terriss' plays are all arranged by himself. His abridgment and arrangement of The Carol is both comprehensive and effective. Nothing of the spirit of the story is lost, if anything, both the action and moral of the story are intensified.

Those who have seen Irving in "The Bells" would be vividly reminded of that strange play last evening. Indeed Mr. Terriss has not only a close facial resemblance to the late Sir Henry Irving, when he is made up as Scrooge, but he possesses a similar intense application in his acting and his ennunciation is very similar. He loses himself in his part. In the "dream" scene one was forcefully reminded of that late "Prince of Actors," and those who have not had the privilege of seeing Irving in "The Bells" might in a large measure, make up for their loss by seeing Mr. Terriss as Scrooge.

The company as a whole, is an excellent one. Bob Cratchit was done with fine ingenuousness by Mr. Ed. Beecher; and all the other characters were the natural denizens of old Dickens' London.

The Cricket on the Hearth was also presented. While of a different nature, it was worth the evening in itself. Mr. Terriss as old Caleb Plummer, was not so prominent or strenuous a part, and the sketch gave an opportunity to other members of the company to display their talent. Mr. Frederick Annerly is to be congratulated upon his representation of John Perrybingle, along with Miss Viola Bevans as Dot. Miss Mary Ralph, who played the part of Tilly, was in her way, second only to Mr. Terriss himself, and was a general favorite. Miss Eileen Terrence played the part of Bertha, the blind daughter, very effectively.

At the close of the Christmas Carol the curtain rose several times in response to the repeated applause of the audience. Mr. Terriss responded with a gracious speech, in which he thanked the audience and said he hoped his presentation of Dickens' character would inspire them with that spirit of good will and charity which prompted the great novelist in writing the story.

These versions of Dickens' stories have been adopted and condensed, solely by Mr. Terriss. He told a representative of The Review that he was a "producer" before he went in for acting; having himself written a number of plays and adaptions.

Asked as to his tour of Canada, he spoke highly of the Canadian people. He said he had never had a better time in his life than he had in Ottawa, where he played before the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and was given a reception.

He goes from Peterboro to Guelph and afterwards plays in Hamilton a whole week. He is returning to Peterboro by special request in a fortnight's time, so that those who missed the opportunity of seeing him last night, will have another chance two weeks hence, and if they want to see good, clean and inspiring acting, they should be sure and see Mr. Terriss before he returns to England.

Mr. Terriss has been asked to repeat the Christmas Carol on his next visit, and be will also produce "A Tale of Two Cities," on the same evening. The latter is recognized as one of the most brilliant renderings of Dickens' great drama and the staging is said to be particularly fine.

Some people were anxiously enquiring last evening if Mr. Terriss was really himself, an old man; he took the old man's part so well. If they had seen him remove the pallor and the wrinkles in his dressing room after the performance and conversed with him, as The Review man did, they had beheld a young man of somewhere near thirty, alert and cheerful.

Mr. Terriss, who married an American lady, has a home in New York, as well as in London. He told the Review that his wife, whom he had left in New York, could always trust him to travel alone when he played Scrooge, or old men's parts, for then no ladies would fall in love with him. But when he played Sydney Carton she could not trust him, so she generally followed him on these occasions.

Mr. Terriss thinks the Canadian winter is the finest thing that ever happened, and wanted to know what was this game called hockey. He says the people here seem to be as mad on hockey as they are on football in England.

MINISTERS PROTEST

Against Interference by the Roman Catholic Priests

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—At a meeting of the Ottawa General Ministerial Association the following resolution was read by Rev. G. R. Macfaul, pastor of the French Baptist Church, and carried:—

"Whereas, it has been brought to our notice by some of the pastors of our Ministerial Association that during the past year couples who have been legally married by them, according to laws of this province, have been disturbed and greatly annoyed by visits from Roman Catholic priests, who have attempted to make them believe that they were not validly married.

"Resolved, that as an association we do vigorously protest against such unjust interference on the part of the Roman Catholic priesthood, and, whereas, in the Province of Quebec there is still uncertainty owing to the unlawful claims in some quarters, Protestant ministers cannot marry couples of certain religious beliefs;

"Resolved, that we urge upon all true citizens of Canada to continue the agitation upon the marriage question until the law is clearly defined, and the Roman Catholic clergy are given to understand distinctly that they have no special favors, but are on an equal footing with the Protestant clergy, and that the State is supreme in this matter."

The president of the association, Rev. W. I. McIlroy, was in the chair.

MOVING PICTURES ONE CENTURY AGO

Idea Took Practical Shape in Year of 1812.

From Harper's Weekly.

The "movies" (perhaps we should omit the quotation marks, the word is working into the language so fast) are considered a strictly twentieth-century development. Here is an amusement advertisement which appeared in the public prints in England exactly 101 years ago.

"At the Duke of Marlborough's Head in Fleet street, is now to be seen a new invented machine, composed of five curious pictures, with moving figures, representing the history of the heathen gods, which move as artificially as if living; the like not seen before in Europe. The whole contains nearly a hundred figures, besides ships, beasts, fish, fowl and other embellishments, some near a foot in height; all which have their respective and peculiar motions, their very heads, legs, and arms, hands and fingers, artifically moving to what they perform, and setting one foot before another like living creatures, in such a manner that nothing but nature can excel it. It will continue to be seen every day from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

This will probably hold you for a while, although it must be admitted that the moving pictures of 1812 were different in mechanism and extent from those which play so large a part in the life of 1913.

Jury Return a Verdict of $80 and the Costs

When the court resumed last night Mr. Dunlop continued his evidence, positively denying that he gave Cruikshanks any warrant. He told him the horse was about 15 or 16 years old, but did not know the exact age. He had it about two years and was considered as an average horse. Mr. Dunlop's son also gave evidence to the effect that if the horse was properly cared for it should have lived.

Mr. Stillman, another farmer of Smith, gave evidence concerning the small amount of knowledge the defendant possessed re the care of horses. He sold Cruikshanks a horse after the horse in question died, and after he had it about two months Mr. Stillman went and took it back as he was not paid for it. The horse was in far worse shape when he took it than it was when he sold it. He was of the opinion that Cruikshanks knew nothing whatever about keeping horses in good condition.

He was the last witness.

After being out 35 minutes the jury returned and foreman Mr. Geo. Hetherington announced the verdict that Cruikshanks must pay the $80 and costs of the court.

From Monday's Daily

The action heard this afternoon in which Darcy Dunlop sought to obtain payment on a note for $80 from James Cruikshanks given in payment for a horse. Because the horse died Cruikshanks refused to pay the note, hence the action.

Mr. Cruikshanks in giving evidence, stated that he started to farm last February and shortly afterwards purchased a horse from Mr. Dunlop. He drew about 20 loads of wood to town with this horse, during the three weeks following the purchase and then he left the animal in the stable for three weeks.

One morning he came out to the stable and the horse was lying down and could not get up. After much work he got it to its feet but the next morning it was dead.

He had fed the horse about a gallon of oats every day for the six weeks he had it.

When questioned by Mr. Ruddy he was positive that he had taken good care of it. The horse had been viewed by a Mr. Stillman, from whom he afterwards purchased a horse and had to return it because he couldn't pay for it, but Mr. Stillman according to his (Cruikshanks') memory, never remarked that the horse was being improperly handled.

Mr. Roseborough of Smith was next called, and he gave evidence to the effect that be caught up to Cruikshanks one day, coming from town, last February, and Cruikshanks was driving the horse in question. In answer to a query from Mr. O'Connell as to what he valued the horse, he stated "nothing." He said the horse was no good and when asked by Mr. Ruddy what was the proper thing to do with a horse of that kind, he answered "Shoot him!"

Mr. C. Bryce, another gentleman, who saw the horse when he was in the possession of Mr. Cruikshanks, also testified of his very poor condition. The horse in his opinion was clearly worn out by age.

Mr. John Darling, another farmer from that vicinity, saw the horse in question several times and he stated that he saw him one afternoon trying to draw a load of wood over a pavement sidewalk, to enter the yard of one of the houses in this city, and the horse couldn't draw in comparison with the younger horse to which he was harnessed. The younger horse appeared to have more work than did the old horse, because of the manner in which the horse was hitched.

Mr. Wheeler, another resident of Smith, corroborated the evidence of the other witnesses. Mr. Wheeler's son also gave evidence along these lines.

Darcy Dunlop was the next called. He stated that he met Cruikshanks on Chamberlain Street, and made an appointment to meet him the next day at Dunlop's home in Smith.

At this point of evidence the case was adjourned to allow Mr. O'Connell to vote.

THE GIRL OF EAGLE RANCH

"The Girl of Eagle Ranch" is the attraction for Jan. 10th, matinee and night, at the Grand Opera House, and this thrilling production equipped with special scenic and electric effects, should prove attractive to the theatregoers, who like a western drama built up by thrilling situations and unfolding a charming love story. Free from noise and impossible characters the play shows the men and women of the great west in their loyalty to each other. It is a flesh and blood drama, clean, wholesome and interesting interspersed with attractive and clever specialties. Popular prices. Seats on sale at box office.

PICTURES FOR THE DOGS.

A Cinematograph Show Only Interested the Animals in Spots.

A moving picture show was recently given in London to determine what effect a cinematograph picture had on the intelligence of animals. A series of motion pictures was reeled off in a darkened room before an audience of prize dogs. First some pictures of a dog show were run through. The dogs walked up and had a look at it and turned away, obviously bored and uninterested. Evidently the subject was too familiar.

They woke up, however, when an elephant came splashing into a pool of water and appeared to be walking into the room. A massive bulldog made a dash for the screen. With his head up and ears pricked, he got ready to attack, and the whole audience barked and bayed in blood curdling discord. Pictures of birds also irritated them, but when other animals were shown they quickly recognized that they were not looking at the real thing and in a few seconds quieted down completely.

The general result of the experiment seemed to be that dogs do not understand still pictures, but that they appreciate motion, though it very largely depends upon the nature of the thing moving.—Pearson's Weekly.

SALT A-PLENTY IN PERU.

A Natural Factory That Is Operated on an Automatic Plan.

About a hundred miles north of Lima, near the town of Huacho, is one of the great curiosities of nature, a salt factory on an automatic plan.

When the tide comes in it fills a lot of shallow basins, and the water is prevented from flowing back into the sea by closing the gates. The atmosphere is so dry that the water evaporates rapidly and leaves a sediment of salt in an almost pure state, which is scraped up, packed into sacks and shipped to market.

Within the coast a little farther the percolation of sea water through the porous rocks into pits and hollows has caused immense deposits of salt to accumulate. The salt is taken out in blocks six or eight inches square and sold in that form. As soon as the salt is excavated the water comes in again and in a year or two has solidified and is ready for the market.

Wells driven into the sand disclose strongly impregnated water at a depth of twenty-five feet, which seems to be a great deal heavier than the sea water, and is drawn off into vats for evaporation.

Did She Keep Her Temper?

Mr. Biles is a very hasty tempered man, but he is also one who keeps his promises to the very letter. Therefore Mrs. B. extracted from him a promise always to count twenty before he speaks if he feels rage coming upon him. Last Sunday he rushed into the back drawing room spluttering with fury and red in the face. Mrs. Biles rose and laid a gentle hand on his stammering lips.

"M-Mary, I—I—I"—

"Hush, dear," said the sweet woman. "Count twenty and conquer yourself, and I shall be more proud of you than if you had conquered the world."

"Eighteen, nineteen, twenty"—

"Now tell me, dear."

Too Much Sex In Literature.

Literature is oversexed. If we were to believe the fictionists and the playwrights, sex is the one morbid, absorbing and exclusive topic of thought and conversation. It is a misrepresentation of fact. When God created man be made him to the likeness of God. Male and female, be created them. The revolt against the order of being and the blurring of natural and inevitable distinctions by a would be new species of women-men and men-women is surely a melancholy sign of decadence both intellectual and moral.—From the Universe.

Glasses and Good Vision

If the focusing mechanism of your eyes is not perfect, you cannot see well or have good vision, except by a big strain on the eyes, which causes all kinds of other complications and increased eye defects.

Glasses properly fitted supply the dificiencies of the focusing mechanism and thereby relieves the eye strain and its consequent evils. However, if the glasses are not properly fitted they increase rather than relieve the strain. Therefore you should be careful to go to a COMPETENT OPTICIAN for your glasses. MR. GUSTAV HAMEL

In spite of a gale blowing sixty miles an hour, two airmen looped the loop in England recently. Mr. Chanteloup and Mr. Gustav Hamel, at Hendon, accomplished the feats. Mr. Chanteloup daringly executed his loops from heights of 1,000 feet and 1,200 feet, and made a backward loop of 1,000 feet. He received a great ovation.

Mr. Hamel described three single loops within a minute of each other, and subsequently two more loops. He also flew upside down. He damaged his monoplane in landing, but was extricated uninjured.
